"Nearly all of the counties," said Mr .Burgess, "are now well-organized—some of them having set to work on their own initiative and are now going full speed ahead under their own steam. Fifteen counties completed organization during the week ending September 14. Every precinct has a committee with a chairman. In many counties, every church has a special committee at work. In one of the large counties of the state more than 60 churches have such committees.

"The fighting spirit of our people," continued Mr. Burgess, "is aroused to a high pitch. As the thoughtful men and women of North Carolina contemplate what the repeal of our prohibition laws would mean in our state, they are redoubling their efforts to carry the election November 7.

A Little Money Goes a Long Way

"It is astonishing," declared Mr. Burgess, "how so much has been accomplished with so little money. There is but one explanation: the people of North Carolina do not want the curse of the liquor traffic to come back, and they need only to be aroused to the voting point in order to prevent its return. We have no patronage to dispense and are making no levies; we have no way of raising campaign funds except through voluntary contributions from our own people.

"From an eastern county comes a contribution with a message like this: 'I am doing all I can to line up our people against this curse. Please use enclosed check as you see fit in order to keep legalized liquor out of North Carolina.'

"From the western part of the state comes a contribution from a good woman: 'I enclose a small sum to help your campaign against repeal. I feel the honor of the state is at stake.'

"From another comes this voluntary letter and contribution: 'When I commit a dollar to your hands, I know that it will go for what I intend it to, and I am enclosing my check for $25. It would give me joy if the Old North State would roll up a good majority for prohibition, whatever the other 47 may do. My prayers and contribution are with you.'

"The Junior Phalanx of Wake county hit upon the plan of having stamp showers in various localities, sending the postage stamps to state headquarters for use in mailing out letters and literature. This is a great help.

Nine Voters in One Family

"From many quarters come expressions of great satisfaction that the people at last have an opportunity to express themselves on this prohibition question separate and apart from all other issues. Many of our people hold positions by virtue of government or party appointment and are glad of an opportunity to vote their conscientious convictions in straight-out fashion.

"From another man holding a public office, this expression came: 'There are nine votes in my family. There were nine democratic votes cast by my family in the election last fall and there will be nine prohibition votes cast against repeal the 7th of November.'

Arranging to Reach Every Precinct

"A number of counties have already selected their candidates to be voted for November 7, and petitions are now being circulated in order to nominate them. In one county more than 2,000 names above the number of signers required have been placed upon the petitions and they were still signing the last I heard from them.

"The speakers' bureau has now on file around 200 men and women, laymen and preachers, who have offered to speak. Through the county organizations speaking engagements are now being arranged. Before election day, we hope, every community will have had the dry cause presented not once but several times by able speakers."

HOW TO GET SAVED

Realize your lost condition. The man in the ocean would not have grasped the life line if he had not believed he was drowning. "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." (Rom. 3:23.) "He that believeth not hath been judged already, because he hath not believed on the name of the only begotten Son of God." (John 3:18.)

Seek for salvation through Jesus, and Him only. He is the only lifeboat that is safe.

"As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth may in Him have eternal life." (John 3:14, 15.)

"And in none other is there salvation: for neither is there any other name under heaven, that is given among men, wherein we must be saved." (Acts 4:12.)

Repent of all sin. Genuine heart repentance for sin is absolutely essential for salvation.

"Except ye repent, ye shall all in like manner perish." (Luke 13:3.)

Real repentance always embraces all of the following things:

1. Conviction for sin. Thus God gives His Word and Spirit. Both are finger-boards which point with startling emphasis to the sinner's lost condition here and certain doom hereafter. Any sinner who will believe in His Word, and listen to His Spirit, will soon have more conviction than he will know what to do with.

2. Need of salvation. This always accompanies conviction.

3. Sorrow for sin. Real repentance always embraces grief for sin; grief for having broken God's law, neglected and rejected His Son, and grieved His Holy Spirit; sorrow for moments wasted, influence perverted and wrongs committed. All repentance which is destitute of this is spurious. It is only those who thus mourn whom God promises to comfort. "Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted." (Matt. 5:4.)

4. Forsaking of sin. Real repentance also embraces the actual forsaking of all sin, the absolute surrender of the heart to God, and the abandonment of the old deathboat of sin forever. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon." (Isa. 55:7.)

One single sin unforgiven will sink a soul beneath the billows of a burning hell, just as one serpent in the bosom would sting a man to death.

Repentance is a simple act. A little child can exercise it; hence all who refuse to repent are responsible for all the wreckage that follows.

5. Confession of sin. You would not expect your friend, whom you may have wronged, to forgive you unless you would make confession. Confession is one of the righteous conditions attached to the forgiveness of sins. "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy." (Prov. 28:13.) "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteouness." (1 John 1:9.)

6. Restitution. Genuine repentance always embraces restitution up to the ability. God never can pardon or go in partnership with persons who are guilty of wrongs that they will not righten. Where you have wronged people by word or act, socially or financially, you must see them or write them, make your confessions, and do all that lies in your power to rectify the past. Multitudes come to this point, and will go no further. They prefer the torture-racks of an eternal hell to confessions and possibly a penitentiary here on earth. God's Word is unanswerable: 'If the wicked restore the pledge, give again that he had robbed, walk in the statutes of life, without committing iniquity, he shall surely live, he shall not die." (Ezek. 33:15.)

7. Believing. While repentance is an absolute and essential condition of salvation, yet it does not purchase it. Repentance is the human act by which the soul leaves the deathboat of sin. Believing is the act by which it steps into the lifeboat of salvation. Real repentance does not save any one, but puts him in a condition to be saved. Christ only can save; but the soul is unable to appropriate His salvation until it has thoroughly repented. Then it is easy to believe.

Sinner, would He die on the cross to save you, and then, when you come in the very way He has appointed, cast you out? Never! Then come, trusting His promises, and He will fulfill them. Come, relying on Him as your Advocate with the Father, and He will secure your pardon. Come depending on Him, and Him only, as your Great Physician, and He will heal you of every spiritual disease. Accept Him as your great Lifeboat of salvation, and He will pardon all your sins, remove all your guilt, give you a name better than that of sons and daughters, and bear you triumphantly over the sea of life into the home haven of everlasting rest.

He warns you now; He invites you now. There is peril in procrastination. 'Not now," is Satan's bait in which there is a sharp hook, with which he has destroyed millions. O yield to God, and trust the blood this very moment. Now Sinai thunders, hell threatens, millions of the damned who deferred salvation bespeak your peril, heaven invites, angels beckon, the Cross pleads, the Spirit woos, and Jesus is waiting to receive you. Another day, another hour, another moment, may decide your destiny and seal your doom.

"The Spirit calls today,
List to His power;
O grieve Him not away,
'Tis mercy's hour."

BRIGHTENING BETTY'S CORNER

"Oh, dear! This is such a horrid place to live," sighed Betty, who had just come home from a visit to Aunt Harriet in the city. "Auntie said I would be happier if I did things for other people, as she does. But there are lots of poor people in the city, and you can carry them soup and nice things, and clothes, and they are so glad to get them, and you feel so nice when you are doing them good. But there's nobody here who needs to have any good done them. Everybody has plenty of food, and plenty to wear, and there's no chance to help them. If I only lived in the city I could do lots of good."

Betty sat down in the hammockk on the porch of her country home. The air was sweet with flower-scents, and the birds were chirping gentle little good-night songs. In the house, mother was busy getting supper, and the baby was beginning to fret for his. He was sleepy, and would like to have his supper and be put to bed, but mother had not time to attend to him just then.

Inside the parlor, in the dusk, little Dot was singing her doll to sleep with the hymn she had learned at Sunday school. The words floated out to Betty on the porch.

"Do not wait until some deed of greatness you may do,
Do not wait to shed your light afair;
To the many duties ever near you now be true,
Brighten the corner where you are."

Betty started. The little song seemed an answer to her thoughts.

Dot sang on, unconscious that she was bringing a message home to Betty's heart.

"Just above are clouded skies that you may help to clear,
Let not narrow self your way debar.
Though into one heart alone may fall your song of cheer,
Brighten the corner where you are."

Now at last Betty understood. There was no place in the world where one could not give a helping hand, and brighten a hard way for some one else. "The corner where you are." That meant home, where God had put you. You need not "wait to shed your light afar."

And just at that minute mother came into the parlor and turned on the light, making the dusky room bright and cheerful. It came to Betty that that was mother's way always, brightening corners for other people. Why could she not brighten things for mother a little?

"Can I help you, Mother?" she called. "Don't you want me to feed baby and put him to bed?"

"It would be such a help if you would, Betty," said Mother. He's tired and fretful, poor little fellow."

"I'll look after him," said Betty, tumbling out of the hammock.

When baby was put to bed she helped Tom with his lessons, and read a bedtime story to the other children, and at last went to bed herself, very thoughtfully. How many little things she had found to do to brighten the corner. There were other things besides food and clothes that people needed everywhere. A pleasant word, a bit of help, to brighten the day's cares. And that one could always give.

And after that the days were too short for all the things that Betty found to do in her corner.—Olive Plants.

TED AND HIS MOTHER

Little Ted had been engaged in that most delightful of occupations, making little mud pies. By and by he heard a shrill whistle, and soon saw the men coming down the street from the milll by which token Teddy knew it was noon, and papa would soon be home. So he scrampered into the kitchen with a great deal of his pastry adhering to his hands and face.

"Wash your face and hands now, Teddy," said mamma, placing basin and towel within easy reach of the short arms.

But water for making mud pies and water for bathing are distinct elements in the mind of a small boy. "I don't want to wash," whimpered Ted.

Mamma waited a few minutes, but as Teddy showed no intention of doing as he was bidden, she said quietly—

"You cannot come to the table as you are, little boy. If you do not wash you must go without your dinner."

On reflection, Teddy decided that to obey was better than to sacrififice his dinner, while Jimmy, who had looked affected by older brothers, grew thoughtful.

"Why is it, mamma," he said, "that you and pop can do just as you please about things, while we always have to do what you tell us? I don't think its fair."

From the mother's heart a swift prayer for wisdom winged its way bemofore she asked:

"Did Teddy have to wash?"

"He did," said Jimmy, "or—"

"Suffer the consequences," finished his mother. "You say that papa and I can do as we choose, which is true. But if we do wrong we have to bear the punishment, which is no less certain because it comes from God. Little children do not always know right from wrong, so in order to help them and make right easy we reward them for being good," stooping to kiss Ted's now shining face, "and punish them when they are naughty. My little boys," she said, concluding the homily, "may do as they choose just as long as they choose to do right."—Sunlight.

TURN ABOUT

Nellie Wren came running up the steps, slammed the door behind her with a bang, and darted up the stairs to her own little room. Ellen, some five years older than her sister, noticed Nellie's queer actions and followed to find the reason.

"Anybody would think you were angry, Nellie," said Sister Ellen, as she entered the bedroom of her younger sister.

"And they would think right," answered Nellie, "if they did. I am angry—I'm more than angry—I am mad clear through, I am."

"Come," said Sister Ellen, "tell me about it."

"Well," answered Nellie, coming close to her sister's chair, “I've been over calling on Dora Dean. Don't you know, she sat at the head of the dolls' table all the afternoon and never once let me pour the tea or measure the sugar or anything. I never saw such ill manners in all my life.”

Sister Ellen made no answer for a minute, but sat looking at her younger sister with a peculiar twinkle in her eyes.

“That is a queer way for any one to act,” she said, presently. “The idea of a hostess taking the best of everything! Dora should have remembered calling on you yesterday and patterned her manners after yours.”

“Patterned her manners after mine,” repeated Nellie, slowly. Somehow, saying this over seemed to suddenly bring a funny little feeling into Nellie's own heart, and she grinned sheepishly.

“I guess, sister,” said Nellie, thoughtfully, “that's about what Dora did. Since you mentioned that she should have remembered my manners of yesterday, the memory of what I did came back to me. You know we played store, and I insisted that I was the store-keeper all the time. Never once did I let Dora be anything except the customer. And when we had refreshments—well, I'm ashamed to admit it,” stammered Nellie, softly, “but I took the larger cake on the dish and left the smaller one for my company.”

‘Then maybe Dora was not so bad after all,” chimed in Ellen.

“No,” repliel Nellie, “I see now that she didn't treat me nearly so badly as I did her. Anyway,” laughed the little girl, “I guess turn about is fair play, and Dora and I are even on selfishness.”

“I think you are myself,” laughed Sister Ellen. “But don't you think you might try the other way just once? Try being courtous the next time Dora calls, and see if her manners don't improve when you call on her again.”

“I'll do it!”e xclaimed Nellie eagerly. “I'll do it—and, oh, sister,” continued the younger girl, “I'm going to begin right away, for Dora is coming over after dinner to study lessons with me.”

“Fine!” answered Ellen, “and I'm sure if you treat Dora politely when she comes to see you, that Dora will treat you likewise.”—Little Folks.

ANNABELLE DISCOVERS THE REASON

“Annabelle, I wish you wuoldn't use those slang phrases,” said Mrs. Redding, “I am sure you are thoughtlessly forming a habit that may some day be a hindrance to you.”

Annabelle was posing before the mirror, putting some stray locks under her hair net. She replied, “I'm pretty careful when I'm with highbrows. Don't you worry, mother dear. All the girls—” she broke off abruptly as she glanced at her wrist watch. Another slang phrase escaped her lips as she declared she would have to hurry for she was going to run over to Geneva Holden's for just a few moments.

Mrs. Redding followed her out on the side porch. “But, Annabelle,” she persisted, “that's no excuse. If all the girls—and I don't believe quite all do use those phrases—it is not a good argument. To say the least it shows a lack of proper home training and some of them are shocking.”

Annabelle made an attractive figure in her scarlet tam as she went down the walk. She crossed the Holdens' lawn and had almost reached the side veranda when she paused to fasten up a spray of pink dahlia. The outer door was open to admit the warm sun of a beautiful afternoon. Having arranged the drooping plant to her satisfaction, she was about to pass on when she overheard her name mentioned. She stood spellbound.

“Whom are you planning to invite to go with you?” Mrs. Holden was saying.

“I'd like to Ask Annabelle Redding. Aunt Elizabeth writes, ‘Bring a friend.” Annabelle enjoys hearing a good lecture. She is so literary, so neat and pretty, but—” and here the girl hesitated. “O mother, you know she uses so many slang phrases. Almost every sentence includes or begins with one. Aunt Elizabeth would be shocked. I just can't ask Annabele and yet—she is so lovable.”

The girl who had no intention of being an eavedropper walked back across the lawn taking good care to keep out of range of the windows on that side of the house. The pink in her cheeks had deepened to crimson. Her eyes were flashing. “All the girls talk that way. I'm no worse than the others,” she was saying to herself.

Annabelle recalled that she had read in the daily of a certain well-known speaker who would lecture in the city the following evening, and guessed rightly, too, that Geneva's aunt, who was well-to-do, had sent her two tickets.

The words, “Aunt Elizabeth would be shocked.” came again to Annabelle and she tingled all over with shame at the thought. Presently she called to her mind her mother's oft-repeated requests in regard to this particular habit. With an unusual determination she set about watching herself, and several times that evening a phrase which she was in the habit of using was cut in two or crowded back together.

The following morning an item in the weekly paper informed the public that Miss Dorothea Whitson had been the fortunate girl who secured the position of librarian for the ensuing year.

There had been at least a dozen applicants for this position in the town library. Annabelle had felt confident that when she applied she would be given first choice because she could boast of a year's college training. It was not until the latter part of that same week that she discovered the reason for her disappointment.

On her way home from town, being overtaken by a passing shower, she had waited in the interurban station. There a conversation in which two women were engaged attracted her attention.

“Yes, there was one young lady who had a better education than Dorothea,” the woman was saying, “for she had attended college one year. No doubt she was better qualified for the position. But when the young lady conferred with the directors in a personal interview regarding the work, she made an unfavorable impression. When Dorothea expressed her surprise that this young lady had not been engaged, one of the directors told her that they had to consider other things besides education. ‘A librarian,’ he said, ‘is ex-

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

LET'S LET THE MINNISES STARVE

It doesn't matter much that they are half way around the world, thousands of miles from the loved ones they have left behind. Strangers will take care of them if we don't. So it is no concern of ours whether they receive the support that was promised them or not. In fact, they don't need any money for food and clothing. "Wind pudding with air sauce" is cheap; and as for clothing, it grows on trees in India. And as for carrying on their work, walking is good. They can travel from village to village on foot; and if the work isn't done, it will just have to go undone. The Bible says we musn't muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn; that the laborer is worthy of his hire; that they that preach the Gospel are to live by the Gospel, but of course what the Bible has to say about it doesn't apply in this case; or at least it isn't meant for us. We are under no obligation. They went of their own free will and accord. We didn't make them go. And now that they are there, they will have to take the consequences, which seems to be starvation, since we are not sending them enough money to live on.

You who have read this far may think I am crazy. But it is written with my sober senses. It seems to me that the response we have had to the appeals we have made for money to help pay Mr. Minnis's salary shows pretty much that attitude on the part of our folks. We promised to do it. And we haven't kept our promise. Almost six months of our Branch year have passed and less than $200 has been reported for this sum. Put yourself in Mr. Minnis's place—12,000 miles from home, in a foreign land, a family to support with only $200, out of the $900 promised, and then "do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you."

Please send in your money for the Minnises as quickly as possible to Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Treasurer, High Point, N. C., stating that it is for Minnis's salary. It will be credited on the "World Service Budget" from your church.

Come on, let's make it a thousand dollars by Conference. MRS. C. W. BATES.

WOMAN'S RALLY OF FIRST DISTRICT

On September 29, 1933, beginning at 10 a. m., The Woman's Rally for the First District will be held at Spring Church, Spring Church Charge. All the pastors in First District are urged to give the Rally wide publicity and to attend thet possibly can. Especially do we urge those churches not having active missionary organizations to send a large delegation and get all the information and inspiration they can. The charges comprising First District are Creswell, Halifax, Littleton, Enfield, Whitakers, Greenville, and Spring Church. Here is hoping a goodly number from each charge will be present. The program committee is working hard to have a worth while program. We have been very fortunate in securing as speakers for the Rally Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, N. C., and Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, of Mebane, N. C. As you all know, Mrs. Hammer holds the office of President of the N. C. Branch, and she is also President of the General Branch of Woman's Work in the U. S. Mrs. Nicholson is the chairman of all the Districts of the Woman's Work in North Carolina. So you see what a rare treat is in store for all who attend the Rally. Rev. E. O. Peeler, of Enfield, has been asked to conduct the morning devotionals. Mrs. Wm. H. Neese is to extend the welcome and Mrs. E. H. Bellamy (I believe the initials are right) of Enfield, is to give the response. Each Auxiliary president is asked to be prepared to make a short talk, also the secretary and treasurer are being asked for a brief report of their work. We are expecting a number of special musical selections on the program. We are expecting each pastor in the District to be present and take some active part in the Rally.

Owing to the resignation of Mrs. J. H. Cutchin as chairman of First District. Mrs. Rupert M. Robinson, one of the assistant chairmen of the District, is acting as chairman.

Now please do not forget the date—September 29. Place, Spring Church, and the hour is 10 a. m. Everyone is asked to bring a light lunch; and a table will be prepared on the church lawn to place the eats where everyone can enjoy it picnic style. We are looking forward to your coming. Do not disappoint us. MRS. Wm. H. NEESE,
Missionary Reporter.

SPRING CHURCH CHARGE CIRCUIT AUXILIARY

On Wednesday, September 6, at 2 p. m., the Spring Church Circuit Auxiliary met at Halifax, N. C., in the home of Rev. and Mrs. H. S. B. Thompson, with 12 active members present, two honorary members and six visitors. Rev. Mr. Thompson conducted devotionals, using Psalm 11 for the Scripture lesson. "The Completeness of Jesus" was the study for the day and was in charge of Mrs. Rupert M. Robinson.

The treasurer, Mrs. H. E. Vassar, gave a splendid report, showing that we have not been entirely idle this year. At this time the treasurer was instructed to write two checks for $10 each. One to pay our pledge to the First District Student Loan Fund, and the other to our Branch treasurer on Budget.

At the previous meeting it was decided to make September the Bundle Day for Pine Ridge. A number of bundles were turned in at this time.

The District Rally was discussed and every member seemed pleased that we were to have the Rally meet with us.

The fall thank-offering was discussed, and the thank-offering secretary, Mrs. Wm. H. Neese, was instructed to plan for three thank-offering services to be held at an early date.

Spring Church will have their thank-offering service September 24 at 11 o'clock. Lebanon will have theirs October 1 at 11 o'clock, and Pleasant Hill October 22, at 7:30 p. m. We are looking forward to a good service at each place.

The members of the Auxiliary enjoyed their visit to Rev. and Mrs. Thompson very much, and especially did we enjoy the refreshments, which consisted of iced tea, cake and watermelons. MRS. Wm. H. NEESE.

We are thankful for the cash offerings and for this wonderful help in getting our children clothed for school. School opened this morning and we sent 99 children the first day.

Please Note

If the churches and Sunday schools of the Conference support the Home as well financially this year as they did last Conference year we must receive between now and Conference about $3,600.00. If you have cash in hand for the Home please send it along. Also please mail all offerings not later than November 6th, if you would get them in this year's report. We are confidently looking to every Sunday school for an offering during September and October.

Harvest Home Offering

Many of our churches and charges are already planning for a good Harvest Home offering. This preparation has been going on in many instances since early spring. We have put out a large number of glass jars

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Graham.—Graham observed Annual Conference Day last Sunday. A special offering for the Annual Conference was taken resulting in $23.50. A number have not made their offering as yet, and we urge that they do so in order that we may make the above figure much larger. The treasurer of the church, Miss Gladys Amick, will hold the check until next Sunday so that your offering may be added. Please bring it whether it be large or small.

In order to follow up the service of reconsecration of last Sunday and re-quicken the spiritual life of our church, a special prayer service will be held each Wednesday evening at the church at 7:30 and on each Saturday evening at 7 in the community of Travora Mill. This special service will be held at the home of Mrs. Lawrence Cheek this week, and is held for those who find it impossible to attend the Wednesday night service. These services are only 45 minutes long. You are urged to attend.

Mr. Rufus Hunter, the father of Mrs. Roger Stout (formerly Miss Ruby Hunter) of our church, passed away on Sunday evening of this week in the Rainey Hospital. Mr. Hunter was a faithful member of the Friends church and a man of strong Christian character. The influence of his great life will continue to live on in the lives of those with whom he came in contact.

Mrs. John Shoffner was operated on in the Clinic Hospital of Greensboro last week and is making very satisfactory recovery.

Sidney Seymour Holt, Evelyn Williams, and Junius are the young people from our church who are away in College this year. They are freshmen at the following colleges: N. C. University, High Point, and Elon. We wish for them a happy and successful college career. J. CLYDE AUUMAN.

Shiloh.—On the first Sunday of September Rev. R. S. Troxler delivered one of the outstanding messages of this year. The Scripture text was found in Ezekiel 47:4-5. After the temple was completed, the Lord gave to Ezekiel a vision of a river flowing out from under the altar eastward and it grew larger as it flowed. When Ezekiel measured the first time, the water was ankle deep; but when asked to measure 1,000 cubits, there it was knee deep; 1,000 cubits further down he found the water up to his thighs; but when he went another 1,000 cubits, the water was so deep that he had to swim.

Using this as a symbol of the church today, Bro. Troxler brought a vivid picture of different types of Christians. No two church members are alike, nor are all in to the same depth. He who is in just ankle deep has barely stepped in, but most of him, his knees, thighs, heart and head, are all outside. When he gets in knee deep he reads his Bible and prays, but still will not carry much of the burden. When he reaches the thigh depth, he not only reads and prays, but begins to bear the church's burdens. The hip-joints bear all the weight of the body—and he begins to be worth something. Yet not all is in the kingdom, for the biggest part is yet outside. But when he steps in all over and swims around in the depths, then Christ controls the whole man, and he gives his time, his service, his love, his very all, and can know the heights and depths of God's love and joy and peace.

Today Bro. Troxler brought another message from Ps. 40:2-3, with emphasis on part of the third verse: "He hath put a new song in my mouth." The psalmist sang a NEW song. Where did he get it? It didn't just happen by chance, nor was it merely a song of youth, or wealth, or fame. God gave him the song. It was a song of deliverance, of security and gratitude. By his song, his own soul was uplifted, and others also were helped.

The whole church has been asked to tithe during the months of September and October. September's offering will be placed upon the altar on the first Sunday in October, when the church roll will be called. We very much desire to see every member present and, as always, visitors will be very welcome.

Saturday, August 16, some of our finest boys and girls motored to South Caroina and were married. Mr. Weldon Koonts carried with him Miss Dorothy Swicegood and returned with her as his bride. Mr. Alvin Sink carried Miss Arline Michael and they at the same time were wed. Mrs. Koonts is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Swicegood, and Mr. Koonts is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Koonts. Mrs. Sink is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Michael, while Mr. Sink is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Sink. We wish for all of these fine young people the very best that life can give them.

Asheboro.—Although the Herald has not had a report from Asheboro for some time, it does not mean we have been vacationing all the time. A number of our people have taken vacations for a short time. Quite a few have been to Chicago to "The Century of Progress Exposition.." Our pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, and W. F. Redding, Jr., left last week for Chicago. There was no preaching service in our church last Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, of Winston-Salem, spent part of their vacation in Asheboro with friends and relatives the second week in August. Dr. Pritchard, a former pastor, is a native of Randolph, and their many friends are always glad to welcome them back.

At the third quarterly conference the vote was counted for delegate to Annual Conference at Thomasville. W. F. Redding, Jr., was declared elected, with C. E. Bulla a close second.

The Woman's Auxiliary of our church held their annual picnic and business meeting at Maple Groves Dairy Tuesday afternoon, August 15th. The Auxiliary of the Community Church, Thomasville, joined us on this occasion. Devotions were conducted in an interesting way by Miss Cleta Rich of our Auxiliary, after which Mrs. John Swaim read a "Dialogue on Prohibition" and Mrs. J. S. Lewis read a poem on Service. Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer spoke on mission work. A sumptuous picnic dinner and watermelon feast was enjoyed by the large number present.

The Auxiliary sponsored an Antique show in the Fox Furniture building the 17th, 18th, and 19th of August. There was a large display of many interesting articles, bonnets, dresses, shawls, spreads, chinaware, furniture, and other articles. The ladies served a chicken salad plate on Thursday evening.

The Father and Son Banquet was held on Thursday evening, August 24th, in the social room of our church with a large number of men and boys present and several ladies. The pastor presided over the program. Short talks were made by several of the men and speeches by some of the sons.

Mr. R. T. Lloyd, who has recently received a purple heart medal for efficient service during the World War, was honored upon this occasion. Several expressions of appreciation for his services in the church were made, including a fountain pen from the choir, presented by Mr. W. L. Ward.

A musical program was given by members of the choir and appropriate poems were read by Mrs. N. M. Harrison and Mrs. L. F. Ross. The banquet was served by the Auxiliary.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus F. Routh are the proud parents of a son, born August 16th, in the Randolph Hospital, Inc.

Our church was very glad to receive at a recent Sunday morning service Mrs. Simpson Parks and daughter, Miss Avis Parks.

Calvary.—Our meeting closed with the service Sunday night. While the visible results were a bit disappointing, we had a good meeting. Seven were received into membership Sunday morning, with others to follow. These were all children, but they count for the Kingdom, and may mean much to the church in the years to come. Brother R. A. Hunter was with us for the entire two weeks, with the exception of three services, when I did the preaching. The folks were delighted with his simple, quiet sermons, and have been greatly strengthened and helped.

Now we are turning our attention to the Fair, where the women will have a booth for satisfying the needs of the inner man. The same stand as in former year. If you come to the Fair, patronize us, and help us in this way to meet some of our debt obligations. You cannot buy better prepared food anywhere than our folks will serve you. "Calvary's cooks are famous."

A combined Rally Day and Thank-Offering service is being planned for the second Sunday in October, at which time we hope to secure enough money to pay out on our "World Service" budget.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Concord, Saxapahaw Charge.—We held a two weeks' singing school at this church in August, the first one that I can remember of them ever having. Much good was accomplished during the school. The fine talks that Mr. Ellington made were worth what it cost to have the school put on. We hope to accomplish more in singing. We meet each Wednesday evening and have choir practice.

We were glad to have Miss Verdie Marshbanks and Miss Elizabeth Fox, of the Eli Whitney School staff to worship with us Sunday afternoon.

The young people of our school are planning to give a play some time soon, entitled "Bound to Marry."

Mr. Loy preached another good sermon

Sunday afternoon. He read the 23rd chapter of Proverbs, using as his text the 29th and 30th verses. If we Christian people and church members would take the stand that Brother Loy takes toward the 18th Amendment, we would rest assured that it will not be repealed.

Miss Mattie Ferguson and Mr. Bernard Perry motored to the home of Rev. B. L. Gupton Saturday afternoon and were united in marriage.

Brother Loy appointed a nominating committee Sunday afternoon to nominate officers for the coming year. The officers will be elected the first Sunday in October and installed the first Sunday in November.

As the Annual Conference year will soon close, we realize that we have much work to do in the few remaining weeks. May we each one take our share and work together and try to make this the best year we have ever had. We hope to meet our financial obligations in full. BESSIE COBLE.

Mount Pleasant, North Davidson. — Rev. O. C. Loy has brought us some very inspiring sermons since the last report from this church. The second Sunday night in this month he preached on "Rejoicing." We can not rejoice unless we have faith, hope, and love.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its monthly meeting the second Sunday night. The Auxiliary is doing a great work.

The Christian Endeavor met the first Sunday morning with several present. The second Sunday the president had a call meeting of the society and the society changed the time for the meeting to the first and third Sunday nights. We are striving to do a great work in our society.

First Church, High Point.—The usual schedule of services was observed last Sunday, beginning with the Sabbath school at 9:45 o'clock under the direction of John C. Whitesell, superintendent.

At the 11 o'clock service the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered a thoughtful sermon on "The Light That Leads." Miss Beulah Moton was at the organ, and the music was beautiful and inspiring. Next Sunday, September 24, has been designated as the time when all members are asked to make a special contribution to the Annual Conference budget.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its September meeting Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the church with the following associate hostesses: Mesdames C. L. Whitaker, D. A. Dowdy, J. E. Perryman, W. A. Davis, J. E. Gibson, O. D. McPherson, and J. E. Perryman, Jr. Mrs. P. S. Kennett was in the chair instead of Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, who was out of town. There was a good attendance, and plans were made for the annual Bazaar and Turkey Supper on November 2. It is a source of deep regret that Mrs. S. S. Coe, the efficient chairman of Circle No. 4, has felt compelled to resign on account of having taken a position as teacher in the Junior High School.

The Senior C. E. Society held its usual weekly meeting Monday evening at the church with Miss Irene Reynolds acting as leader.

Impressive funeral services were conducted in the church Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock for Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., highly esteemed and well loved member, who died Tuesday morning. These last rites were attended by a large number of relatives and friends, and the unusually profuse and lovely offering of flowers was a silent token of the love and affection in which she was held. The pastor was assisted in this sad service by three former pastors, Dr. A. G. Dixon, Dr. Geo. A. Brown, of Reidsville, and Dr. P. E. Lindley, dean of the college, all of whom paid high and eloquent tributes of praise to the worth, admirable qualities and charming personality of this good and gracious friend. The following served as pall-bearers: Messrs. W. R. Kester, Dr. T. M. Stanton, S. P. Montgomery, C. C. Robbins, J. B. Spencer, J. S. Picket, and Rupert T. Pickens.

The congregation was again shocked and inexpressibly grieved to learn of the passing of another faithful and consistent member, Mrs. A. G. Hough, who died Thursday morning at 3:45 o'clock at her home, 646 Willowbrook street. Although her health had been declining for the past year, she had been confined to her room only three weeks. Born Miss Mary Evelyn Siceloff, at Midway, Davidson County, on December 10, 1851, she was the daughter of John Phillip and Maria Haynes Siceloff. On September 21, 1875, she and Mr. Albert G. Hough were married, and in 1900 they came to High Point to make their home. Five children were born to them, of whom three, Misses Clara, Ada, and Mamie Hough, of this city, survive. She also leaves three grandchildren, George Woollen, of Kernersville; Miss Frances Woollen, of High Point, and Mrs. Reed Auman, who was formerly Miss May Woollen, of Asheboro. Mr. and Mrs. Hough tenderly cared for and reared these children from the time of the death of their mother.

When Mr. and Mrs. Hough moved to High Point in 1900 from Gray's Chapel, Randolph County, they at once transferred their membership to First Church, and were loyal and active members, Mr. Hough having been the faithful librarian for the Sabbath school for several years, a position which his daughter, Miss Mamie, has filled most acceptably since her father's death in 1920. At one time before his marriage Mr. Hough was Register of Deeds of Davidson County, and lived at Lexington. Mrs. Hough was a good woman, a quiet, unassuming, consecrated Christian, devoted to her home, her husband and children. Funeral services were held from the home Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock by her pastor Rev. R. I. Farmer, assisted by Rev. A. L. Aycock, pastor of South Main M. E. Church, and Dr. Geo. R. Brown, of Reidsville. Burial was made in the family plot in Oakwood Cemetery. The following friends served as pallbearers: Dr. S. S. Coe, S. F. Brown, J. W. Clinard, J. H. Pritchard, S. P. Montgomery, and John C. Siceloff. To the sorrowing daughters, who so tenderly cared for their mother, and the other relatives the deep and sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends is extended.

The High Point City Schools opened for the fall session Tuesday morning. Our church is represented by the following teachers: Misses Annabel Thompson, Rosalie Andrews, Grace Koontz, and Mrs. S. S. Coe.

It is a source of much gratification to many friends of Arnold J. Koonce to know that he has sufficiently recovered from his serious operation in Burrus Memorial Hospital to be removed to his home on South Main street.

Work on the new residence of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert T. Pickens in Emerywood West has been commenced, and the contract calls for completion December 1. S. P. Montgomery is the contractor. The home will be brick veneer, two stories, seven roms, with steam heat, electric stove, and modern conveniences.

James Montgomery, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Montgomery, has returned to the State University to take up his studies as a Sophomore.

Mrs. John C. Whitesell went to Burlington last Monday to visit a friend, who is critically ill.

A delightful reception was tendered to the student body and friends by the faculty of High Point College Monday evening in Roberts Hall. Dean Lindley was master of ceremonies. Miss Dorothy Hoskins and C. L. Gray, Jr., rendered the exquisite "Song of Love," from "Blossomtime," and "Tell Me, Daisy." Dr. C. R. Hill, newly-elected associate professor of English, gave two choice readings, "That Old Sweetheart of Mine," by James Whitcomb Riley, and "Hamlet," by Irvin S. Cobb. Miss Julia Gold Clark played a 'cello selection, and much fun was furnished by caricatures of the faculty by a local artist, Thomas E. Dodamead. President Humphreys made a splendid talk, pleading for more social activities on the campus.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—The Methodist Protestant denomination in Winston-Salem may not be as large in number as many of the other denominations, but it certainly has its share of things to do and always gets them done well.

A very great honor has been bestowed on our pastor, Dr. Pritchard, when he was recently elected president of the Winston-Salem Ministerial Association. Dr. Pritchard will be a success, we know, in this field of service. He is liked in all his civic and social contacts in Winston-Salem. When he goes once, the second invitation is always extended.

West Forsyth.—Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference, was with us at Pleasant Hil church at 11 a. m., and at Tabernacle church at 3 p. m. last Sunday. He delivered helpful sermons at each church and presented the cause of the Annual Conference Budget at each service. A fairly good response was made to appeals of the pastor in attempting to raise the amounts for A. C. B. at each church. Pleasant Hill subscribed a little over one-half of their apportionment, and Tabernacle paid nearly one-half of their apportionment. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered at Pleasant Hill by the pastor, assisted by Dr. Andrews. The attendance at each church was about as usual.

We are glad to report that Bro. C. E. Sprinkle, member of Pleasant Hill church, who entered the Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem August 19, has recovered sufficiently to return to his home. He underwent two operations while in the hospital.

The pastor and family, accompanied by Mrs. C. I. Hargrove, of Burlington, enjoyed visits in a number of the homes in the Tabernacle and Pleasant Hill communities last Saturday and Sunday. After the service at Pleasant Hill Sunday, we, including Dr. Andrews, were entertained for dinner in the splendid home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hunter.

The people on West Forsyth Charge continue to remember the pastor and family with suitable gifts. Since the pounding at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches some time ago we have received a number of donations from members of Pleasant Hill church, for which we are thankful. We appreciate every gift.

Our revival meeting will begin at Harmony Grove church next Sunday with services at 11 a. m., 2 p. m., and 7:30 p. m. In compliance with the wishes of the members at this church, the pastor will do the preaching during the meeting. Services during the week will be at night only, starting at 7:30 o'clock.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Mount Hermon Charge.—Since we have been absent from the columns for some few weeks we expect here to give a brief statement of the revivals on this charge along with some few other facts.

The revival at Cedar Cliff began on the second Sunday in July, with Rev. W. M. Loy as pulpit help after Sunday. This meeting was a decided success. Mr. Loy did some splendid preaching in some well arranged, logical sermons. Everyone seemed to get a great deal of good from his series of sermons. There was a good number of people who made confession and 11 united with the church, part of the number by letter.

On the third Sunday in July we began at Mount Hermon with Rev. E. O. Peeler as pulpit help. Here we had splendid congregations of people. Mr. Peeler resented the gospel in an attractive way, which was appreciated by all who heard him. There were a good number of conversions, and seven joined the church.

The first Sunday in August the revival began at Friendship. Rev. T. J. Whitehead came on Monday and did all the preaching. He presented the gospel in a very forceful way. All who heard him appreciated his messages. Here we had a smaller number of converts, with five accessions. The church was greatly strengthened by Mr. Whitehead's gospel sermons.

The fourth and last of the special meetings was at Belmont the fourth Sunday in August. Here it seemed that the time was ripe for a revival. Rev. C. G. Isley came on Monday as our pulpit help. Dr. Andrews was present on Sunday afternoon and gave us a very inspiring message. We had an unusually large number of converts, 72, and 20 accessions. The church was greatly revived, while many of the unsaved and backsliders were converted. It looked like the old times that we hear our fathers tell about. Mr. Isley was at his best in reaching revival sermons for the entire week. The interest was of such a nature that we continued through the first Sunday night in September.

Throughout all of the meetings there has been a fine spirit on the part of the church folk. We trust we are in a better spiritual condition, and have greater desires to put up a better fight against sin and its evil consequences.

We have observed two of the services as directed by our Annual Conference officials with good results. At Friendship there was a fine spirit prevalent. Practically everyone present gave something. On the second Sunday at Cedar Cliff the amount of the A. C. B. was almost doubled for that church. We think all the churches on the charge will pay the A. C. B. in full.

May every energy and effort possible be put forth in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church.

L. E. MABRY.

ST. LOUIS' SAD SLEEP

News from the encephalitis battlefront in and around the St. Louis sector is not very encouraging despite the fact that some of the foremost scientists and physicians are waging a desperate fight to find a means of checking it. The epidemic still centers about St. Louis and so far has taken more than 125 lives.

That it is unabated is shown by the fact that more people died and more contracted it within the fifth week than any three weeks since the first death was reported July 20 At the beginning of the outbreak the death rate stood at 10 per cent, but this has increased to about one out of seven.

The disease is thought to be caused by a filterable virus and so far it has defied isolation and detection. Some authorities think it is possible that it may be spread through nose and throat secretions. Partially successful attempts have been made to transmit it to monkeys through inoculation with organic matter from those who died of the disease. Four kinds of insects are being used—mosquito, tick, mite and fly.

Three agencies—the epidemic laboratory of the Washington University, Barnes hospital and the United States army laboratory at Jefferson barracks—have united under the direction of public health service experts.—The Pathfinder.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION THANK-OFFERING PROGRAM

It is not only important that we receive a thank-offering this month for World Service, but we are eager to have all of our churches present some time during the month, or the following, all or some part of the Christian Education program prepared for the fall thank-offering.

Our people need Christian Education facts before they are going to give largely for this cause. Both the Rally Day program and the one for the fall thank-offering present the cause of Christian Education and we are eager to have both used some time during the autumn time.

Auxiliaries holding a public thank-offering service will probably desire the whole of the thank-offering program. Please notice that it will not be necessary to have any worship service before the play as the play itself includes worship materials as well as the thank-offering emphasis. Should you receive your thank-offering in your Auxiliary meeting, it would be very well to give Scene two of the play. However, I should be most happy if churches could present the play as written.

The month of September is a busy one. In the event that you cannot use "All in a Day's Work" during this month, plan to use it in October or November. It attempts to present the whole program of Christian Education, using every-day characters to tell the story dramatically.

TO BE READ TO YOUR CONGREGATIONS
On Sept. 24, or As Soon Thereafter as Possible

Dear Co-Workers in the Kingdom:

The vacation period is over, and you are back in the harness again for Christ and the Church. May those of us reading this join us in doing the following:

First—Study the three-fold program of our General Conference—Missions, Education, and Philanthropy.

Second—Pray for the success of our program, and for those who are charged with the responsibility of carrying it out.

Third—Give to the program your systematic and sacrificial financial support.

Fourth—Work for the finest Rally Day, and the largest offering possible. Our needs are overwhelming, and we are depending on you.

ELECTRIC EYE GIVES WARNING

A cheap but durable photo-electric cell (or "electric eye") has been perfected that can be fastened to the rear of a truck. When lights from a vehicle approaching from the rear strike it, a bell in the cab will ring as warning to the driver. This device has been approved by the French police and most trucks in France will be equipped with it next year. A truck driver will have no excuse for hogging the road with such a device.—The Pathfinder.

WILL STUDY COSMIC RAY

Now that the Settle stratosphere ascent failed this year, Italian scientists have decided that something must be done about the study of the cosmic ray and, led by Professor Bruno Rossi, several of them under the auspices of the National Research Council are going over into East Africa to the Italian colony of Eritrea, where they will conduct some experiments and try to find out its exact nature.

It is not practical at this time for the expedition to conduct their experiments either in the stratosphere or in the ocean depths, as they had originally intended, so they have chosen a place in Eritrea that is only seven degrees from the magnetic equator and still has the advantage of an altitude of about 7,000 feet.—The Pathfinder.

STORING VEGETABLES PAYS

An adequate winter supply of vegetables can be provided on most farms through proper storage, says T. J. Talbert, chairman of the horticulture department of the Missouri College of Agriculture. Such a conservation of food supplies is especially important this year. To keep well in storage vegetables should be mature but not overripe. They should be free from bruises, cuts, diseases and insect injuries.

Cabbage, turnips, winter radishes, parsnips, carrots, beets, etc., are kept best at comparatively low temperatures in a fairly moist atmosphere and without much circulation of air. Irish potatoes may be kept at about the same temperature but require more ventilation. Sweet potatoes, squashes and pumpkins require high temperatures, dry atmosphere and a free circulation of air. They are likely to keep better in the furnace room, attic or an upstairs room than in the vegetable cellar.

Cellars containing a furnace for heating the home are frequently too warm for the storage of most vegetables. But if there is no other place, a portion of such a cellar can be partitioned off in such a manner as to allow good ventilation and temperature control. Outdoor caves or storage cellars may be used successfully for the storage of many vegetables. Outdoor pits or banks are also extensively used.—The Pathfinder.

A PRAYER

Dear God,
Grant to me
The graces
Of simplicity:

A gentle voice,
An open hand,
A heart of love

KING GEORGE'S KEYS

The Tower of London, begun some 850 years ago, is not the grim jail it used to be, but the ceremony of installing its constable and accepting the keys is as impressive as it ever was.

When Field Marshal Lord Milne was inducted into office the ceremony used was the same as in Tudor days. The coroner of the Tower reads the letters patent creating Lord Milne constable, and the Lord Chamberlain, in the name of the king, presents him with the keys to the Tower.

In the early days the constable was resident in the Tower and gave his orders by word of mouth. Now the title is purely complimentary, awarded to a soldier of distinction, and the routine affairs of the onetime gloomy jail are conducted by a resident governor.

Lord Milne's office is one of the oldest in England and dates back to the time of the Norman conquest. Certain privileges are attached to it such as corresponding directly with the King, few subjects being accorded that honor. In the time of the Tudors the constable was usually a prelate of the church and received rich compensation for his duties.

A ritual no less rigidly carried out than the one of investing the constable is the ceremony that marks the passing of the Tower's keys each night. The chief warder and the guard are the principal actors in this miniature drama. "Halt! Who comes there?" challenges the guard. "The keys," the chief warder replies. "Whose keys?" "King George's keys," says the chief warder. "Advance, King George's keys. All's well." And with this the keys are carried to the resident governor's quarters for the night.—The Pathfinder.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

PUT YOUR CHURCH AND CHARGE ON THE HERALD HONOR ROLL

An honor roll of churches and charges raising their Herald subscription and subsidy quotas in full is being prepared and will be posted in the conference church and later printed in both the Annual Conference Journal and The Herald. Will your church and charge be on that honor roll? If it is, every pastor and member interested in The Herald will have to get busy and put it over.

We do not think that the quotas asked for are beyond the reach of any church or charge. And we can reach them if we make a real effort. With this coming conference Dr. McCulloch enters upon his fortieth year as editor of The Herald. Let's show our appreciation for what those years have meant to the conference by putting this thing over in a way we have never done before. Get busy now, and let's see how many charges and churches can reach the goal. We can all do it if we will.

Those who take The Herald can help reach both goals. Here are some of the things you can do:

1. If you are in arrears, pay up. (See address tab on the latest issue of The Herald.)

2. If your subscription is not out, renew for six months or a year.

3. Look at the subsidy column above. If your charge is not in the paid-up list, ask your Sunday school class, or Sunday school, or some organization in the church, to chip in and pay it out. Or ask for an offering at some church service.

pected to be courteous, and above all, use choice language, free from slang.' "

Annabelle quickly left the room and almost ran toward home. She wanted to be alone. "That is the reason," she was saying to herself, "that I did not get the position as librarian." This was the second disappointment due to her bad habit.

As a result of her thinking Annabelle resolved that she would correct that defect. But she found that it took a good deal of determination, a strong will power, and considerable patience before she was quite sure that she could carry on a conversation without using slang.

Several months had passed when one day Annabelle met Geneva Holden at her own door.

"O Annabelle, I've had a letter from Aunt Elizabeth and she has invited me to spend the week-end with her in the city. She wants me to bring a friend—one that will enjoy music—and that just made me think of you. Will you go?"

Annabelle's face flushed. She was thinking of that day when she had accidently overheard Geneva talking to her mother about a certain letter she had received from her Aunt Elizabeth. Now she was quite sure she would not bring disgrace upon her friend and she said eanestly, "I shall be delighted to go with you, Geneva."—Sunday School Banner.

Faith

Faith is a builder,
Explorer, a light,
The way to achievement,
It puts fear to flight.

Faith softens sorrow,
Drives tears away,
Gives one fresh courage,
Points out Love's way.

Faith achieves wonders,
Though prospects seem bad;
Dissipates shadows,
Makes the heart glad.

Faith can accomplish
Great things for you.
Have faith that some day
Your dreams will come true.

Ignorance, or What?

That something is radically wrong with us as a denomination, all close observers will agree. What is it? I heard a speaker say recently that ignorance of the condition of our work is largely responsible for the deplorable condition in which we find ourselves today. This statement came as a slap in the face, and at first blush I felt like resenting it; but the more I have thought about it the more I am convinced that the statement is true. The great majority of our church members do not know our church polity; they are not familiar with the rules by which our business affairs are governed, either in the denomination or in our Annual Conference, and consequently are not actively interested in the welfare and success of the denomination.

Most of our members are ignorant concerning the desperate condition of the missionary and educational work of the denomination, to say nothing of the local conference. Granting this to be true, who is to blame? Some people think that our leaders fail in making all of our needs known to the church, and that if the members realized the seriousness of conditions they would exert themselves to remedy them.

On the other hand, if the truth is published, how many people read it? Only a few days ago I heard a leader in the North Carolina branch say that she had been thinking of writing an article for THE HERALD concerning an important change in our plan of work. "But," she said, "I realize that only about one per cent of the women would read it, and my labor would go for nothing."

There are some people who still believe that "where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise." They seem to be afraid to learn of the needs of their church. To know of them would increase their responsibilities, never stopping to think that they are responsible for what they might know, as well as for what they do know.

Some others are ignorant because their parents failed to "expose" them to the light of duty and loyalty and truth. Doubtless you can think of many more causes for ignorance about our church. The question is, "Does God wink at the time of this ignorance?" Is it not possible for us to put on a campaign of education in all departments of our church work and see if this will bring us back to normal conditions? I shall do my part. Will you do yours? SISTER SUE.

PLEASE, BRETHREN

1. If you haven't sent in a postal card with the name and address of your delegate on it, please do so at once. About sixty have come in so far. It's too bad we always have to be delayed by the few who put off or neglect to do what they are asked. We can't make out the roll, and the president can't make out his committees until the list is completed. Thanks to the brethren who have sent in the names of their delegates, and more thanks to those who haven't—as soon as they send them in.

2. Please send in any Journal money you may have. The Book Concern—Stockton Press—is in desperate need of money. That they are in need is due to the fact that those who owe them—and we are among that number—haven't paid our bills. C. W. BATES, Secretary.

—The Gospel Advocate, Baptist, of Nashville, Tenn., recently published a special "Contributor's Number." Fourteen page, or near-page, articles from ministers located all over the United States were featured in this issue. The subjects were varied, including: "Music in Christian Worship," "Essntials and Non-Essentials," "Which Church Should I Join?" and "True Happiness and How to Obtain It." Others discussed Christ as the propitiator and as a developer of character. Indeed, the subjects were as numerous as the writers. There was little left for the editorial staff to do except edit. An innovation of this kind might work well with other religious papers once in a while. It certainly increases the general interest when new voices enter the pages of the church paper.—The Christian Sun.

THE PREACHER IS CONCERNED WITH FIVE THINGS

Of course there are many more than five things with which every preacher should be deeply concerned. He must spend much time in reading and study—seeking ideas, knowledge and information—and in going about his community and the world. He is naturally interested in children and young people, in the strong and active, and in the aged and infirm. The sick, suffering and sinful must ever be his charge. But mingled with these and eventually aiding in the performance of his parochial duties, there are five other things—abstractions, if you will, but largely personal in their application—in the midst of which he lives and serves.

Experience

I do not say religious experience, though that is included and is of decided importance. Everything that comes to a man in any and all of the varied contacts of life is grist for his homiletic mill. It includes his personal experiences of God and men, of sickness and health, of prosperity and adversity, of doubt and assurance, of despair and hope, of sin and recovery.

The preacher needs to be sensitive. If he is dull and unfeeling he is likely to miss much of the realization of God and the finer things of men. These experiences are at the foundation of the preacher's life. They are indispensable to the effective delivery of a saving message. The preacher will do well frequently to recall his early, and subsequent, finding of God, his sense of sin, repentance and recovery, and what he has seen and known of the experiences of others along these lines. He should ask himself: ''What is life, what are its high points, what is it doing with and for me, in what do my experiences differ from those of men about me, and what may I learn from them?''

Description

The experience or testimony meeting has almost entirely disappeared from the churches—unfortunately. That there were extravagances, unrealities, and insincerities connected with it we may well admit. It also had its values, and the preacher, at any rate, must not allow those values to get away from his personal life and activities. It used to be said that a Methodist preacher need never to be at a loss for a sermon.. If worse came to worse he could tell his experience. That is, he could describe, in more or less detail, what had taken place between himself and God. He could describe, more or less effectively, his life of sin and steps by which he became a Christian, and the things in life that meant most to him in developing his faith and character. Such ''preaching'' no doubt frequently degenerated into a lazy, shiftless habit of mere talk. But the idea is a good one. By substituting for the violent, emotional, cataclysmic type of conversion what has become much more common—the quieter type that comes with the Christian home and intelligent Christian education—we still have something worth-while to describe that is full of interest and instruction. The field of description is further broadened and vitalized by taking in the interesting activities of social and charitable organizations as they come into contact with folks and seek to improve living.

Interpretation

Facts, incidents and experiences do not always utter their messages in a clear and infallible manner. Their significance may be misunderstood, or missed entirely.

What did Jesus mean to teach in the parable of the sower and the seed? What is the significance of the emotional stirrings in the heart of a young person in a crowded church when enthusiastic singing and prayers are followed by a strong evangelistic appeal? What is to be done about the stir in many Christian minds over evolution and other teachings of science? What, if anything, is the meaning of the World War and the depression? What about the apparently successful movement for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment? What should be our attitude toward the National Industrial Recovery Act, and what is likely to be the outcome? What are we to think of the changed and changing attitude of many people concerning marriage, divorce, regulation of the birth of children, the treatment of criminals, and the safeguarding of the lives and well-being of the young?

These are only a few of the many things that church people need to think about. Whether they think understandingly and constructively, or loosely and to no purpose, depends largely on whether the preacher is an adequate interpreter of the thinking and acting of men of today and former times. The ability to understand and interpret incidents, movements, men, and ideas is one of the most important qualififications of the minister. This ability comes by experience, study, practice, and contact with the spirit of God.

Criticism

The critical faculty is one of the most serviceable with which the human mind is endowed. Its exercise should be based on knowledge and discernment. Properly applied it is capable of delivering from endless errors and misapprehensions. It rids art, literature, and music of many pretentious works and eliminates from others elements that would be of no service. It tends to restrain the scientist, the historian, and the theologian within reasonable bounds. Without it we should be, to a much greater extent than now, subject to the vagaries and idiosyncracies of those who would foist on us half-baked theories, or tie us to outworn and discredited teachings of former years.

But the presence of the imperfect and the false may not render a thing entirely void of value. Abraham Lincoln derived much benefit from Deems' Life of George Washington, even though it contained the impossible story of the hatchet and the cherry tree. Many a person has derived infinite benefit from the Bible, even though thinking every book was written by the person whose name it bears, that it perfectly reproduces the words and thoughts of the writers, and that the words and thoughts are infallible. To know something of the value and limitations of criticism is of tremendous importance to the preacher, both for his own satisfaction and development, and as a means of service to his people.

Appreciation

Criticism may be destructive or constructive—looking at a position and determining to controvert and destroy it, or looking at the same position with a sincere desire to find out what measure of truth there may be in it and to conserve and build up that truth. This latter is a part of what appreciation proposes to do.

The appreciative person looks at a work of art, a piece of literature, a church creed, a proposal for social betterment, a pronouncement of the scientist, and asks sympathetically: "What truth or helpful suggestion is to be found here? How much of this is true, and how may we use it for the advancement of men?" He looks at people, at those who are working for the Kingdom of God, and asks: "How genuine and sincere are they? How much can they be used? How may their defects be eliminated and their good points strengthened?" He endeavors to avoid self-conceit, to subdue personal animosity, and to aid in building up co-operation.

This is to be distinguished from that old method of softsoaping everybody, and indiscriminatingly commending every person and measure regardless of truth and reality.

The balanced use of Experience, Description, Interpretation, Criticism, and Appreciation should help insure for the preacher a reasonably useful, successful, and happy life.

Luther K. Long.

BE PRUDENT IN FORMING HABITS

Be true to your best self, to your highest ideals and aspirations. It is not what you assert but what you think that determines your real place in the world. Have the courage to pursue your innate high ideals, and presently men will come to your way of thinking. Truth is a power unto itself. This infallible power is yours to command and use, and in precisely the degree that you do use it will you be strong, confident and noble. As you daily develop and accumulate reserves of mental and spiritual power, you will be the better ready for the responsibilities, emergencies and obligations of life. Above all else, be prudent in forming your personal habits, since multiplied habits make character, and character makes destiny.—Grenville Kleiser.

THE CHINESE WAY

A student in Fukien Christian University who had never read "The Good Earth," gave his own autobiography in this way: "My mother was born in a village. Her father was a farmer. She had four brothers and two sisters. Conditions were very poor, and there was no chance for anyone to go to school. They were all working hard to support the family. At the age of 22 she married my father. They loved each other dearly. My father was a merchant and had a little shop in the market-place. She tried her best to help my father, taking care of both the shop and the family. Later she heard the gospel of Jesus. She was converted and became a good member of the church. Through her influence my father also became a faithful Christian. My mother never ceased trying to overcome the difficulties in the way of sending us to school. We must not forget that where there is a will there is a way. My father died a year and a half ago. Nothing could comfort my mother until her own health declined and she came down with the cholera. She knew she would die, but nevertheless she was happy all the time, until she breathed her last and passed away peaceully. From my mother's death I have learned that death is only a kind of change into another world. It has also taught me the meaning of life. Physical things are mortal, but spiritual things are immortal."—Congregationalist.

THE STRUGGLE OF CAPITAL AND LABOR

The National Industrial Recovery Administration is rapidly proving itself not only the spearhead of the country's efforts toward economic recovery, but also the testing field for a major struggle between capital and labor. . . . The American Federation of Labor is the chief wage-earner's organization in this country, though there have been and are several other organizations, generally more radical. During the World War, when Samuel Gompers was president, circumstances made the Federation very powerful, and at one time it had over six million members. For a decade it has lost members steadily. For instance, in 1931, it had 2,889,000 members, and in 1932 barely over 2,500,000. . . . When the NRA was formed, in the law creating that administration, the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively was unequivocally recognized. It was this clause which precipitated the present vast, and perhaps, crucial struggle between labor and capital. . . . We raise the capital-labor issue not only because of its own importance, but also because it may very well determine the immediate course of the nation. . . . An example of this comes readily to mind in the recent prediction of Roger W. Babson, statistician, that the "middle class" will tolerate the capital-labor conflict only a little longer and then will arise in its wrath and set up a dictator to give each his proper share.—Christian-Evangelist.

PAINTING THE PARSONAGE

Painting whose parsonage? Yours if it needs it. Mine if it needs it. Perhaps yours and mine.

In passing around recently I saw two M. P. parsonages—one in the country and one in town. Both were badly in need of paint and yard improvements. They did not show any pride of ownership. I think the biggest trouble is too much ownership. The two have around 800 owners. It is nearer a case of "everybody's house, nobody's house."

If we expect and want nice, up-to-date preachers and their families to live in our parsonages, I think we should keep them looking so they nor the owners will be ashamed of them. They are the only homes our preachers have, but some of the owners would not live in them without some improvements. And, besides, the houses are damaging. Perhaps some of the owners of these parsonages don't see them often enough to know how they look. If you have a suspicion it is yours, go take a look, and then go back and tell the news and get busy.

Don't say there will not be enough interested out of the 800 to paint two houses. What is needed is somebody to say, 'Come on, let's do it!"

This may be, One of the Owners.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION

The distinction between religion and theology is not always kept clearly in mind. Religion has to do with realities of a moral and spiritual nature. Theology deals with the materials of religion from an intellectual viewpoint.

The theologian often misapprehends some of the materials with which he deals. He may go far afield in his inferences and theories based on his materials. Especially when he goes over into regions not legitimately under the dominion of his subject does he develop a bumptiousness that not only sets him in opposition to the scientist, but also makes the impression that religion—of which he is supposed to be an ally—is also in conflict with science. Theologians are inclined to be very positive in the statement of their views and, when differing individuals and schools of theology get each other by the ears, there is something doing.

Dr. Robert A. Millikan, eminent scientist and devout Christian and church member, has given us a brief statement that should be reassuring both to the religious man and to the scientist. The reader will note that here it is religion, rather than theology, with which science has had no conflict. Professor Millikan says:

''The first fact which seems altogether obvious and undisputed by thoughtful men is that there is actually no conflict between science and religion when each is correctly understood.

''The purpose of science is to develop without prejudice of any kind a knowledge of the facts, the laws and the processes of nature.

''The even more important task of religion, on the other hand, is to develop the consciences, the ideals, and the aspirations of mankind.

''Both science and religion have reached their present status through a process of development from the crudest beginnings.'' L. K. L.

PREVENTS SELF-DESTRUCTION

Statistics reveal that approximately 70 suicides occur in the United States every day, and that for the past four years the annual total has been increasing out of all normal proportion to the population increase. The hope that has been sustaining many persons through the worst economic depression the world has ever known is growing weary and thin. Many persons have lost all faith in themselves. They have lost sight of God.

Can they be saved? Dr. Harry M. Warren, founder and president of the National Save-A-Life League, a non-profit organization for the prevention of self-destruction, says that they can. He is convinced that virtually every person contemplating suicide could be persuaded not to do it if the right words were spoken by the right person at the right time.

He urges anyone with the idea of suicide in mind to write to him at his offices at 299 Madison avenue, New York City, in full confidence. He will gladly and freely give his counsel, and will send helpful literature concerned with the suicide problem.

CONSTRUCTIVE AFFIRMATIONS

By Grenville Kleiser

These affirmations should be said aloud at the beginning and close of the day. Also at convenient daily intervals. Say each statement very slowly and try to realize its full import.

Always use affirmations in the constructive sense, thus: ''All is good,'' ''I am a perfect child of God,'' ''Divine love is the liberator,'' ''Day by day, in every way, by the help of God, I am getting better and stronger.''

Health-Building Affirmations

God is All.
I am one with Him.
God is my life.
I am well.
My thoughts are harmonious.
I am rich in faith.
Divine love protects me.
I am strong.
Truth lights my way.
I am always calm.
My mind and body are pure.
I am grateful.
God sustains me.
I am in poise.
Wisdom guides me.
I am always cheerful.
My self-control is excellent.
I am courageous.
I breathe deeply.
I am relaxed.
My concentration is good.
I am confident.
I do everything deliberately.
I am an optimist.
I think constructively.
I am doing my best today.
I rejoice in abundance.
I am thoroughly nourished.
I give generously.
I am happy.
My sleep is restful.
I am at peace.

THINKING

Thinking is an art, the art of logic; and thinking is an expression of our total mental nature, which brings it under the domain of psychology.

Psychology is concerned with explaining how we incline to think; logic undertakes to lay down the law of how we must think if we would think correctly.

The actual thinking that we do, whether true or false, strong or weak, original or commonplace, consistent or capricious, direct or rambling, is none the less thinking.

The results are psychological specimens, however well or ill they stand the test of logic; they are plants, whether weeds or flowers.—Prof. Joseph Jastrow, in The Psychology of Thinking.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

The month of September to be when special effort shall be made to raise the Annual Conference Budget. In stations, the third Sunday of that month is the time set, while in the rural churches, the month is set apart for this purpose.

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 8, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

Churches on A. C. B. Honor Roll

These have paid A. C. B. in full:

Burke's Chapel, Connelly Springs Ct., Rev. L. S. Helms, pastor.

Haw River Church, Glen Raven Ct., Rev. J. P. Pegg, pastor.

Bethel Church, Randolph Ct., Rev. Edward Suits, pastor.

Cedar Cliff Church, Mt. Hermon Ct., Rev. L. E. Mabry, pastor.

Piney Grove Church, Siler City Ct., Rev. H. L. Isley, pastor.

Lawndale Church, Cleveland Ct., Rev. C. E. Ridge, pastor.

Gray's Chapel, Randolph Ct., Rev. Edward Suits, pastor.

First Church, Concord, Rev. J. M. Morgan, pastor.

Shiloh Church, Liberty Circuit, Rev. F. R. Love, pastor.

"It is just as rasonable to attempt to run a farm without horses, mules or plows as it would be to try to carry on the work of the conference without the support of the individual church."—From report of the Committee on Financing the Church.

As to the Conference Journal

Last conference President Taylor recommended that the Conference Journal be published on subscription. That each pastor carry with him to the conference the number of Journals subscribed for; the total list shall constitute the number printed by the publisher. We suggest that the pastor begin with his appointments in October, if on a circuit, and find out from the members of each church how many will take and pay for a conference Journal at 25 cents per copy, to be published in thirty days after the adjournment of conference. It is the present hope of the publisher to have them ready for delivery in that time. Let's rally to this suggestion and get this Journal business out of the dumps.

October Pay-Up Month

According to the Annual Conference program (see the head of this letter) October has been chosen as the pay-up month of the conference. Much remains to be done if it shall really be what it has been set to be. But also much can be done if our people will approach the task with the determination to succeed. It is plain why many churches do so little; those who know the way some pastors and people go about this task, just feel that only a little can be accomplished. For one who is fearful of failure, who makes excuses for his people, when in reality they could do much better than they are doing, will hardly be surprised by none of the churches getting on the Honor Roll.

We have no desire that a burden be placed upon anyone greater than he is able to carry. That would be wrong, but what we urge of all our people is that we do what we can. There is not possibly a member of our denomination in the North Carolina Conference who could not give something to Kingdom interests during the year, were he to want to do it enough to try. It is our tasks, pastors and church officials, to get our people to want to support their church; this done they will do the rest. Do not forget that. So try this approach to the question a while.

Gray's Chapel, Randolph Ct., Edward Suits, Pastor

I was here at the morning service. There was a very large crowd; it was the beginning of the revival services. The service was held under the arbor. It was a most helpful service. The people were so attentive that it was a great joy to speak to them. Their order and attention was all that could be asked for on such an occasion. And then, too, they did another fine thing. They paid the A. C. B. assessment in full and had enough over to about pay up the Superannuate special. We all felt happy over this. The pastor is still smiling about it. So Gray's becomes the seventh church reported to me that has paid in full the A. C. Budget.

New Salem Church, Randleman Charge, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, Pastor

I was at this church in the afternoon. It was unfortunate for the service that the church is so close to Gray's Chapel—our congregation was about all there. A very small audience came out. But we had a good service and the pastor informed me that with what had been paid in and what was pledged that day only three or four dollars remained to be raised for New Salem to go on the A. C. B. Honor Roll.

Worthville, Randleman Charge

I was here at night. My first visit since the new church was built. It is quite a splendid building. There was present a very fine group of young people—the older ones were conspicuous for their absence; but this is common here, I understand. It was very easy to preach to them. Pastor Trogdon said that they had just passed through a good revival meeting. They gave good attention to the message. And when we turned our attention to the A. C. B., it was more than raised in cash and subscriptions. In fact, enough was pledged and paid in to cover both the Annual Conference budget and the superannuate special. It was fine to see them in action. Young Brother Ward took the matter largely in hand and called out subscriptions really faster than the pastor could write. It was fine to see them because it was done with such readiness and apparent pleasure.

Randleman Charge has suffered greatly this year. The Randleman Mills have stood the entire conference year and many of our people there have not had any work for all these months; others have gone to surrounding towns and have found work there. But in it all the services have been conducted and the pastor and people have faced the situation with courage. They are now hopeful that a better day is dawning at Randleman. We hope it shall come speedily.

Plan of Appointments.

Oct. 1—Littleton charge. Corinth, 11 a. m.; Weavers, 3 p. m.; Hawkins, 7:30 p. m.

Oct. 7—Fourth quarterly conference, Piney Grove church, Kernersville charge.

THE PRAYING LIFE

Prayer is to the spiritual life what air is to the physical. Make it a rule never to see the face of man until you have seen the face of God. Each day is a new life; make sure of a good beginning. The devil may be so thoroughly beaten in the morning, that his assaults will be feeble all the rest of the day.

We should finish each day as we begin it—on our knees. Be men and women of prayer. None are eminent for piety and usefulness who neglect this duty. All who would win great victories for God in public, must first prevail in the solitude of their own chambers.—Rev. Thomas Cook.

CHRISTIAN REPENTANCE

Repentance is a gift from God. And there are Christians that need that gift. Are you and I agreeing with God about everything? God does not force us back into His will.

The Father did not send a chariot into the far country and bring back the prodigal son. The prodigal son had to come to himself; he had to change his mind. He had to see that his father was right and that he was wrong, and then humbly to retrace his steps. And when he came back of his own free will, having had a change of mind, there was the kiss, and the robe, and the ring, and the shoes.—A. Lindsay Glegg.

MOODY AND DEATH

Are we witnessing such glorious death-bed scenes in our age as the records of the past reveal? We fear not. People who would die triumphantly must live victoriously. Mr. Moody livd a wonderful life of consecration, service and victory; his death was glorious. The story of his death-bed has been given as follows:

"A few hours before entering the 'Homeland' Dwight L. Moody caught a glimpse of the glory awaiting him. Awaking from a sleep, he said, 'Earth recedes, Heaven opens before me. If this is death, it is sweet! There is no valley here. God is calling me, and I must go!' His son, who was standing by his bedside said, 'No, no, father, you are dreaming.'

"No!' said Mr. Moody, 'I am not dreaming: I have been within the gates: I have seen the children's faces.' A short time elapsed and then, following what seemed to the family to be the death struggle he spoke again: 'This is my triumph; this is my coronation day! It is glorious!' "

Someone puts the thought of dying in the following lines:

Think—
"Of stepping on shore and finding it Heaven;
Of taking hold of a hand and finding it God's hand;
Of breathing a new air and finding it celestial air;
Of feeling invigorated, and finding it immortality;
Of passing from storm and tempest to an unbroken calm;
Of waking up—and finding it Home."

—The Prairie Pastor.

BE THE BEST

If you can't be a pine on the top of the hill,
Be a scrub in the valley—but be
The best little scrub by the side of the rill;
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.
If you can't be a bush, be a bit of the grass,
Some highway some happier make.
If you can't be a muskie, then just be a bass—
But the liveliest bass in the lake!

We can't all be captains, we've got to be crew;
There's something for all of us here.
There's big work to do and there's lesser to do,
And the task we must do is the near.
If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail,
If you can't be the sun, be a star;
It isn't by size that you win or you fail—
Be the best of whatever you are!

—Hyde Park Bulletin.

DO WE RING CLEAR?

"Ma, who makes them tap china when you go to buy it?"

"Oh, that is to find if it is sound. If not cracked, it rings clear, but if cracked it makes a dull sound."

Just so with the world, they continually sound us who profess to be saved, to find out if we are what we seem to be. Oh, that we could realize the position we are in! The world is ever gazing upon us to try and detect a flaw.—Publisher Unknown.

THE CHURCH WALKING WITH THE WORLD

The Church and the world walked far apart
On the changing shores of time;
The World was singing a giddy song,
And the church a hymn sublime.
Come, give me wour hand, cried the merry World,
And walk with me this way;
But the good Church hid her snowy hand.,
And solemnly answered, Nay.,
I will not give you my hand at all,
And I will not walk with you,
Your way is the way of endless death;
Your words are all untrue.

Nay, walk with me but a little space,
Said the World, with kindly air;
The road I walk is a pleasant road,
And the sun shines always there;
Your path is thorny and rough and rude,
And mine is broad and plain;
My road is paved with flowers and gems,
And yours with tears and pain.
The sky above me is always blue;
No want, no toil I know;
The sky above you is always dark:
Your lot is a lot of woe.
My path, you see, is a broad, fair path,
And my gate is high and wide.—
There is room enough for you and for me
To travel side by side.

Half shyly the Church approached the World,
And gave him her hand of snow:
The old World grasped it and walked along,
Saying, in accents low,
Your dress is too simple to please my taste;
I will give you pearls to wear.
Rich velvet and silk for your graceful form,
And diamonds to deck your hair.
The Church looked down at her plain, white, robes
And then at the dazzling World,
And blushed as she saw his handsome lip
With a smile contemptuous curled.
I will change my dress for a costlier one,
Said the Church with a smile of grace;
Then her pure white garment drifted away.
And the World gave in their place,
Beautiful satins and shining silks,
And roses and gems and pearls;
And over her forehead her bright hair fell,
Crisped in a thousand curls.

Your house is too plan, said the proud old World,
I'll build you one like mine:
Carpets of Brussels, and curtains of lace,
And furniture ever so fine.
So he built her a costly and beautiful house—
Splendid it was to behold;
Her sons and her beautiful daughters dwelt there,
Gleaming in purple and gold;
And fairs and shows in the halls were held,
And the World and his children were there;
And laughter and music and feasts were heard
In the place that was meant for prayer.
She had cushioned pews for the rich and the great
To sit in their pomp and pride,
While the poor folks, clad in their shabby suits,
Sat meekly down outside.

The angel of mercy flew over the Church,
And whispered, I know thy sin;
The Church looked back with a sigh, and longed
To gather her children in.
But some were off in the midnight ball,
And some were off at the play,
And some were drinking in gay saloons;
So she quietly went her way.
The sly World gallantly said to her,
Your children mean no harm—
Merely indulging in innocent sports;
So she leaned on his proffered arm,
And smiled, and chatted, and gathered flowers,
As she walked along with the World;
While millions and millions of deathless souls
To the horrible pit were hurled.

Your preachers are all too old and plain,
Said the gay old world with a sneer;
They frighten my children with dreadful tales,
Which I like not for them to hear:
They talk of brimstone and fire and pain,
And the horrors of endless night;
They talk of a place that should not be
Mentioned to ears polite.
I will send you some of the better stamp,
Brilliant and gay and fast,
Who will tell them that people may live as they list
And go to heaven at last.
The Father is merciful, great and good,
Tender and true and kind;
Do you think He would take one child to heaven
And leave the rest behind?
So he filled her house with gay divines,
Gifted and great and learned;
And the plain old men that preached the Cross
Were out of their company turned.

You give too much to the poor, said the World,
Far more than you ought to do;
If the poor need shelter and food and clothes,
Why need it trouble you?
Go, take your money and buy rich robes,

THE KIND LITTLE WAGON

"Here, Bobby," called mother to her little son, as he was hauling his little wheelbarrow, "run over to the new grocery and get me some soap."

Bobby came back beaming.

"O mother, he's the nicest old man with the funniest name. Guess what it is."

"Joke?" asked mother, gravely, "or monkey? Those are the funniest things I know."

"Oh, now, mother, you know I didn't mean funny that way. I meant queer. The first part is the last part, but the last part is not always the first part.

"Why, that is queer!" owned his mother. "I could never guess it in the world."

"It's Rainwater!" cried Bobby; "but he declares he's not soft."

Mother laughed. "He must be a jolly old fellow."

He was. In a week all the kiddies in the neighborhood knew him for a friend. One day when Bobby went to buy something the old man said: "Young man, you got a wagon?"

"No, sir," Bobby answered; "but I can carry a lot in a basket."

"Thanks, sonny," said the old man, patting his shoulder; "but I don't want you to do an errand. Look here."

He drew out from behind some barrels a bright red wagon all trimmed with gold.

"Here's a wagon a lady left with me. Now she writes she won't be back, and for me to give the wagon to somebody. She says it is a kind little wagon and I must give it to some one who will keep it so"

"I'll try," said Bobby, not quite understanding.

"Then, you'll do," answered the old man, and he put the tongue into Bobby's hand.

After Bobby had showed the wagon to mother, he sat down on the back step to think.

"A kind little wagon!" he said over to himself, and sat looking at it for some minutes; then he jumped up quickly.

"I know! I know!" he cried. "A kind little wagon must do kind things. Course it can't—by itself—so I must help it."

He looked around eagerly. There lay a pile of wood and a stack of kindling. The very thing! Bobby piled the wagon full of wood, and pulled it carefully up to the low steps to the porch.

In a very little time he had the woodbox full and the kindling-basket overflowing. After a little he heard mother go into the kitchen.

"Oho!" she cried. "What good brownie has been at work here?"

"The kind little wagon," laughed Bobby. "Is there anything else it can do for you?"

"Yes, indeed!" cried mother, "and I'm so glad. I want a bag of flour, and I was wondering how I was going to get it."

So off went Bobby and the wagon, and soon the flour was bumping up the back steps.

"My!" cried mother, "it's mighty nice to have a little son that knows how to keep a kind little wagon!"

Bobby grinned happily, and asked: "Can you spare us a few minutes now, mother?"

"Yes, indeed," she answered.

So off Bobby and the wagon whizzed, through the back yard to the grocery.

He was just in time. The old man was piling up a lot of things into a bag for a dear little old white-haired lady, who didn't look at all able to carry them.

"Grannie Snow! Wait;" called Bobby, as she was trying to gather them up. "Here's a kind little wagon to take your things home."

"Well, well, well!" she laughed. "I didn't know there was anything like that around."

As they went on to the house, Bobby told her all about it. When she had thanked him, and given him a cooky, she suddenly cried, "Oh! Oh!" and Bobby knew that she had thought of something fine.

"Did you know that Tommy Jenkins has sprained his ankle so badly that he hasn't walked for a week? I just know he'd like a ride in a kind wagon."

Bobby waved his hand, and Tommy waved back, and called: "Hello!" And in less than a dozen wags of a dog's tail, Tommy's mother had put a pillow in the wagon, and Tommy was off for a ride.—Publisher Unknown.

WHAT A CHILD DID

Some children were gathering flowers to send to a hospital. One little girl had no garden to gather them from, but she went into the country and picked a bunch of wild flowers. Then she wrote on a label and tied it on, "I am the Lord thy God, and him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out." Her bunch was put in the bottom of the basket and sent with the other more beautiful flowers.

They arrived safely and were all distributed to the patients in the wards except this one. A lady thought of a man she knew in her district outside called "Infidel Jack," lying sick in a top room of a house.

She went straight to his miserable room, knocked at the door and went in. He was dozing. She held the flowers over his face. He opened his eyes, gave her a look, and in a gruff voice said, "Who sent this?" "God," said the lady, and quietly left him.

Next day "Infidel Jack" said to his wife, "Go and ask my old companions to come and see me." She went and asked them to come, wondering whatever he wanted them for.

"Mates," said he, "I have sent for you because I want to tell you though I've lived an infidel I die a Christian, and I'll tell you how and why. As I was lying here I thought if there is a God I will put Him to the test. They say He hears and answers prayers. I thought what unlikely thing can I ask for? and I said flowers and I prayed for them. Yesterday a lady came in with a bunch of sweet-smelling flowers. I asked her who sent it, and she said God did.

"Well, mates, I did enjoy that sweet smell of the country in this hole of a room. I saw a label tied on with writing upon it, and what do you think it said? 'I am the Lord thy God, and him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out.' I came to Him, and as sure as you stand there He has received me and pardoned me. I know it, and if I've lived a free thinker I die a Christian.

"Mates," he went on, "if you won't believe the Bible, believe me, your old chum. You say you will only believe what you see; well, you can see me. I tell you solemnly, I've had such peace and joy since the Lord Jesus came to me as I've never had befor. My only trouble is that I can't live to win some of you."—Youthful Days.

THE MISSING FIVE CENTS

Holding out his hand for the change, John's employer said: "Well, my boy, and did you get what I sent you for?" "Yes, sir," said John; "and here is the change, but I don't understand it. The lemons cost 28 cents and there ought to be 22 cents change, but there's only 17, according to my count."

"Perhaps I made a mistake in giving you the money." "No, sir; I counted it over in the hall to be sure it was right."

"Then perhaps the clerk made a mistake in giving you the change." But John shook his head. "No, sir; I counted that, too. Father said we must always count our change before leaving a store."

"Then how are you going to account for the missing five cents? How do you expect me to believe such a queer story as that?" John's cheeks grew red, but his voice was firm. "I don't account for it, sir. All that I know is that it is so." "Well, it is worth a good deal in this world to be sure of that. How do you account for that five-cent piece that is hidden inside your coat sleeve?" John looked down quickly, and caught the gleaming bit with a cry of pleasure. "Here you are! Now it is all right. I couldn't imagine what had become of that five-cent piece. I was certain I had it when I started from the store to return."

"There are two or three things that I know now," Mr. Brown said, with a satisfied air. "I know you have been taught to count your money in coming and going, and to tell the exact truth, whether it sounds well or not—two important things for an errand boy. I think I'll try you, young man, without looking further."—Publisher Unknown.

"ALL THAT BELIEVE"

There is not a single child of Adam who may not know the power of death in Christ, and receive the reconciliation which it wrought. And on the ground of this accomplished reconciliation, forgiveness is proclaimed to all without reserve or equivocation.

But it is only the "all that believe" who are justified; and if it be demanded, why, beneath the supremacy of boundless love and almighty power, the few, and not the many should be saved, we can but fall back upon Divine sovereignty, and exclaim, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out!"—Sir Robert Anderson, K. C. B.

ANGELS AMONG THE TREE-TOPS

A Christian lady living in Michigan was sick with lingering consumption.

Her physician, with whom she had had many talks on the subjects of religion, was a professed infidel and did not believe in any hereafter; but the consistent life of this godly woman made a deep impression upon him and he had utmost confidence in her integrity.

Knowing that the time of her death was drawing near, he obtained a promise from her that if there was anything in the Christian's hope of immortality, she would leave him a token of some kind.

One day as he drove over the hill opposite her home, he heard most beautiful singing in the tops of the trees which surrounded the house, and plainly recognized her voice among the others, as enchanting strains were borne upon the air and wafted toward him. He heard the hymn beginning:

"O how happy are they, 20
Who the Saviour obey,
And have laid up their treasures above:
Tongue can never express
The sweet comfort and peace
Of a soul in its earliest love."

The doctor alighted from his buggy, went to the house, and found that the lady had just died. He was thoroughly convinced of the reality of religion and immediately gave his heart to God.—Light and Life Evangel.

THE BLESSEDNESS OF GIVING

A few days after I entered my first pastorate, an old Scotch farmer was introduced to me as one of the deacons of my church. Being interested to know the kind of church officials I was to have, I inquired about this man. I was told that he had lived alone since the death of his wife two years before, that he paid one-fifth of the current expenses and missionary gifts of the local church, and that he had contributed generously to many religious and charitable enterprises outside his community.

After I met this good man, a laborer in a neighboring village, whose family depended on his wages for a livelihood, suffered a long illness. But the grocer and the landlord continued to be paid, and before long it leaked out that the old Scotch deacon was responsible for this. At another time a poor man's house with its contents was destroyed by fire, and the old Scotchman furnished beds and clothing for the stricken family. In this way he filled his days with generous deeds.

Yet some said that he was close-fisted. I did not understand this until, one day, he invited me to his unpretentious little house for dinner. To my great surprise, there was scarcely enough food to satisfy my hunger. But there was no apology—except that when he could sell eggs for more than two cents each, he did not eat them, because it was not profitable. After the meal, we sat on the veranda and chatted; I learned that it had been the habit of his life to spend very little on himself. With singular impressiveness he talked about the virtues of simplicity and self-denial. Then, suddenly sitting erect, he said with a noble pride, "Because I have not spent much on myself, I have been able to give a big share to God and humanity." Then he sat gazing quietly out into the dusk, with the light of peace and joy on his face. And I recalled the words of the Master: "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it."—Christian Index.

BE AN OPTIMIST

Be an optimistic optimist,
No matter how you feel;
If doubt or gloom assails you,
Work on with greater zeal.

Think always of the sunshine
Behind the lowering sky;
You can rise above depression
If you let ill-thought go by.

It is better to be pleasant
Than to wear a frowning face;
All good things work together
To promote a happy race.

What you think within your heart
Will shape your life each day;
The antidote for worry
Is to smile dull care away.

The pessimistic pessimist
Is complaining all the while;
Unhappily he does not know
The ace-value of a smile.

Be an optimistic optimist,
Try today this simple test:
If doubt or gloom assails you,
Just smile your very best.

FRIENDS

One of life's choicest blessings is friendship. It is unfortunate when this relationship is strained. Things often happen that have a tendency to make us doubtful of those who have been the loudest in their protestations of affection for us. Let us put these doubts behind us as something unworthy of us. Rouchefoucauld declared: "It is more shameful to be distrustful of our friends than to be deceived by them." He was quite right. Few who call themselves friends will deceive us. Our suffering at their hands will not be great. On the other hand, our loss will be irreparable if we allow suspicion to reign in our hearts. It will make us unjust to our fellowmen. It will curse our lives. There will be no more quiet times and holy places for us. Better be simple-minded and let people take advantage of you than to have a doubting mind and to blieve nobody worthy of confidence. Many times we have been deceived by people, but we have had a good time serving them. We do not plan to be skeptical about the next man who calls on us simply because the last man who called was a rascal.—The Watchman-Examiner.

THE CHRISTIAN GIVER

Theoretically, the Christian enjoys giving. Practically, most Christians do nothing of the kind. If they did, pastors' salaries and mission boards' appropriations would take big jumps; and charities and reforms would vastly extend their labors. The joy of the Lord is our strength, and the lack of that joy, as manifest in stinginess, is the appalling weakness of the church of Christ.—Amos R. Wells.

The Church Walking With the World

And horses and carriages fine,
And pearls and jewels and dainty food,
And the rarest and costliest wine.
My children they dote on all such things,
And if you their love would win,
You must do as they do, and walk in the ways
That they are walking in.
The Church held tightly the strings of her purse
And gracefully lowered her head,
And simpered, I've given too much away;
I'll do, sir, as you have said.

So the poor were turned from her door in scorn
And she heard not the orphan's cry;
And she drew her beautiful robes aside,
As the widows went weeping by.
The sons of the World and the sons of the Church
Walked closely hand and heart,
And only the Master, who knoweth all,
Could tell the two apart.
Then the Church sat down at her ease and said:
I am rich, and in goods increased;
I have need of nothing, and naughto do
But to laugh and dance and feast.
The sly World heard her, and laughed in his sleeve,
And mockingly said aside,
The Church is fallen—the beautiful Church—
And shame is her boast and pride!

The angel drew near to the mercy-seat,
And whispered, in sighs, her name;
And the saints their anthems of rapture hushed
And covered their heads with shame,
And a voice came down through the hush of heaven,
From Him who sat on the throne,
I know thy work, and how thou hast said,
I am rich; and hast not known
That thou art naked and poor and blind
And wretched before My face;
Therefore, from My presence I cast thee out,
And blot thy name from its place!

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

THANK-OFFERING HELPS

I have just this week received a new supply of Thank-offering boxes and envelopes, which I will be glad to send you, as many as you want. Just drop me a card—they are free. And for our "thank you" to our Heavenly Father for His mercies and goodness to us let's make a real Thank-offering.

The money received goes for World Service, not just one little part but to help support our entire church program. So let's put forth an effort and do our best.

Also I received a felw extra copies of the September Missionary Record, containing the Pageant, "All In a Day's Work," by Mrs. H. W. Maier, and suggested for use in connection with the Thank-Offerring program. I will be glad to send a copy to any one desiring it.

Let me hear from you if you need any further assistance, Auxiliary Secretaries of Thank-Offering or churches where there are no auxiliaies.

RAIN

Rain, rain,
Beautiful rain,
Pour you down,
I'll not compain.

Rain, rain,
Sweet refrain,
I like to hear
Your song again.

Shed your tears
You weeping sky,
The earth is glad
And so am I!

I like to hear
Pattering rain,
Gone so soon,—
Come again!

"RIVER JOY" MOLASSES

The "River Joy" referred to by Dr. Andrews in his letter in the Herald last week was molasses, being a special brand manufactured by Bro. J. F. Hunter, of Pleasant Hill Church, West Forsyth Charge. Dr. Andrews failed to state that the "River Joy" was molasses, the good country sorghum, made at the modern steam plant owned and operated by Bro. Hunter and located near the Yadkin River; thus the name, "River Joy." As stated by Dr. Andrews, Mrs. Hunter presented to him and the writer a nice supply of the sweet product, for which we are thankful. This comment is offered as an explanation to the readers of the Herald who may have wondered what "River Joy" indicated.

LOWDERMILK FAMILY REUNION

Asheboro, N. C.,
Sept. 25, 1933.

The annual Lowdermilk family reunion was held at Flag Springs Methodist Protestant chuchh, south of Asheboro, on Sunday, September 24th, with the largest crowd present that has yet attended this onnual gathering.

The present church, whihh is the fourth building on this same ground was filled for the exercises. Here, nearly a century ago the first church was built, and from the beginning of its history the Lowdermilk family has been active in its work. In the ancient cemetery sleep many of the early members of this family.

The devotional and song services were followed by the historical address, which was delivered by Dr. W. T. Whitsett, of Whitsett, who has collected a fund of early history that proved interesting to those present.

He traced the family history from its origin in the kingdom of Bavaria, Germany, west of the Rhine river, and along the Lauter river, which serves to give the family name. Lauter -pure, and milch—milk, making the original family name signify, "pure milk," so named, doubtless, from the great dairy interests of the region.

From original records now on file in the State Library at Harrisburg, Penn., he showed the date of arrival of the earlier members of the family: Wilhelm Lautermilch on the ship Brittania, Sept. 21, 1731. This early comer was accompanied by George William and Magdelena Lautermilch. On Sept. 26, 1732, these were followed by Johann and Jorn Lautermilch, who came across in the ship Mary. In 1736 Gottfried Lautermilch arrived, and in 1749 Jacob Lautermilch. These earlier arrivals were followed by many others at later perriods.

Dr. Whitsett gave a brief history and description of early Randolph county; the various several racial and religious peoples that first settled in Randolph; this he followed by the story of the pre-Revolutionary period; the days of the Regulators; the Revolutionary struggle and the part of this particular family in the various incidents with which they were connected. He spoke of the war records of Jacob and John Lowdermilk and others in the Revolution; later of the Civil War records of Capt. Hadly Lowdermilk and Col. W. H. Lowdermilk and others.

The historical address was received with deep interest, and will serve as a fine background for the publication of the family history which is now well under way, and which it is hoped may be ready for the printers within a year or two.

Blanks were distributed throughout the audience for the collection of records of various family lines; these are to be filled in and returned and made a part of the family records.

The large crowd, the long tables of picnic style dinner, and the interesting exercises made it a day to be remembered by the widely scattered relatives and friends gathered for the occasion. Visitors were present in large numbers from all surrounding points—High Point, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Sanford, Burlington, etc.

Six Weeks To Conference

There are just six Sundays between now and the time for meeting of the Annual Conference. What is done for the Children's Home this Conference year must be done quickly. An offering in money from every Sunday school in the Conference will help wonderfully. Please remember us that much. Thank you.

Harvest Home Offering

Many harvest home offerings are being planned. Your church and charge will gladly join in this offering for the Home if some one will only lead in it. Let the Sunday school superintendents, Children's Home solicitors and Children's Home secretaries of Auxiliaries work together in the churches and charges for a good harvest home offering.

Coupons

October is the last month of the present contest for the largest number of coupons sent in by any one church organization. Please collect and send in as rapidly as possible. You thus greatly help with very little cost to you. Dr. C. W. Bates holds $5.00 to be given to those sending in the greatest number of coupons before November 1st.

We thank you for your help in any way.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON, Superintendent.

—Rev. M. P. Chambless has been in with rheumatism for a few weeks. Bro. Lowdermilk preached for him last Sunday. Pray for his early recovery.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

First Church, Concord.—As vacation time is about over, we are hoping to settle down again and get our minds more on church work. Seems as though our folks have been on vocations or else it has been too warm to get to church much. Last Sunday the chairman of the stewards reported that they had raised most all the Conference budget. We hope to get all paid in full before Conference. We feel sure our pastor would be proud to report his church paid in full before Conference.

Mr. Morgan will leave this week to help Mr. Suits in a revival meeting. Mr. B. F. Waddell will have charge of the Wednesday evening prayer meeting.

We are very glad to have the junior choir sing for us on Wednesday night. Last Wednesday night four of the junior Christian Endeavor children, two boys and two girls, sang two duets for us. They also sang for us last Sunday night at the preaching service.

We were proud to see some visitors in our congregation Sunday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Gray, from Randleman, N. C. We hope they will worship with us often and if they stay in Concord we hope they join with us. Also glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Hatly, from Friendship, with us Sunday night. They are living in Concord now and we hope these folks will feel at home and worship with us often.

It seems good to see Grandma Sides in our congregation. Since she is living at Friendship she doesn't get back to Concord very often. We miss her so much. She was one of our faithful members and we are always glad when she visits back in Concord.

We are glad to see Miss Josephine Fant back . She spent the summer in Townville, S. C., with her grandmother, Mrs. Theo Myers.

Mrs. P. H. Scarboro is spending a week at the World Fair. We hope the trip and different scenes will help her. She is so sad all the time since the deaths of her boys.

Mrs. L. M. Burris and children and Mrs. T. H. Scarboro spent last week at Lake Wacamaw.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Reece announce the birth of a daughter, September 22nd. The baby has been named Carol June. Mrs. Reece, before her marriage, was Miss Ila Newton. Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Honeycutt also have a new daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Horace Sides have a son.

Next Sunday will be promotion day in our Sunday school and several of our Cradle Roll babies will be promoted, but if the mothers will bring their new babies our class won't be off so much.

Mrs. P. J. Mann is still very sick and she desires the prayers of all Christian people.

Mrs. R. C. Brown has been sick for several weeks. We miss her so much at church. We know she never misses unless she is sick.

Mr. Robert Gray is home from the hospital and is able to be up some of the time.

We are gald to see Mrs. Margaret Teeter Smith back at church. She has been to the hospital for an operation for appendicitis.

We were glad to see Miss Beulah Wylie at church Sunday night. Miss Wylie does not get to come to church often, as she has been sick so long. She spent a long time in the sanatorium for T. B., but she is gaining some now and we hope she gets able to be out more.

Our missionary societies are very busy now, and we hope to raise all our budget. Circle No. 3 had a chicken supper last Friday night and folks that missed that supper sure did miss something good. They gave all you could eat for 25 cents. They made about $23.00 and that sure will help them on their part of the budget. Circle No. 1 made $14.25 when they had the Tom Thumb Wedding and hat sale and foot measuring. There are more circles and they hope to do something soon to raise some money on their part.

Our Ladies Aid Society is still alive and they had a clipping party and made $8.00

Our traveling basket has not returned yet, so we don't know how much money we will make with it,but w hope by the time it returns we will be surprised to see how much money it will bring.

Brower Chapel, Richland Circuit.—Browers church is still working and trying to accomplish something for the Master. We are veryglad indeed that we have a new piano at our church, which aids us in our singing.

Our circle meetings are worth while to us, as we have had our church re-painted, as well as getting the piano.

The attendance at our church and Sunday school is showing some improvement. Our pastor continues to bring helpful messages, which are very inspiring. Rev. and Mrs. Q. L. Joyner have done lots of work in our communities as, well as our churches. They have organized our circles. Our last meeting was held with Mrs. Arlie Pugh. We will meet with Mrs. Earl Vestal the first Thursday in October. The young people's society will meet Friday night of this week with Miss Irene Brown.

We had much church business to transact at our church last Sunday .

Asheville.—Rev. J. S. Williams filled the pulpit Sunday morning in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Carroll, who is assisting in a special meeting at Henderson. Mr. Williams took as his subject, "Christ in Our Midst." Mr. Frank Mann, a member of the Mount Zion M. P. Church, and principal of the Red Oak High School, made an interesting talk at the mid-week service last Wednesday.

Rev. T. M. Johnson conducted a week of special meetings in August. His messages were indeed inspiring and, as always, his life exemplifies his teachings. It was a great pleasure to have Dr. Johnson with us, and he was cordially received into the homes of the members.

The interest in our Sunday school continues. The Fawcett Bible class will hold its business and social meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Foster on Montford Avenue.

Promotion Day will be observed next Sunday in the Children's Department. All parents are invited to attend the Sunday school session to hear the special program which will be given at the opening. This department has had charge of the closing exercises of the Sunday school for the past month.

The Young Ladies' Class is busily engaged in completing its pledge to the church budget. Mrs. Roby Wilson entertained with a benefit party Tuesday, September 19, at her home on Hillside street. Thirty-five young people attended this successful affair. Mrs. D. L. West entertained the Young Ladies' and Young Men's Classes Sunday morning, September 10, with a breakfast. The meal was served in the yard around an outdoor furnace and proved a most delightful occasion.

The Intermediate Class gave a masquerade party at the church last week. About 40 young people attended. Miss Margaret Fawcett, teacher of this class, was in charge.

The annual Sunday school picnic under the direction of Mr. H. O. Charnock was successful despite a downpour of rain. The affair was held at the Montford Park pavillion.

The C. E. Societies are showing considerable interest. The Senior Society has had very interesting discussions on the question of Prohibition during the past month. One hundred and sixty-five dollars has been raised on the $200 pledge to the church budget and the Endeavorers are busy finding ways in which to secure the balance. A series of benefit parties have been held and will continue through October. A Progressive Supper was held last Friday evening with a large number attending. Courses were served at the church, and at the homes of the Misses Fawcett on Rosewood Avenue, the Misses McIntire on Merrimon Avenue, and the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Patton in Broadview Park. Mr. and Mrs. Patton had built a large bonfire behind their house and the last course, consisting of pie a la mode was served. Games and marshmallow-toasting then followed.

The September meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held at the home of Mrs. Y. D. Eller on Ann street with a large attendance. Plans were made to raise funds to apply on the budget of the church. The October meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. S. Williams in Norwood Park, with the Auxiliary from Weaverville as guests of our organization. Mrs. C. B. Baker will lead the devotional program.

Mrs. Williams entertained with an informal tea Thursday, September 7, honoring Misses Dorthea Andrews, Mary Ward Johnson, and Mary Crawford, who were guests for a week of Miss Josie McNeill at her home in West Asheville.

A number of the church members were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Moore recently at a weiner roast held at the home of Mr. Moore's brother at Mills River. The group motored out and enjoyed a delightful evening around a camp-fire.

Miss Louise Hanner has gone to Berea College, Berea, Ky., where she will be assistant librarian.

Mrs. L. M. Joyner and daughter, Miss Wennonah Joyner, have moved to 176 Merrimon Avenue from Kelinworth Park.

Mrs. U. S. Miller was welcomed back Sunday after an extensive visit to her daughters and son in New York City, Canada, and Detroit, Michigan.

Miss June Hornaday, Mrs. George Foster and children, and Mr. L. S. Neville have attended the Chicago Fair during the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Younginer and family have moved here from Charlotte and will make Asheville their home. We have greatly missed them during the past two years and are happy to ahve them with us again. Their address is 41 Henrietta street. Miss Barbara Younginer has accepted a teaching position in the eastern part of the state.

Miss Elsie Drake, president of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society, was married recently to Mr. Joe Davis, of this city, at Greenville, S. C. The congratulations and best wishes of their many friends have been extended to this splendid couple, both of whom are members of our church.

Mr. Howard Carter was selected as delegate to the Annual Conference at an election held last Sunday.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—Miss Norma C. Brown, vice-president of the Flying Squadron, dry force organization, and editor of the "National Engineer," delivered an address on "Prohibition and Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment" at the eleven o'clock service in our church yesterday. The service was sponsered jointly by Lebanon and the Church of Christ. The North Main Street Baptist congregation was invited to worship with us also. A goodly number attended. The auditorium of our church was packed to its fullest capacity with interested hearers. Miss Brown is a speaker of note. She speaks with power and our people feel highly favored in the opportunity to hear her. May God exceedingly prosper her in this most important line of work that she has pundertaken for the saving of our fair land from the bondage of strong drink.

Next Sunday is Rally Day with us. A special program is being prepared for the evening service. The public is cordially invited to attend, and of course the membership is urged to be present.

A series of cottage prayer meetings are being held in various homes this week. Please listen for the announcements of these meetings for next week and plan to attend. We need greatly to spend much time in prayer at all times. Most especially do we need prayer right now in praparation for our revival services which will begin in our church on the second Sunday in October.

First Church, Lexington.—Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, filled his regular appointment at the eleven o'clock hour, bringing an uplifting message, entitled, "Show Us the Father." A capacity congregation was present for this service. There was no evening service at First Church, due to a union meeting at the Carolina Theatre, where Mr. Henry Louis Smith spoke on maintaining the eighteenth amendment.

On Sunday evening the Chrisian Endeavors met with a good attendance and voted unanimously to uphold the eighteenth amendment, thus proving that the statement that the youth of today is wet, is false.

On September 11, at 7:30 o'clock, the third quarterly conference for First Church and Mt. Carmel Church convened at First church. All reports were good and we expect to pay more on the Conference claims this year than ever before. The fourth quarterly conference will be held at Mt. Carmel.

Our pastor was away lasth week ,assisting in a revival meeting at Chapel Hill. He reports a good meeting. On Thursday evening the choir from First church visited Chapel Hill and sang several numbers.

Next Sunday a revival meeting will begin at First church. Rev. E. A. Bingham will be the engaged help. We desire the prayers of all Christian people that this may be the greatest revival ever held at First church.

Misses Electa Jarvis and Margaret Lee Swink spent the week-end in High Rock, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jarvis and family.

Our pastor and his mother enjoyed a week's vacation in Smokey Mountains first week of September.

Misses Margaret Lee Swink and Electa Jarvis, of Lexington, and Miss Beulah Jarvis and Mr. Grayson Lomax, of High Rock, attended the service at Chapel Hill Saturday evening.

Miss Georgia Etta Davis, who has graduated from the local high school last spring, has entered Averett Junior College, in Danville, Va.

MARGARET LEE SWINK, Reporter.

Union Chapel, Granville Sircuit.—The attendance at church Sunday was much better than it has been for quite a while. Mr. Spencer preached a most inspiring sermon, using as his text the second chapter of the Epistle of James, the latter part of the 18th verse, "Shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will show thee my faith by my works."

The quarterly communion services will be administered on the second Sunday in October, instead of on the fourth Sunday, because the election and installation of the new officers will be held on that day.

The District Missionary Rally will be held on next Saturday, September 30, at 1:30 o'clock, in Henderson. This embraces three districts and we hope to see a great number of our members present

The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary met with Miss Emily Floyd on Wednesday afternoon.

Let us pray that our church and missionary work may go forward rapidly.

Liberty, Liberty Charge.—The regular schedule of church services was resumed last Sunday. The Sunday school session, with W. M. Smith, superintendent, directing, opened at 9:45 with classes for all ages meeting in the different department class rooms.

At the 11 o'clock worship service the minister, Rev. Fred R. Love, used as his subject, "Letting Your Light Shine." His text was based on John 8:12: "Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." This sermon was deeply appreciated by the congregation. Mr. Love said in part: Some of the favorite sayings of Jesus were: "I am the Light," "I am the Life," "I am the Peace," "I am the Joy," "I am the Way," "I am the Vine, ye are the branches."

The light of God dispels the darkness and disappointment from our lives; it dispels gloom and sorrow. Christians only have this light.

The second Sunday in October will be Membership Day. We urge all members to attend. "Enter into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise."

If you, friend of mine, have never memorized the 100th Psalms, turn to that chapter and memorige it, it will be worth your time.

My first grade pupils, the higher first, in the Sanford graded school memorized that and other chapters perfectly.

Circle No. 1, Mrs. Clarence Highfill, chairman, will meet with Mrs. V. H. Dameron Wednesday afternoon. Circle No. 2, Mrs. Fred R. Love, chairman, will meet with Mrs. J. B. York.

The nominating committee oppointed by our pastor are: Dr. A. D. Gregg, R. L. Elkins and Mrs. J. N. Isely.

Secretaries for memberhip day are: Miss Helen Isley, Miss Margaret King Shepard and Miss Helen Long Hanner.

The Woman's Auxiliary will sponsor a musical entertainment in the school auditorium Saturday evening at 7:30.

First Church, High Point.—An unusually sad death occurred here Sunday evening at 8 o'clock at the Burrus Memorial Hospital, when Mrs. Fred W. McPherson, wife of one of our well-known members, and the mother of four small children, passed away, after an illness of four months. She was only 30 years of age, having been, before her marriage, Miss Girleta Warford, daughter of Mrs. T. V. Warford. Born in Lexington, N. C., September 27, 1903, she and Mr. McPherson were married in 1926, and have made their home here since that time. She was a member of the First Baptist church, and also of the Auxiliary of the American Legion. Funeral services will be conducted by the pastor, Dr. A. B. Conrad, assisted by Rev. Roy I. Farmer, at the Baptist church, Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Members of Andrew Jackson Post No. 87, of the American Legion are asked to asssemble at the church to attend the last rites in a body. The following friends will serve as pallbearers: Messrs. Horace S. Haworth, J. N. McCrary, Lester B. Teague, W. H. Jordan, J. W. Greenway, Grover H. Jones, Mike Shiplett and Dixie Griffith. Mrs. McPherson is survived by her husband, Fred W. McPherson, manager of the Sunshine Laundry, four small children, Fred, Jr., Charles, Julia and Girleta, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. V. Warford, two brothers, Messrs. F. L. and T. E. Warford, and a sister, Miss Marjorie Warford, all of this city. To these heart-broken parents, young husband, the small sons and daughters, who are too young to realize what it means to be motherless, the fond brothers and sister, the sincere sympathy of a large number of friends, goes out in this dark and trying ordeal. May the God of all grace comfort and bind up their sore and wounded spirits.

The autumn schedule of services was begun last Sunday. The Sunday school met at 9:45 and will close at 10:40 o'clock, under the superintendency of Mr. John Whitesell. The morning service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, who delivered an eloquent and inspiring message from I. Cor. 6:19-20, 'For ye are bought with a price." He said in part that in no civilized country in the world today do you hear of buying and selling human chatel. Purchase power is only one way of slavery. The price of life was the shed blood of Jesus. Out of gratitude for what God has done for us we should act as if we were the only one in whom God could depend. We need to learn a systematic mode of living and giving. The majority of us give what is left over after satisfying our selfish appetites and pleasures. A recent survey in North Carolina shows that the average cost of upkeep of an automobile is $229. In this membership at least 150 cars are owned and operated. Last year a budget of something more than $1,300 was raised, which is about one-third the amount spent on cars. One thousand Ingersolls cannot do more to break down Christianity than church members who fall into sin and are indifferent to the claims of the church. Every great ideal has the same price. The stewartship of life means that the kingdom of God must be put first. Your business and mine is to do what is right and leave the rest to God. No life is wasted that tries to reproduce the spirit of the Master. Would you have the comfort of religious hope in your declining years? The sunset takes the color of the deeds and thoughts of youth and middle age.

> "Count that day lost whose low, descending sun > Views from thy hand no worthy action done."

At this morning service Miss Beulah Moton presided at the organ, and the choir sang very beautifully "More Love to Thee, O, Christ." The evening service at 8 o'clock was resumed for the fall months, and the pastor spoke on the theme, "Uncrowned, Yet Crowned."

On Monday evening there was a special session of the Board of Stewards.

The Wednesday evening prayer meeting, which has been taking a summer vacation, will be resumed, Circles 1 and 2 sponoring this service. Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell is chairman on music program. Mrs. R. S. Russell will greet all attendants, and Mrs. A. A. York will have charge of flowers for this occasion.

Next Sunday, October 1, Rally and Promotion Day will be observed in the Sabbath school.

On Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 19, Mrs. Jones Burns was hostess to the local Women's Christian Temperance Union at her home, 1000 English St. The meeting was opened with the reading of Psalm II and prayer by Mrs. C. L. Whitaker. The election of new officers was held, and resulted as follows: president, Mrs. R. M. Andrews; first vice-president, Mrs. J. W. Hedrick; second vice-president, Mrs. J. A. Eskelman; secretary, Mrs. Jones Burns; treasurer, Mrs. Claude A. Smith and corresponding secretary, Mrs. Henry A. White. Delegates were elected to represent the Union at the State Convention, to be held at Spencer October 18-19. Twenty members and two visitors were present.

Ae the September Court of Honor, held at Wesley Memorial M. E. church for the Boy Scouts of High Point district, an Eagle award was presented to Howard Byrd, a member of Troop 10, located at the Children's Home. He has completed six years in Scouting, during which time he has been an active member of the troop, which is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of High Point.

It is a source of great joy to many friends to know that Mrs. R. I. Farmer, wife of our pastor, who has spent the past six months in Tucson, Arizona, taking treatment under Dr. Riggins of the Thomas-Davis Clinic, will leave today for High Point, arriving here Friday in time to spend her birthday, October 1, with her family. Her health is greatly improved.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Koonce announce the arrival of a son, Jackson David, Jr., Sept. 21, at the Burrus Memorial Hospital. Congratulations are extended by many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Parker, of West Palm Beach, Fla., are guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin R. Hammer, on Steele Street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Welch, Jr., Misses Ruth and Elizabeth Welch motored to Chapel Hill Sunday to visit Robert Guaniro, who is a student there.

Messrs. Horace Haworth, Lewis E. Teague and Rupert T. Pickens went to Greensboro Sunday afternoon to attend the funeral services in the First Presbyterian church of Mr. Edward S. Parker, Jr., prominent lawyer of Greensboro and North Carolina.

C. L. Gray, Jr., will leave next week for Duke University, Durham, to take a course in the Medical School. All members of First church regret to lose this popular and well-loved young man, whose splendid voice has added so much to the church services, and which he has so unstintedly given for the pleasure of his friends and the worship of his Master. The good wishes and prayers of countless friends follow him to his new work and studies.

English Street, High Point.—Due to the absence of our reporter for two months, you have not heard from our church.

Revival meeting begins at English Street on next Sunday, October 1. Rev. O. C. Loy will be the pulpit help. We are praying for and looking forward to an "old time revival."

On the second Sunday in October we will have the installation service for the newly-elected Sunday school officers and teachers. We believe the committee in charge has an interesting program planned.

On last Thursday night the C. E. Society had a business meeting at the home of Miss Myrtle Cates. Plans were made to make two quilts for the Children's Home, also to donate small useful articles. The society is sponsoring an "Expert Endeavor" class. Miss Tressie Candler, president, is teacher. Twelve members are enrolled.

* * *

Siler City C. E. Society.—Sunday night, September 24th, the Christian Endeavorers had a special program which proved to be a great event. Miss Minnie Cooper had charge of the program. Mrs. Pearlie Moore Lucas, of Asheboro, a former member of our society, was with us and led the devotionals, and was also instrumental in helping to make the occasion a success. The meeting was in the form of a post office meeting. Miss Sallie Smith had written to all former members who reside esewhere, asking them to write a word of greeting or encouragement to the society, and these letters were opened and read by Miss Minnie Cooper. These letters were much appreciated and enjoyed by everyone present, especially the one from Mr. Gibbs, as he had worked so faithfully while with us to help make our society what it is today. We thank everyone who contributed these good letters.

Miss Verda Shaw Fox sang very impressively "There Is a Green Hill Far Away" at this time. We were fortunate in having Rev. Kenneth Holt, a graduate of High Point College, with us, who discussed thoroughly the topic, "How May We Know When We Really Are Christians." We trust Mr. Holt can be with us again when convenient as we are always glad to have visitors who are interested in the C. E. work. Our pastor was with us also and made some very interesting remarks. Our president, Irvin Ellington, welcomed the visitors and thanked everyone who helped make the occasion a success. After this the Mizpah was repeated.

Bethany, Randolph Charge.—Our revival meeting has just closed at this place. Rev. B. M. Williams, of Orange Circuit, was the pulpit help. He brought to us splendid messages. I'm sure much good was accomplished.

A Ladies' Aid Society has been organized at this church with 30 members. Mrs. A. T. Allred is president and Mrs. Wade Routh is secretary and treasurer. We have placed a nice rug in the pulpit, and our next move will be to help raise our pastor's salary. I hope it can be done. Everyone seems interested and we are just praying we can pay out in full by the end of the Conference year. Our next meeting will be with our president on October 30. Our aim is to push forward and make our Society a success.

Our hearts were made sad by the death of Mrs. Cleta McFayden, of Greensboro. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Routh. When small she attended Sunday school at this place, but later the family moved to Greensboro. She leaves behind a kind husband, two small children, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her passing. Her body was laid to rest at this place beneath a mound of many beautiful floral tributes to await the resurrection morn.

Belmont, Mount Hermon Charge.—A very impressive self-dedication service was held at our church on Sunday, September 24. A large number of those present came to the altar and dedicated their lives to God, giving an offering to the service of God. This offering will go to the general church fund. After this ceremony our pastor, Rev. L. E. Mabry, preached an interesting sermon, taking as his text Amos 5:4, "Seek ye me, and ye shall live." Pastor Mabry reminded us of some of our evils of today. He told us that people are trying to get away from the idea that God knows all and sees all. We are worshiping idols today as they did back in olden times. We go through the form of worshiping God, but we let love of pleasure and other idols get into our lives. Amos, in the fifth chapter of Amos, told the people of his day about their evils, their dangers and their duties. We still have these same evils and dangers today. Pastor Mabry told us that our duties are Godliness, honesty, and seriousness. Some people have come to doubt God. How can we doubt God and turn our backs upon Him when we see Him working in our lives and nature every day? We know that there is a power higher than we are. The pastor told us to seek God, seek the good and to use our influence for God. We ought to be good Christians not only Sunday at church, but out in the world every day where people meet us and judge us. Let us be Christian ladies and gentlemen, above all, and let the world see that we are. Whatever our plans are we should be sure that God enters into them.

Our regular mid-week prayer meeting will be held Wednesday night at 7:30. Rev. L. E. Mabrey will be in charge, taking as his subject "How we got our Bible."

Our hearts are saddened by the death of Mrs. Fred York, who passed away at Rainey Hospital on Sunday, September 24.

Class No. 5 held its monthly meeting on Thursday evening, September 21, with Misses Alma Mae and Dorothy Hargis. About 18 members of the class were present. Miss Ollie Hinshaw had charge of the program. After a short business session the members had an enjoyable social hour together.

Rev. Mabry taught us some very interesting thoughts on the lesson. Everyone enjoyed his teaching very much.

First Church, Burlington.—We are sorry to report that our pastor, Dr. F. W. Paschall, has been confined to his home ill for the past week. However, he was able to resume his work Sunday .

We were indeed fortunate in having Dr. and Mrs. Dixon, High Point, with us Sunday morning. It was counted a very high privilege by every one, and especially Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Paschall, to have Dr. Dixon with us Sunday morning, at which time Emma Elizabeth Paschall, five-months-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Paschall, was christened. It would probably be of interest to know that other than christening the Paschall infant, Dr. Dixon performed the marriage ceremony of Mrs. Paschall's parents and also the marriage ceremony of Dr. and Mrs. Paschall. Dr. Paschall also stated that Mrs. Dixon had probably meant more to his life than any one else, because it was she who, at a revival service, urged him to give his life to Jesus Chris.

Following the christening service Dr. Dixon delivered a most interesting address. He used as the basis of meditation Psalm 8:5.

Dr. Paschall, pastor, delivered a wonderful message Sunday evening. He used as his subject "Foloow me." The many hearers were greatly inspired by this message.

Sunday, September 17 and 24, were set aside to raise money for the Annual Conference budget. Dr. Paschall stated that the offering for Sept. 17 was very good. We trust that Sunday, Sept. 24 offering was equally as liberal.

Siler City Church.—Since I have been confined to my room for the past six weeks and have not kept up with all the activities of the church, I hardly know what to report. Things have been moving along as usual, and quite a little has been accomplished. Our pastor told you about our church having a much-needed new dress of paint which we are all very proud of, and don't mind to own that this is "our" M. P. church. The Woman's Auxiliary was instrumental in making this possible as they contributed $110.00. The C. E. Society will erect a marker to the church in the very near future.

The Philathea Class will have a picnic on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Fox on Tuesday evening, September 26. We expect a good crowd and a good time. This class usually has the largest number present of any class in Sunday school. "We Do Things" is our motto, and "We go to Sunday School" is our motto also.

Our pastor has been faithful and filled all appointments unless hindered by sickness. It was a great pleasure to have him and Mrs. Isley in our home a number of times while we were sick. Nothing is more comforting than to have your pastor call when you are sick.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Clark, of Hope M. P. church , Bonlee, have had their membership moved to our church. We are very glad indeed to welcome these new members.

Joash Day was observed in our church on the third Sunday. The collection amounted to $29.00, which was very encouraging.

Our Sunday school is holding up fairly well for the summer months. Three of our young boys, Messrs. D. G. Fox, Hubert Stone, and John Robert Forrester, have been furnishing some very good music with their saxophones and violin.

MRS. J. A. COOPER, Reporter.

St. Paul.—Yesterday was Rally Day at our church. The evening service was given over to the children of the church, who did their part well. Mrs. D. I. Garner, Mrs. J. I. Walker and Miss Lillian Wade had the program in charge.

The work of our charge is progressing more satisfactorily this year than it has under the present pastor, this being my third year on this charge. The finances of the charge are much nearer up to date than they have been in the past two years at this time. We have paid about three and a half times as much on Annual Conference Budget already as we paid last year. There has been more paid in on the World Service than last year. And, of course, the pastor's salary is nearer up to date than in previous years.

Our fall revival meeting will begin on Monday night, October 2. Rev. J. R. Anderson, pastor of Albemarle M. P. church, will be our pulpit help. We are hoping and praying for a great revival.

The Sunbeam Missionary Band which is a group of little folks, came to the parsonage on Friday evening and pounded the pastor and family with several pounds of sugar. The leader, Miss Flossie Jones, deserves much credit for her faithful service to the children in this great work. Mrs. J. S. Wade, one of our faithful members, gave us pears. On September 20th we were taken with a great surprise when one of our members, Mrs. J. S. Leonard, came to the parsonage and stated that she had decided to show her appreciation to pastor and wife by giving them a piano.

For all these expressions of love to pastor and family we are thankful and most grateful.

D. I. GARNER, Pastor.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Slate

On Saturday, Sept. 17, death entered our community and took from it a beloved little friend, Mildred Slate, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Slate. Mildred was seven years of age. She was a member of the primary department in the Sunday smchool. Although Mildred was blind from birth, she enjioyed taking part in the programs of the Sunday school. She also took great pleasure in singing. Her favorite song was, "Jesus Loves Me." Mildred was sick only a week. Funeral services were held at the home on Sunday, September 18. Rev. C. H. Hill, pastor, conducted the services.

We express our sympathy to the parents and loved ones in this sad hour. May we each live better and be prepared to meet her when we are called beyond.

A precious one from us is gone,
Her face no more we see;
She has entered heaven above
To spend eternity.

We do not know or understand
Why God this one did call,
But we do know the Shepherd kind
Is watching o'er us all.

When we have crossed the shining river,
Reached the portal bright and fair,
There we hope to meet dear Mildred,
Singing with the angels there.

Some day, with tears all wiped away
We'll tread the golden street,
Oh, yes, in God's eternal day,
Dear Mildred there we'll meet.

Oh, the joy that we shall know,
In that home so bright and fair,
And our hearts will overflow
When we meet her over there.

Yes, again we hope to meet her,
Where sad partings never come,
For she's gone to join the angels
In that bright, celestial home.

MRS. J. A. BOWERS,
TRESSIE CAUDLE.

Lineback

Little Dewey Cleaborn Lineback, known as "D. C.," son of D. M. and Lillie McKnight Lineback, was born Nov. 19, 1928, and departed this life Sept. 20, 1933. His age was 4 years, 10 months and 1 day

Little D. C. was an unusually sweet child, and although having lived only a few short years, had made many friends. Everyone, both young and old, had learned to love him.

Several months ago D. C. was stricken with acute lukema, a malady which baffled all doctors' skill, and while everything available was sought for his relief and comfort, all proved to no avail. Eight different physicians treated or examined the child and endkeavored to find a remedy, but failed.

Now God in His all-wise Providence has

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

"A precious one from us has gone,
A voice/we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled."

Surviving are the parents, one sister, Audry Lineback, together with the grandparents and a host of relatives and friends, to mourn the departure of a dear child.

Funeral services were conducted from the home and Concord M. E. Church, South, near Lewisville, Forsyth county, September 22, by Rev. G. W. Fink, assisted by the writer.

LITTLE PROBLEM

If a hen and a half lay an egg and a half in a day and a half, how many eggs will six hens lay a day?

Answer 4.

The laying rate determined is two-thirds of an egg per hen per doy. Hence six hens would lay 4 eggs per day.

Peter Vuncanon was a notable friend and supporter of the M. P. Church in North Carolina and in general. He had the Herald follow him when he moved and he sought to establish public worship when he moved into an un churched community. He was also a liberal supporter of the Children's Home. Recently his descendants had a family reunion. They took up a collection which they divided equally between the Home and the Herald. We thank them heartily and also the people of Liberty for their contribution.

VOLUME XXXIX GREENSBORO, N. C., OCTOBER 5, 1933 NUMBER 45

A Book Worth Buying

Not all books are worth buying. We would like to read them, but, having read them, are through. Once is enough.

The book I refer to is not of that sort. It is a book for reference, that can be read and re-read with profit. The name of the book is "A History of the Christian Church." The author is Dr. L. P. Qualben. The publisher is Thomas Nelson & Sons, New York. The price is $2.50.

Those of us who have given any thought and study to church history, and it is one of the most interesting and helpful branches of religious literature and of history, have been wishing that someone would write a church history that was both concise and comprehensive. This book is that.

The book is divided into four sections: 1. The organic relation between Christianity and the Old Testament religion. 2. The formative period of the Early Church. 3. The underlying principles of the Reformation. 4. The development of the church in America. In this last section the author strikes out into a new path. The growth of denominational life in America is an interesting and inspiring phase of church history long neglected.

How did the church begin, and when, and where? What have been its problems and its progress through the years? Here is the answer interestingly told. And the telling is full of encouragement to those who are prone to be pessimistic concerning the future of the church. There have been other evil days. The church has survived, prospered, triumphed in the midst of and in spite of them.

I commend this book most heartily. C. W. Bates.

Should Not This Challenge Us?

Why such confusion over a matter that was settled twenty-five years ago in North Carolina and fourteen years ago throughout the nation?

We understand the reason for the liquor dealers' campaign. We are told that they lost a billion dollars the first five years after prohibition became effective in the United States. I wonder if we realize how much a billion dollars is! Foreign brewers and a few American ones and other capitalists hoping to shift their tax burdens pooled interests toward making prohibition ineffective in the United States and have spent millions to bribe the press into saying prohibition has failed—and can't be enforced—and various other propaganda. Just a little figuring shows that one million dollars if divided equally would give to every daily paper owner in the United States more than $47,000. It is almost too much to expect that a majority of these newspaper owners would be able to keep a stiff backbone and say "No" to a brewers' committee offering such a sum for the nullification, so far as they could bring it about, of the prohibition law. So we can understand the wetness of the press.

What we can't understand is why so many other folks have come so near to falling into the snare that will give foreign brewers and American capitalists a strangle-hold on the American people. We need not think that by repeal of the 18th amendment our tax burdens will be wiped out overnight, or that lawlessness and moral carelessness will end suddenly.

If every real friend of temperance would privately and dispassionately discuss the matter with one voter a day, giving logical reasons why the 18th amendment should be retained, it would perhaps be worth a great deal to the prohibition cause in North Carolina. The struggle against the return of the legalized liquor traffic is a struggle for a higher type of civilization and the fight to re-admit the liquor traffic is a fight to establish a lower order of civilization.

We need to watch our step before repealing the 18th amendment. For some it will mean stepping into graves.

The editor of one of the best periodicals I see says: "The 18th amendment is the greatest child welfare measure ever put into operation, excepting only the establishment of the Christian church and the founding of the common school. It holds that the right to be well-born, decently reared, and adequately educated transcends any so-called right based on harmful appetites." "Parents and teachers and ministers are on trial. Free government is on trial. Intelligence is on trial."

True humanity puts the child before the brewer. True wisdom means total abstinence. True patriotism puts country before self. Every individual can help our state toward better things by voting on November 7 "No Convention" and "Against Repeal." Mrs. R. M. Andrews.

GOD'S SCHOOL

What a school God keeps! What stubborn scholars, what dense minds, what rebellious hearts! Yet the school is not closed. Still the school goes on, still the scholars are reading and writing, praying and thinking. Now and again God visits the school and sheds tears over it, but still He will not close its doors, or withdraw his light from its windows.

THE MAKING OF CHRISTIANS

Paul became all things to all men, that by all means he might make Christians out of some of them. Whether warning with tears from house to house, or eloquently testifying to the power of the Gospel before the elite of Athens, or addressing a Jerusalem mob, or a court audience, the same lofty purpos is always manifest. Like John the Baptist and the old prophets, he called his august hearers to repentance. Some of them like Felix and Drusilla and Festus and Agrippa became terrified before his withering language.

Looking at the temper of many of his hearers, and considering their hostility to both him and his message, many attempts at preaching the Gospel before them would almost seem like casting pearls before swine. Such was far from true, as he was able to send greetings to the Philippians from the saints in Caesar's household. His labor even there was not in vain, nor his achievements to be despised. Incidentally, if Christians could be won and the Christian life lived in the atmosphere of Nero's household, they should be won anywhere and the Christian life lived in any environment.

Paul labored on the assumption that the Gospel of Christ is worthy of all acceptation, and that all men need Jesus. He called on kings on their thrones, and the men and women in the lowest walks of life to surrender their lives to the Lord Jesus Christ. He had no hesitancy and made no apology in calling all to repent of their sins, and accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour. The hopeless cases were few in Paul's ministry, and the number smaller that he turned over to Satan as incurable sinners. He, in fact, gave up none till atfer faithfully warning them and giving ample opportunity in which to repent. Bravely he bore the name of Christ before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel, as God's chosen vessel for that purpose.

Perhaps no minister of the Gospel ever found the making of Christians more difficult than did the Apostle Paul. Modern scholarship has almost wrecked a great revival meeting text for some of us. Agrippa's reply to Paul's appeal in our King James version of our Bible is, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." He is pictured as almost ready to enter the Christian fold. The popular hymn, "Almost Persuaded," so interprets the attitude of Agrippa. But most modern translators, exegetes and commentators have abandoned the King James version of this particular text. The American Standard version, called by G. Campbell Morgan the most reliable and best translation ever made, reads as follows: "With but little persuasion thou wouldest fain make me a Christian." Dr. James Moffatt's translation is: "At this rate, it won't be long before you believe you have made a Christian of me."

The best translations and interpretations picture Agrippa not ready to enter the Christian fold, but mocking Paul, hooting at religion, and really jesting and boasting what a task Paul would have in making a Christian out of him. The text is not wrecked, but applies more appropriately to different classes daily facing the would-be soul-winner. It matters little to us at this far-off day what really the attitude of Agrippa was toward the overtures of Paul. We do know that we find more sinners treating the Gospel appeals lightly, and stubbornly resisting all appeals, than we do those penitent and crying out, "Almost thou persuadest me to become a Christian."

There may be wide disagreement, even among Bible scholars, as to the attitude of Agrippa; but there is universal agreement as to his condition and position in life. He was not a Christian, and was outside the Kingdom of God. Whether he ever became a Christian and entered the Kingdom of God we don't know. We hope he did. We know that almost saved is lost; almost a Christian is unsatisfactory before God and unsafe for mankind. We hope his lack was not fatal, as the one lack of the rich young ruler. The soul yearns not to get almost home, but all the way.

W. A. LEDFORD.

GOOD AND EVIL IN THIS WORLD

I sometimes make a rapid review of my childhood years —recalling bright days and stormy weather, happy times and seasons of distress.

Occasionally, in those years, there was pure joy; and then there would come, later on, unrelieved sorrow. At times these were not far apart, and, occasionally, there would be laughter and tears within the narrow limits of a single breath.

Very much the same state of things has continued throughout all the years of my life. But my sensitiveness has been somewhat reduced as time has gone on. Grief is not so poignant as formerly, for I have learned to use many things to mitigate it. Nor is pleasure quite so full and unmixed, for I have learned that pain may be at the same time lurking near-by. I count it an advantage that I am increasingly able to take things "by and large"—to see how matters stand "on the whole."

No person can express in a single statement what we should think on these matters. Three lines of thought are helpful to me—perhaps they will be serviceable to my readers. Here they are:

1. Comfort and satisfaction are more widespread and permanent than are suffering and discontent. I can recall hard experiences—and I do at times—but pleasant memories come back to me more frequently and remain with me longer.

I see, in retrospect, green fields of growing wheat in the warm sunshine of spring—as I saw them on the Illinois farm of my childhood—and, later on, the billows of ripening grain as they chased each other over wide fields. This scene is more vivid—and I recall it more frequently—than the sad years when the wet fields were scattered over with unthreshed grain, sprouting and greening in the shocks, that did not get into condition between showers either to permit being threshed or put into stacks.

There were many times when we children could play all day without being disturbed by rain or snow or stormy wind. And we even learned to take advantage of wind and rain and snow—defeating them, and finding pleasure and health in combatting them and subduing them to our own joyous purposes.

Of course there is another way of taking things. A different attitude in life, one that never fails to make the worst of things. But isn't the gift of making the best of things within the reach of everyone? Can't all of us look at things in that way, if we will? It certainly means something to live in a world so constituted that we can pick and choose what things shall have a dominant and permanent influence over our lives and characters.

2. "We are workers together with God." Nature—or God—sometimes does a very good job at the making of flowers, fruits, and nuts. I have found certain specimens of wild strawberries, blackberries, mulberries, persimmons, plums, and paw paws that it would be very difficult to improve. There was a shell-bark hickory tree near our barn, a black walnut tree in a fence row, and a clump of hazel bushes in a neighbor's field, each of which bore nuts that I have never seen surpassed in their class. The wild rose, the crab-apple blossom, and the mountain laurel are perfect in their way. But our fruits, flowers, and nuts, generally, have been greatly improved because men—co-operating with God—have set themselves to selecting, breeding, grafting, budding, transferring to better locations, and thoroughly cultivating.

Various sorts of soils and minerals have been made by processes including violent earth heats, disturbances, and upheavals. Many of these were not finished ready for use by nature. Man had to take a hand. Even native copper, silver and gold must be discovered, brought to the surface, and separated from stone and other detritus. Copper, iron, zinc, and other ores have to be put through other no less violent processes in order to fit them for our uses. It is only in recent years that an inexpensive and efficient method of purifying aluminum has been perfected. Cotton, wool, linen, and silk are not found ready for use as clothing. Men have spent weary years perfecting ways of making desirable sorts of cloth; and the processes involved mean much strenuous labor on the part of factory operatives—and the materials, doubtless, would have complained of much unaccountable suffering had they been conscious of what was being done to them.

Should it be thought strange that in perfecting human character it is found necessary—as God and men work together—to employ hardship and suffering in achieving desired results? As I have watched men working in mines, mills, and factories—observing how necessary are intelligence, skill, and devotion to the task, and noted the weariness, and even pain, involved—I have felt that the same intelligence, skill, and devotion given to the task of making oneself into a fine man are not misplaced, and that this is not an unreasonable method of procedure. Surely any one of us should be willing to submit to the temporary afflictions involved for the sake of the character and social power that will result.

3. We should have faith in God, and in His good purposes concerning us. I am not unaware of the difficulties standing in the way of such a faith. I have known what it is to spend day after day, and week after week, in weakness and pain—seeing others at work, the world moving on, and I having no worth-while part in the enterprises. But the world was moving on, and others were doing things. Shouldn't that be some comfort to a right-minded person?

Some passages of Scripture puzzle us. For instance: "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." "The very hairs of your head are numbered." "Not a sparrow falleth to the ground without your Heavenly Father." "There shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling." The range of the Psalmist's observation must have been very limited indeed if he never saw children of a good man in want. Poverty and hunger have been too common and widespread to have escaped the eyes of the average onlooker. Hairs do fall out, people do become bald, violence is suffered by the innocent, sparrows and even children do suffer hunger and death in cold and storms. Harm is done by taking these passages too literally, just as we get on the wrong track if we endeavor to live too literally by such injunctions as: "Resist not him that is evil." "Give to every one that asketh thee." "Turn to him the other cheek also."

This world is not yet finished. Human society is not yet perfected. It is but natural to expect much of chaos and confusion in the midst of present efforts—human and divine—toward a better industrial and national life. In the World War people of all sorts of plans and ideals were asking God for help and claiming His promises. Men on both sides were suffering and dying, and they were pleading for aid for themselves and their loved ones. What could God do? He could not place Himself at the disposal of the kaiser or the king, nor any president or commander. What did God do? He did not lead the Allies to make a wise treaty at Versailles. He did not even establish harmonious relations among former Allied countries. Terrible chaos and suffering have resulted from the war and the so-called peace treaties. Confusion still prevails. One might ask: Doesnt God want peace in the world?

God's way does not seem to be to take things in His own hands and cause the things to come to pass that He thinks desirable—at any rate, not the things men think desirable, and in the way they would choose. Speaking reverently, in many of these things God does not seem to have any direct concern. He seems to stand to one side.

Men are here in charge. Of old time God hath "spoken unto the fathers in the prophets by divers portions and in divers manners." Men have discovered—under God's guidance—many truths and principles and methods that could be used to advantage to end war and to promote human brotherhood and industrial co-operation. Men have at hand the "makings" of a good and prosperous world-society. It is up to them to get busy making necessary changes and doing the things that need to be done.

The United States is now passing through—at least it is beginning—an industrial, moral, and social revolution the like of which we have not hitherto experienced. We should be able at such a time to look to strong Christian men in the churches for leadership. Our political leadership is not adequate. Some of the major methods by which it has reached power are anything but commendable—though there are signs that responsibility is somewhat sobering it. University men are proving helpful. If our Christian churches will get together—emphasizing essentials, eliminating hurtful competition, and setting their own houses in order—they can make a much needed contribution in moral and intellectual leadership. In this crisis, will the churches prove themselves deeply and broadly Christian? Luther K. Long.

"THOU SHALT NOT FOLLOW A MULTITUDE TO DO EVIL"

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon

It is now perfectly plain that if North Carolina votes for repeal the legislature will be hurried into a vote to repeal the Turlington act. To vote "No Repeal" is to vote to retain the Turlington act. To vote "Repeal" is to vote for the return of the saloon. For a saloon is a saloon no matter by what name it may be called, and the saloon with low license is what the liquor men want.

I will not join in the madness of the unthinking crowd that calls for liquor in the interest of economic recovery. The notion that waste of money in drink and the befuddling of the brain in liquor will bring prosperity to the nation is moral confusion and economic idiocy.

I wonder who it is that we shall encourage to drink all this liquor that they say will soon be sold. Shall we encourage our bankers to drink liquor? Do we want our railroad engineers to be under the influence of whiskey? Are we going to tell our chauffeurs that gin will enable them the more safely to drive our cars? Are we to persuade our housemaids to take up the drinking of beer? Do we want carpenters who have the habit of drink? Shall I urge upon my doctor just about to operate on my child that he clear his brain and steady his hand by guzzling booze? Would we be happy to learn that the president of the United States was an habitual tippler? Will we be glad when we see our pastor, charged with the spiritual oversight of our families, passing his glass the second time for wine? Would we be pleased if we should learn that the daughter of the family is out for a midnight ride drinking intoxicating liquors with her young man friend? O the times! O the customs! The insane folly of it all!

Let no man be deceived. There are two classes of people that are clamorous for the repeal of the 18th amendment, namely those who want easy liquor and the conscienceless liquor manufacturer and liquor dealer who wish to make money no matter what the moral and economic cost to men and society may be. And there is another class, the unpatriotic millionaires of the Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment who desire to push the burden of taxation off their own shoulders to the backs of laboring men. Yes, and there is a third class who want repeal—the long-hungry politicians, eager for government jobs, but already put on notice that they must vote wet or there will be no job forthcoming. The disgrace of it! For myself, I steer my vessel by the fixed stars and refuse to be driven by the winds of senseless clamor.

But there will be another day and another election. Already there is much low murmuring among an outraged people, murmuring that will then be heard like thunder. And the tocsin cry will be, "Remember the vote of 1933."

And the Christian church will not be driven into the catacombs, nor shut behind the closed doors of the cloister. Her field is the world. The Christian church will continue to stand as the eternal foe of every moral wrong. With the repeal of the 18th amendment, the fight will not be over; it will just get a new start sure of a final victory.

The church is the one perfectly free institution in America. The church will maintain her freedom. What the nation needs just now above all else is an MRA—a Moral Recovery Act.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION EMERGENCY COMMITTEE

542 Investment Bldg., Washington, D. C.

By D. Leigh Colvin, Ph. D.

Over five million arrests for drunkenness per year is one result which the repeal policy is bringing if there are the same number of arrests over the country in proportion to population as there were in the District of Columbia in August.

Since beer's return, arrests for drunkenness in our national capital have mounted to new all-time highs. For three week-ends, out of the six which preceded Labor Day, the newspapers reported successive new high records for such arrests.

More arrests for drunkenness were made last month than in any previous month in Washington's history. They were at the rate of 20,880 arrests a year.

If the same rate applies in the whole country as in the nation's capital, which reflects the spirit of the administration, and where the New (Wet) Deal is having its first fruitage, the aggregate arrests for drunkenness for one year in the United States would amount to the astounding figure of 5,263,000.

Think what a scourge is being thrust upon us by the pressure of the wet administration. Over five and a quarter million arrests of citizens so poisoned that they endanger themselves or others and have to be locked up—deprived of liberty. For every thousand who voted for Roosevelt in 1932 there will have been 223 arrests for drunkenness within a year. Yet everyone knows that only a fraction of the drunks are arrested.

If repeal should permit legalized whiskey to come back in December and brings an increased rate of arrests equal to the increase which beer has brought, the total number of arrests from September 1 to the end of the Roosevelt administration will be over 22,000,000. This is just about equal to the total number of votes which Roosevelt received for president.

This staggering number of over 22,000,000 arrests for drunkenness does not include the increase which will result from the cumulative effect of the alcoholic habit during the coming three tragic liquor-deluged years which we may be forced to endure.

Can anyone imagine the debauchery, the degradation, the despoiling of bodies and souls which these colossal figures imply? Can anyone estimate the aggregate of misery which the repeal policy is about to inflict upon the American people?

FRIENDSHIP

Real friendship is the manifestation of love in the finest sense of the word. There must have been a real tie of mutual friendship between God and Abraham, for James tells us that Abraham "was called the friend of God." (James 2:23.) Again Jesus says, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." (John 15:14.) And in the 12th verse of the same chapter we find the commandment to which He refers, and that is that we should "love one another as He loved us," and "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

There are four kinds of friendship:

1. Friendship produced by admiration. We may admire one's beautiful features, habits, or achievements. This might be called political friendship and rises or wanes with the tide of political fervor. One may be held high in the esteem of the masses today and tomorrow may be considered as a menace to society. Practically speaking, in the event one loses self-respect they fail to appeal to our sense of beauty and should his habits become debased they might fail to appeal to our sense of moral respect. Or should they happen to misfortune and lose their possessions (or achievement) our adoration for them might fade.

2. Friendship which grows out of sympathy. We may see others less fortunate than some, and our heart go out in sympathy for them. This might be called altruistic friendship. It is a fine thing to be able to have sympathy with others. You can't sympathize with anyone very much without forming some sort of friendship. Such friendship may or may not be lasting; it depends on whether or not such a person can continue to appeal to our altruistic emotions.

3. Friendship which comes as a result of pity. This form of friendship belongs also to the altruistic side of life. We may be so sorry for a fallen brother that we are moved to befriend him, and it is a mark of true friendliness to put in effect the impulse which gave birth to these lines of Fanny J. Crosby:

> Rescue the perishing, care for the dying,
> Snatch them in pity from sin and the grave.
> Weep o'er the erring one, lift up the fallen;
> Tell them of Jesus the mighty to save.

But should we lift him up and his feet be established, there will have to be a greater means for continuing our friendship, and that we find in the fourth kind of friendship.

4. Friendship born of a sense of brotherhood. This kind of friendship is of divine origin and produces the kind of friendship that the "Wise Man" tells us of in Prov. 17:17, "A friend loveth at all times." This friendship goes deeper than the mere surface of supposed society and finds in man a God-given tie of friendship which moves us to feel the responsibility of the salvation of all mankind everywhere.

The test of friendship. Loyalty is the true test of friendship. If a man is true in his friendship in the hour his friendship is needed, if he stands back of a person when everybody else is going against him, it can truthfully be said of him that he is a real friend, for a "friend in need is a friend indeed." A real friend does not stand back and question the plight of a friend, but goes immediately to his or her rescue. A real friend will be true regardless. I know a couple who had lived together for more than twenty-five years, and one night while thinking of the pleasantness of the past the husband said, "Darling, you have been mighty good to me," and the wife answered by saying, "How could I have been otherwise? You have been so good to me." And the husband asked further, "But suppose I had not been good to you?" and quickly she replied by saying, "I would have loved you anyway." Now that's real love or friendship the kind Paul tells us about in the 13th chapter of First Corinthians. Most any fellow can be a friend to one who befriends him, but it takes a real man to be a "friend at all times."

> "A friend indeed I want to be,
> A friend of all who are in need;
> A friend in me let others see,
> A friend in word, also in deed.
>
> "A friend to help when others fail,
> A friend to cheer when things go wrong,
> A friend that lifts the blinding veil,
> A friend to those who lose their song.
>
> "A friend to all both great and small,
> A friend to everyone I meet,
> A friend to one, a friend to all,
> A friend with smiles the world to greet.
>
> "A friend when someone needs me bad,
> A friend to all my fellow-men,
> A friend that shall not wish I had,
> A friend that is indeed a friend."

YOUR DAILY PLAN

By Grenville Kleiser

Your daily plan should comprise essential things. As you proceed to apply yourself exclusively to such matters, you will know that you are accomplishing far better results than you could through scattered effort.

Avoid unnecessary and unimportant engagements. This will save much valuable time which you can devote to your regular plan of the day. Be on guard against insidious influences which tend to divert you from important work.

Many business men acknowledge that they often do the best and greatest amount of work not when they have an abundance of time, but rather when they are limited for time. The reason is that having little time they concentrate their powers upon the work in hand and make use of every minute at their disposal.

It is not the man of leisure who accomplishes the best work, but the man who has learned to fill his hours with regular, systematic, and enthusiastic effort. The really big things are done by men who are fully occupied. Give a man only ten minutes in which to write a letter, and he will do it at once; let him write it at his leisure, and he will probably do it tomorrow or next week.

The best work in business, as in music, painting, sculpture, and literature, has been done under pressure for time.

Many a man requires a little spurring on, a touch of the whip of necessity, in order to make him throw off his lethargy and set about the really good work of which he is capable.

Men who are intent upon accomplishing the best results are wholly unlike those who are occupied with thoughts of how hard they are working, or how fast they are turning out work, or how unappreciated they are, or what difficulties beset them. They have neither time nor inclination to think whether their work is strenuous or difficult, since they are looking for results rather than recognition.

Some men are plodders, others work by impulse. No two persons go about the same thing in the same way, due to differences of temperament. The man and the method, however, must be largely judged by the actual results achieved.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE

By William T. Ellis

Churches honor mniisters with degrees and donations, and they give banquets to leading laymen. But the most deserving group of church workers get least attention and smallest praise—the teachers in the Sunday school.

May I propose something new for all the churches of North America—a nationwide celebration of the service of the Sunday school teachers?

My thought is a simple one, but it will take a year of large-scale planning and activity to carry it out. All denominations, Sunday school associations and local congregations would have to enlist in the enterprise. The endorsement and approval of public officials, educators, editors and other leaders in national life would be sought.

In a paragraph, the plan is that upon a night in some week to be agreed upon, not less than a year hence, there should be held in every community in the land the largest and most imposing demonstration possible of the nation's debt to that great host of unsung, unsalaried servants of God and of man, the Sunday school teachers, who have modestly carried on, week after week, the priceless and immeasurable work of holding aloft before the youth of the land the teachings of the Bible. Their usefulness has been beyond any man's power to measure.

Indirectly, such a spectacular tribute to the Sunday school teachers would do more to arouse interest in the Sunday school, and to recruit into its membership the millions now without any religious training whatsoever, than any other method possible. By directing attention to the functions of the teachers, and by expressing in every way possible appreciation of their work, the whole picture of the Sunday school would be brought anew before the public eye.

Existing denominational and interdenominational agencies should welcome the opportunity to do the promotional work for this great and unique celebration.

—A musician is commended, not that he played so long, but that he played so well. And thus it is not the days of our life, but the goodness of our life; not the length of our prayers, but the fervency of our prayers; not the measure of our profession, but the sincerity of our profession, that is acceptable unto God.—Spencer.

CONSTRUCTIVE AFFIRMATIONS

By Grenville Kleiser

These affirmations should be said aloud at the beginning and close of the day. Also at convenient daily intervals. Say each statement very slowly and try to realize its full import.

Always use affirmations in the constructive sense, thus: "All is good," "I am a perfect child of God," "Divine love is the liberator," "Day by day, in every way, by the help of God, I am getting better and stronger."

Health-Building Affirmations

God is All.
I am one with Him.
God is my life.
I am well.
My thoughts are harmonious.
I am rich in faith.
Divine love protects me.
I am strong.
Truth lights my way.
I am always calm.
My mind and body are pure.
I am grateful.
God sustains me.
I am in poise.
Wisdom guides me.
I am always cheerful.
My self-control is excellent.
I am courageous.
I breathe deeply.
I am relaxed.
Every victory makes my next victory easier.
I am happy.
I do everything deliberately.
I am an optimist.
I think constructively.
I am doing my best today.
I rejoice in abundance.
My body is being thoroughly nourished.
I give generously.
My sleep is restful.
I am at peace.

FOG-PIERCING BEACON

Fog, which is the chief bane of aviators, may be conquered by the type of beacon just installed at the municipal airport of Long Beach, Cal. Said to be the largest aerial beacon, its rays are visible for 75 miles and can penetrate fog. It generates 50,000 candlepower and is automatic in operation, being able to light and extinguish itself as daylight comes and goes. This Neale Rainbow super-beacon also flashes its location in the Morse code to flyers approaching the airport.

—The New Zealand technical education conference adopted a resolution asking the dominion government to discourage the importation of American talkies. Such films, declared the resolution, interfere with the work of schools in teaching and encouraging the use of correct English. The purity of the English language is endangered, one speaker said, and British countries are becoming Americanized by listening to talking pictures made in the United States.

—Dr. Andrews' letter arrived too late for publication.

OUR STORY PAGE

HER LOYALTY

He had strayed idly into the church.

He was only staying in that city for a day or two and time hung heavily on his hands.

He did not pay much attention to the speakers and sermons did not interest him.

But as he sat there somewhat listlessly he heard the first pure, golden notes of a beautiful voice.

He scanned the little space eagerly. Ah, there she was—the girl in the plain, gray dress, the white collar and cuffs. A girl young and with soft coils of brown hair and a firm chin.

He folded his arms, settled back in his seat and listened—listened with the ear of an artist to the golden melody that poured over the old church.

It seemed as if a nightingale were singing. What magic had this girl hidden away in that small, slender throat. She sang with th choir twice, and she sang alone once.

He waited until the congregation had been dismissed and then he made his way forward.

"That young lady, may I speak with her?" he asked of the preacher in the pulpit. "The one who sang the solo—the lady in gray. It is of her voice I wish to speak."

The minister nodded.

"You mean Miss Herrington," he replied. "I think I can arrange it."

A moment later he stood before her. He handed her his card.

She looked at it but the name was strange. She did not know of Enrique Serrano. But there were others that did, for he was a teacher—a teacher of music—a power and force in the musical world.

"I have heard you sing," he began abruptly. "Music is my life. And you have a wonderful voice. Will you come to the city and let me teach you? If you will study and devote yourself for a few moments to the cultivation of your voice, there are no heights that you may not reach. I can promise you much—position, acclaim, fame!"

Letty Herrington shook her head and smiled.

"My life work is already decided upon," she replied gently. "I am sailing in two weeks as a nurse in one of the mission hospitals."

The great leader and teacher of music stared.

"A nurse in a mission!" he cried. "What folly—what utter folly! With your wonderful voice, to bury yourself in a foreign land. It is America that adores its queens of song. It is America that so deservedly bestows its laurel wreaths. Why, if you only will, you will have the multitudes at your feet. Your voice, it is wonderful—beautiful, flawless."

But Letty Herrington shook her head. "I must go," she replied.

"Is there not a place for a voice across the sea as well as here?" she said gently. "I can sing over there in hospital and in hut."

The music master clasped his hands.

"Lost!" he cried.

But Letty Herrington only smiled.

"It is not only in America we need music," she replied. "There are children of other lands who need it too. God has asked me to lift up my voice over there. It is His gift and where He leads should I not follow?"

Enrique Serrano clasped his hands.

"I am sorry for you!" he cried.

Letty Herrington smiled again.

"You must not be," she replied. "For I am quite happy."

She paused—

"Do you not see why I cannot consider your offer? I have already promised God. You would not have me break my word? But, I thank you for your kind consideration."

A moment later the great music master was outside the church.

Hard man of the world as he was, a tear rolled down his cheek.

"America is the loser," he whispered, 'and yet, as I saw her standing there, I knew, I felt she would keep her word—but, oh, what a voice! What loyalty!"—Kind Words.

THE SECOND MILE

"Father," said Harry, "there was a verse in our portion last night that puzzled me."

"Was there, my son?" said his father; "what was it? We were reading in the fifth chapter of St. Matthew, were we not?"

"Yes," said Harry, "in the forty-first verse you read, 'And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.' If any one is so unreasonable as to ask you to walk a mile out of your road with him, why you make it two?"

Harry's father smiled. "Christ often makes us do things that seem to the world to be unreasonable, my boy," he replied. "He means that when we are compelled to do something for somebody, we should be ready to go further, to go 'out of our way,' as the saying is, to lend a helping hand. The first mile is all that is asked, the second is given freely out of love."

Harry was really interested, but like many another boy, he said little.

Some weeks passed by, and examination time at Harry's school drew near. There was one that he was especially concerned about, as most of the questions had to be answered orally. He set himself to master the subject. When the day came, full of hope and anticipation, he set out on his bicycle for the four-mile ride to school ,his parents' prayerful good wishes ringing in his ears.

But Harry never reached the school that day! Another school-fellow, named Bob, joined him on the way. When they had covered only half the distance to school a serious accident befell Bob. He was a careless rider, and failed to notice a car coming toward him in the opposite direction, with the result that he had a head-on collision, and was badly injured. It took Harry a long time to get help, and a doctor.

After seeing his chum safely to a hospital he cycled back to break the news to Bob's mother.

When Harry's father returned home late that evening he found him seated by the fire trying to read a book; there was a troubled look on his face. His father had heard the news from a neighbor, so he was prepared. "Well, Harry," he said, after the usual greetings, "I've heard all you've done today, my boy. Poor Bob, what a sad accident!" Harry's only reply was, "I've lost the prize!"

His father understood the feeling of keen disappointment. "I know," he said, "and I sympathize with you; but you lost it in a splendid cause."

"What do you mean, Father? Anybody else would have done what I did, in the circumstances."

"No, Harry, they wouldn't have done it. When Bob was on his way to the hospital, by riding hard there was still time for you to get to school; but you chose to cycle two miles in the opposite direction to relieve the anxiety of Bob's mother."

"Oh, that," said Harry, "that was nothing! Something seemed to compel me to do it, and Bob's mother was ever so grateful. Say, Father, was that going the second mile?"

"Yes, Harry, I think it was. You put the interests of others before your own. You will not lose by it in the long run. God will reward you, I feel sure."—The Christian.

HENRY VIII AND THE COBBLER

King Henry VIII of England was anxious to know what the people thought of him, so he often disguised himself as a poor laboring man and went out on the streets of London at night.

On one of these trips he became acquainted with a poor cobbler, where he stopped to get his shoe mended. He asked him if he had ever seen the king, and what the people thought of him as a ruler. The cobbler told him that he was considered a good ruler.

The king afterwards visited this man many times, but was always disguised as a common man. After they were well acquainted, he said that he worked at the king's palace, and asked the cobbler to visit him the next afternoon, and to inquire for Harry Tudor.

The cobbler put on his best clothes and set out for his visit the next day. Reaching the gate of the palace, he asked if a man named Harry Tudor worked there. The doorkeeper had been properly instructed, so he told him yes, and that he would take him where Harry was. He led him through the palace to the beautiful room where the throne was, and there was Harry Tudor, the king of England, sitting in state on the throne, surrounded by courtiers and the nobility of the land. Thus this poor man was presented to the king of England.

Well, the poor shoemaker had never seen anything like it before in his life; had never seen a king or a throne, and the dazzling splendor and magnificence of the scene was such that he lost the power of speech and could say nothing. Then the king spoke to him, and explained that he himself was the man who had visited his shop and invited him to the palace. So after a while the cobbler so far recovered as to talk a little, and was very thankful for the great honor conferred on him.

Dear reader, this is a story of earthly greatness. This poor man was presented to the king of England, and the king afterwards gave him a pension for life. If earthly greatness was so dazzling as to take away the power of speech, what must it be to see heavenly greatness? What must it be for a man or woman who has been a great sinner to be presented faultless at the throne of God by Christ our Redeemer? Can you think of any greater honor or glory? Yet every sinner has this opportunity to have his sins freely forgiven, his soul washed in the Blood of Christ, and then to be presented to Almighty God on His throne, as faultless as though he had never committed any sin.

Is this not a wonderful offer? Would you think any man in his right mind would refuse it, as it is entirely free, "without money and without price"? Could God or anybody else make any more liberal offer?

Dear friend, have you secured this great salvation? "Are you washed in the Blood of the Lamb?" Are you prepared for death? Death comes to us all; nothing is surer in this world than death.

Now, if you have not been "born of the Spirit" you will not be "presented faultless" at the throne of God, but will be put in a place where there is "weeping" and "wailing" and "gnashing of teeth." Therefore we beg of you to "make your calling and election sure." Do it now, before it is too late.—The Life Line.

GAS IN MENTAL STUDY

Physicians have long made efforts to learn what goes on in the minds of persons afflicted with insanity. Three physicians at the University of Wisconsin have made some interesting discoveries in the restoration of near-sanity for a few minutes by having the patient inhale a mixture of carbon dioxide and oxygen.

One of the surprising things was that some of the patients seemed to have normal brains. This would tend to prove that in these cases at least the insanity was not caused by a disease of the brain. The investigators believe that there is "something very material about certain kinds of insanity" and that the method of "approach" in studying such cases is worth investigating.

"In most of the cases," the physicians report, "some extremely interesting thoughts were expressed which offer a field for further investigation. One instance deserves special mention. This occurred in a patient diagnosed ~~as~~ having dementia praecox, of more than six years' duration, who was extremely inactive and mute and had been transferred to a hospital for the chronic insane. After carbon dioxide and oxygen, he began to talk, and for a period of more than 25 minutes maintained a remarkably clear and comprehensive conversation. His chief complaint concerning his present situation was the fact that he always had been a hard-working man, employed as an automobile mechanic, and he regretted more than anything else his lack of occupation. This evidence from a psychotic person bearing on the value of occupational therapy is extremely interesting."—The Pathfinder.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Charlotte.—There has been no report from this church since our able and most efficient reporter, Mrs. G. P. Younginer, moved away. Mr. and Mrs. Younginer and their splendid family have returned to Asheville, their former home. We miss them very much for they were all active workers.

The Sunday school seems to be getting a fine start for the coming year, with the following officers: general superintendent, J. C. Penny; assistant general superintendent, J. J. Atkins; secretary, Herbert Garrison; treasurer, Mrs. B. W. Little. The list of department superintendents follows: Adult, Mrs. C. H. Daughtry; Intermediate, Miss Gray Stiles; Junior, Miss Mary Shaw; Primary, Mrs. C. H. Beatty; Beginners, Miss Margaret Dellinger; Cradle Roll, Mrs A. F. Love.

There has been a great improvement in the church music, under the direction of Mr. J. W. Thomas, director and song leader.

An orchestra composed of M. L. Sloan and Marvin Pressley, violins; A. F. Love, mandolin; J. W. Smith, violin-cello, and Mrs. A. L. Haigler, pianist, fills a long-felt need to the music of the church.

At each Sunday evening service there is some special musical feature. Last Sunday evening the Letter Carrier's glee club, composed of about 40 voices, under the direction of Nat C. White, gave a splendid song program which was enjoyed by a large audience.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor society, under the leadership of Miss Gray Stiles, president, is having splendid programs and a large crowd attending each Sunday evening service. The C. E. society is one of the livest, most wide-awake organizations of the church. We are really proud of our young people.

The City-County Union of Christian Endeavors will hold a pep meeting and banquet at Caldwell Memorial Presbyterian church on Friday evening, October 6. A large crowd of our members are planning to attend.

The December meeting of the City-County Union will be held in our church.

We are delighted to have Miss Mary Shaw back with us, after spending the summer with her parents in Norman, N. C. She has accepted a position in the city and is making her home here with Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Garmon, the latter her aunt.

Mrs. C. H. Daughtry has returned home from New York City where she has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Matthew Battista.

We are looking forward to a series of revival service, which will begin October 15. The first week will be known as Enlistment week with the following program: Church school night with the church school officers acting as hosts and every member of the church school expected to be present.

Men's night, with the Baraca class, M. D. Frink, teacher, and the Young Men's class, Grady Tadlock, president, responsible for attendance and other features of the service. Every man in the church and community is invited to be present.

Women's night, with the Woman's Auxiliary responsible.

Young People's night. The Christian Endeavorers are expecting to have the largest crowd for this service.

Community night.

The following pastors have constented to preach on one of these nights. Rev. J. M. Morgan, pastor Holy Trinity Lutheran church. Rev. J. R. Anderson, Methodist Protestant church, Albemarle, N. C. Rev. E. N. Neese, M. E. Church, South. Dr. C. R. Nesbit, Caldwell Memorial Presbyterian church. Rev. W. C Dutton, North Monroe, M. E. Church, South.

The following ten days or two weeks Rev. G. H. Hendry will conduct evangelistic services, doing the preaching himself.

Prior to these service cottage prayer meetings are being held. On Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Daughtry, on Thomas Ave., with Mr. McKimmey leading. On Friday evening with Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Stegall on Kentucky Ave., with Mr. J. W. Thomas leading.

Rev. G. H. Hendry is assisting Rev. W. C. Dutton in evangelistic service in North Monroe, M. E. Church, South, this week.

West Forsyth.—Our appointments for last Sunday were at Baltimore church at 11 a. m. and at Stony Knoll church at 3 p. m. We had a good attendance at Baltimore church. There were 85 in the Sunday school. The election of church officers was held, and the board of trustees and stewards wash re-elected. J. B. Phillips was re-elteed treasurer. Rev. J. W. Doub, was re-elected class leader. Miss Lillie Speer was elected reporter to the Herald succeeding J. R. Nicholson. After the service we went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. North, where a good dinner was enjoyed and a pleasant visit made. Saturday night was spent in the good home of Mr. and Mrs. George Nicholson, of Baltimore church.

At Stony Knoll we had the usual attendance and interest. It was the pleasure of the writer to have with him in the pulpit and to preach, Rev. Walter D. Turner, young Baptist preacher, who attended Campbell College as a ministerial student. The subject of his sermon was, "The Trial and Judgment of Jesus." The sermon was an impressive one. It was our privilege and pleasure to visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Speas, of Stony Knoll church, last Saturday. We enjoyed a splendid dinner and pleasant visit in this home.

The election of church officers was held at Stony Knoll last Sunday, and the two boards of trustees and stewards were re-elected. Miss Mary Speas was elected reporter to the Herald.

Our revival meeting at Harmony Grove closed last Friday night. A total of eight services were held, and the pastor did the preaching at the request of the members. While we did not have the visible results that we anticipated, we believe there was much good done. One new member, Fred D. Gough, was received, and is to be baptized by immersion later. His wife has been a member of Harmony Grove church for several years.

The people of West Forsyth charge continue to remember the pastor and family with donations. We received a number of gifts of vegetables and fruits from members at Baltimore church last Sunday, for which we are appreciative.

The pastor and family had as their guests at their home in Lexington last week the following: Miss Juanita Hunter, Prof. and Mrs. W. B. Speas, of Pleasant Hill church; Clifford Briggs, of Tabernacle church. They were in Lextington attending the state meeting of the Grange, and we were glad to have them as visitors in our home.

We will begin our last round of appointments before the Annual Conference at Union Hill church next Sunday morning. That will be the last appointment for that church during the present conference year. With only four more Sundays of services on West Forsyth charge, we are reminded of the near approach of the Annual Conference. Finances are a little farther behind than at this time last year, but we trust that the officials and stewards at each church will make diligent efforts during the closing weeks of the conference year to bring up all claims.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Henderson.—Our church seems to have withstood the summer slump unusually well, and every one seems to be ready to work in earnest now that the cooler weather is at hand. Our September Thank Offering service was held September 17 and a liberal offering was taken. At the last meeting of the Woman's Auxiiary, Miss Mary Young sponsored the review of the new mission study book, "Eastern Women—Today and Tomorrow." She introduced a very unique place for the presentation of the first eight chapters and we were indeed grateful to her for the pleasant and profitable evening's program.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer and Mrs. Henry Nicholson addressed a large audience of women September 30 at the District Rally.

The death of Dr. F. R. Harris leaves a vacant place in the church and choir. He was always a loyal, enthusiastic supporter of any project for advancement.

Mrs. J. M. Baity is seriousy ill in a Durham hospital and the entire church membership is praying for her recovery.

Jasper Hicks is being congratulated upon his recent promotion to fatherhood. His infant daughte is about ten days old.

Miss Nancy Parleau underwent an operation for appendicitis last week and is improving nicely.

We have just experienced a most delightful revival meeting. When Dr. Gerringer announced his decision to hold a revival, with a young man named Elwood Carrol just out of school, to do the preaching, the older people gave a sigh of resignation. Having had a long drawn out series of meetings called a "community revival," with a professional evangelist here the first of the summer, we started on this one with misgivings. But before Mr. Carroll had been preaching ten minutes everybody in the churches had pricked up their ears and begun to listen eagerly. He stayed with us ten days, and spoke to a crowded church every night. He gave us a new vision of a loving Heavenly Father and of the beauty of religion and of the joy to be derived from the Christ-like way of living, and a new realization that the Gospel of Christ is primarily one of love—for God and for our fellowman. His sermons were of a high order, and appealed to the intellectual as well as to the spiritual natures of his hearers. People from all denominations came to hear him, a large group of high school faculty members being in the audience every night. He endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact, and there were tears in many eyes when he bade us farewell at the close of the services Friday night. Dr. Gerringer described the revival as a mountain-top experience, saying it was one of the finest meetings he had ever seen. His sermon this morning was particularly appropriate, "From the Mountain-Top of Experience to the Valley of Service."

R. H. WATSON, Reporter.

Salem, Saxapahaw Charge.—Even though we have not had a report for several weeks it does not mean that we have been idle. We are still trying to go forward with our work.

Our revival began the second Sunday in August and continued through Friday night. Rev. C. G. Isley was the pulpit help. His messages were enjoyed by all. The attendance was a good proof of this. Several souls were given into God's care and service. Nine united with our church. May we as Christian people not feel like the battle has been won, that the harvest is over until our next revival. But may we be interested in helping some one who is out of Christ see the value of being a Christian and living a Christian life.

On the first Sunday of this month we had our Memorial Day service. These services are always sad for us and yet we feel that those who have passed on deserve this honor and even more. The collection for the day amounted to something over $20.

During the latter part of July we had a two weeks' vacation church school under the leadership of Miss Bessie Holmes. We feel that this school was a wonderful success.

Our Christian Endeavor is still doing good work; the attendance is very good.

The two young people's classes of our Sunday school plan to sell ice cream, cake, and candwiches on the church lawn Saturday afternoon, September 23; the proceeds will go to the church. The public is invited to attend.

Shiloh C. E. Society, Shiloh Charge.—Shiloh C. E. Society continues to hold the interest of 85 or more young people who gather at the church each Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The society is doing spendid work, both spiritually and financially. We have already raised a large sum of our Annual Conference budget besides over $12 on our Loyalty League pledges.

We have had to give up our faithful and most worthy president, Mr. Ray Leatherman, who has resigned because of his expectation to move from our community in order to be nearer his work; but "every cloud has a silver lining;" after sorrow there is joy, but with our disappointment we began to think over the young people of our church and chose one who is both worthy and capable of the honor and responsibility of leading the youth of our church and community. We feel that we are fortunate to have gained the services of one who has been in Christian Endeavor work for several years and who knows the young people so well. This leader is Mr. Protus Koonts, one of our own young men.

Since there are some of our members who are away from our community, but who are interested in the young people and our church activities. We will mention a few items that probably would be of much interest to them. Within the past two months several of our C. E. members have married, as follows: Mr. Raymond Fritts and Miss Reva Sink were married August 19, 1933, at the home of Rev. R. S. Troxler. Mr. Weldon Koonts and Miss Dorothy Swicegood, Mr. Alvin Sink and Miss Arlene Michael were accompanied by Mr. R. C. Koonts to York, S. C., and were married September 16, 1933. Mr. Willie Kepley and Miss Lois McMahan, Mr. Edgar McMahan and Miss Arlene Shoaf were married in South Carolina on August 12.

These young people have many friends throughout Lexington and the surrounding communities who wish for them many years of happiness.

Mebane.—We are still in the land of the living and our work is doing very well, although there seems to be a slight decrease in attendance. The Woman's Auxiliary held its monthly meeting last Monday evening at the church. Circle No. 5 had charge of the program, which was enjoyed by all present.

The Ladies' Aid will meet this afternoon at 3 o'clock with Mrs. George McCauley.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its first Thank-Offering service Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour. The president of the N. C. Branch, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, was the speaker for the hour. Her speech was very interesting, as Mrs. Hammer is a very wide-awake speaker. We were very glad to have her here.

Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock a union service was held at the school auditorium. This service was very well attended.

Mrs. Glover, of Durham, is visiting her brother, Mr. C. I. Smith and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Streetland are on a pleasure trip to Canada and other places. They report having a fine time. Mrs. Streetland is the eldest daughter of Rev. C. I. Smith.

Why Not.—Our camp meeting at Love Joy closed on Friday night following the second Sunday in September. Dr. Taylor was our pulpit help. He was heard gladly by large congregations and quite a number professed faith in Christ and several joined the church. This is our strongest church on this charge and is in a growing condition. Since the meeting the church has been seated with up-to-date pews. We have here an all-brick church with Sunday school rooms and it is all paid for. This makes it possible for us to go forward and carry out all our programs without financial embarrassment. We hope soon to dedicate the church and put on our aggressive program for the new Conference year.

Work will soon start on our new church at Seagrove. S. G. Richardson, who recently came to us from the M. E. church, South, is chairman of the building committee. He is ably assisted by Dr. D. J. Johnson and James Walker. We feel fortunate in having such a strong building committee and feel sure the work will be handled in a business-like manner. The new church will be located near the post office on the Yow property, and will be in full view of the highway and far enough off not to be disturbed by the highway traffic. This gives us an ideal location and one upon which the folks are united.

Our first quarterly conference elected Rev L. A. King circuit steward and requested him to visit each church once a quarter. Bro. King is a splendid preacher and has ably assisted in two of our revival meetings, and his work has been highly satisfactory. His last appointments for this Conference year are as follows: Love Joy and Macedonia, first Sunday in October; New Hope and Flag Springs, second Sunday; Seagrove and New Zion, third Sunday; Fairgrove and Pleasant Hill, fourth Sunday. Our fourth quarterly conference will be held at Fairgrove church on Saturday before the thid Sunday. Rev. J. L. Moore, another of our local preachers, will preach at 11 a. m. and the business of the conference will follow in the afternoon.

We are now in our revival meeting at Flag Springs, with Rev. L. E. Mabry as pulpit help, coming to us on Monday. We had large congregations on Sunday. The pastor preached at 11 a. m. and at night. Bro. McDowell, of Asheboro, preached for us Sunday afternoon and preached with the vigor of a young man. The folks enjoyed his preaching.

G. L. REYNOLDS.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.—I am so sadly behind in my work of reporting that even our patient and loved pastor has gotten disgusted, but though I have been negligent myself our people and pastor have been on the job.

I must begin away back at the first week in July when we held our series of services. Pastor Spencer was assisted in these services by Rev. B. M. Williams, of Orange Circuit. We had a splendid meeting and good attendance considering there being two other meetings at nearby churches the same week. We had 11 new members to join our church.

We have not been having as good attendance either at Sunday school or church as we would like to have, but it is not the fault of either our pastor or Sunday school superintendent, for they are NRA folks and believe in doing their part. Mr. Spencer brings to us each service an inspiring and comforting message. I don't think I ever heard him preach a better sermon than the one he brought to us on October 1. The Scripture lesson was taken from Matt. 25:14-30, and the text was Hebrews 13:8, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today and forever." In the hurry and scurry of life today we seem to forget this. What though our man-made laws change so often, and the style of dress, the models of our cars can change, but God's laws and commands never change. What was right then is right now, and what was wrong then is wrong now. Let us not fool ourselves when we try to make a wrong seem or look right because it is to our advantage to do so or because it will fit in with public opinion.

Dear friends, a dark cloud is ranging over land today in the form of the dry and wet issue. What are we going to do about it? Sit idly by and let it close down on us, or rise up and fight for the safety of our future generations? All this evening I have been riding to the homes in our township pleading for the cause of Prohibition. Some do not hesitate a minute to come out on the dry side; others want to think it over and some do not seem to be interested at all. In my home there are five boys and I have three grandsons. Suppose that I should do something to help get whiskey back here and in the years to come one of those boys or grandsons should fill a drunkard's grave or a prison cell.

Would not I be in a way responsible for their death or crime? May God bless us and help us to be strong to fight this dark cloud of evil and in its place come glorious sunshine. Let's each one on te seventh of November go to the polls and vote NO REPEAL!

Our Missionary District Rally was held in Henderson September 30. Had very good attendance. Everyone enjoyed Mrs. Hammer's and Mrs. Nicholson's talks. Though we have not done much so far we hope to come out with a full paid budget at the close of the year. We farming folks have not had a payday yet. God bless and keep us and make us to grow strong in faith and to work for the advancement of His kingdom, is the prayer of the REPORTER.

Lexington, State Street.—It has been a long while since anything has been written from State Street, but silence has not meant that the work is not going on with increasing zeal. All who are interested in and eager for the spiritual growth and welfare of the church are putting all their efforts and energy behind the work and are reaching goals and realizing dreams.

Last Sunday was Rally Day for the Sunday school. A Rally Day program was given. Our superintendent, Mrs. H. S. Lanier, gave an unusually good and helpful opening session and a fine program was given by some of the Primary and Junior children just after the class period.

At the 11 o'clock hour Dr. Maier brought us a timely and challenging message, the theme of which was "Go Forward."

At the evening hour for worship the play written by Mrs. Shell, "The Tie That Binds," was pleasingly presented under the direction of Mrs. Maier and Mrs. C. L. Koonts.

Promotion of pupils was postponed until next Sunday because of some reasons that made it necessary.

The Circles of the Auxiliary met Monday. Circle No. 1, Mrs. A. H. Evans, chairman, met in the afternoon with Mrs. Jackson, who lives a few miles out on Highway No. 10. Mrs. Jackson's home is strikingly beautiful and she is a most pleasing and gracious hostess. The meeting in Mrs. Jackson's home was one of the best and most enjoyable held recently. Little Miss Doris Jackson, a charming little girl, assisted her mother in serving refreshments. The other Circles met in the evening with their respective chairmen.

We all feel proud of what has been accomplished by the Woman's Auxiliary so far under Mrs. Maier's leadership. We have undertaken and done some things that seemed impossible. Mrs. Maier has been great as a spiritual leader as well as an executive. She has stimulated our interest in Bible reading and the reading of mission study books, and in all spiritual growth.

Our October luncheon and dinner will be served in the church dining room Saturday.

On the third Saturday evening in September the ladies of Bethesda church came and served a delicious dinner at State Street church. We were glad to have them with us and gladly extended to them a hearty welcome to the use of our kitchen and all its utensils and the dining room, dishes and linen.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held at the Bethesda church on a Saturday evening in this month. We are hoping to make this meeting three-fold in its purpose—a message from Dr. Andrews, a social period with picnic spread, and the business of the conference.

Rev. and Mrs. F. A. Maier, brother and sister-in-law of our pastor, are visiting in the home of their daughter, Mrs. Irwin Earnhart, of Thomasville. As Thomasville is only a few miles from Lexington, Rev. Mr. Maier and Mrs. Maier are frequent visitors here. We were pleased to have them and thir daughter, Mrs. Earnhart, with us in the Sunday morning service. Mr. Maier lives in Zanesville, Ohio, and is pastor of a Baptist church there.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Everhart has been quite sick with diphtheria, but we are glad to note that she is recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Streatman and Mrs. J. H. Streatman have returned from a trip to Detroit and Canada. Mrs. J. H. Streatman brought home a handsome new car from Detroit. REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove.—The usual schedule of services was observed last Sunday, beginning with the Sabbath school at 9:45 o'clock under the direction of Clyde Payne, superintendent.

At the 11 o'clock service the minister, Rev. D. R. Williams, delivered a thoughtful sermon on "God in the Beginning and God in the End." Gen. 1:1, after which he brought the sad news—oh, I guess some will say the glad news—that he would not return to Pleasant Grove another year.

In 1928 Pleasant Grove built a beautiful parsonage, brick veneered, in a very deserted-looking place which now stands a place of beauty, made by the present pastor and his good wife, where they have toiled so faithfully in every way, even to the building up of the neighborhood, which all can see is more desirable place to live and yet we as a people have failed to appreciate their faithfulness. He as a pastor has delivered some of the most wonderful sermons ever heard. He has been faithful in all his undertakings. Mrs. Williams will be greatly missed in her Sunday school class, which she has taught with an untiring faith, always on the job. There are none better than they—always a real friend to all who will let them be friends. The children we were always glad to see them and have them worship with us. It was an inspiration—Mrs. Staley F. Garrison, of Burlington, N. C.; Mr. Ralph Williams, of New York City, and Mr. Arnold R. Williams, of Boston, Mass., all of whom their parents are real proud. They are of the highest type of Christian children. We hope for Pastor and Mrs. Williams one of the best places in the Conference, for they are worthy of the best.

The nominating committe for the election of church officers were read, as follows: B. E. Kennedy, Fenn H. Clark, Mrs. J. R. Meredith, Mrs. B. E. Payne, and Mrs. Wallace Kennedy.

The Ladies' Aid will hold its regular monthly meeting with Mrs. J. R. Meredith Wednesday, October 4. Mrs. Clay Beck is the president.

The Sunshine Auxiliary will meet Monday night with Misses Sable and Hazel Hedrick on the Thomasville road. This society is doing a splendid work. Mrs. J. R. Meredith is president.

Miss Dolores Kennedy is right sick with scarlet fever.

As the Annual Conference year will soon close, we realize that we have much to be done in the few weks that remain. May we link together and take our share of the burden and do our part the very best we can.

Let me say again, I hope for Rev. and Mrs. D. R. Williams a real place.

First Church, Burlington.—We are glad to report that our Sunday school attendance is somewhat on the increase. There were more present Sunday than there has been in several previous Sundays.

We were pleased to have Miss Frances DuPont, sweetheart of the American Legion, sented at the Sunday school hour.

Sunday was really three days in one for our church. It was Promotion Day, Rally Day, and the beginning of a series of revival services. The promotion certificates were presented at tre Sunday school hour.

Dr. Paschall was in charge of the morning worship, which marked the beginning of the revival services. Rev. Elwood Carroll is planning to be with us and assist in the services beginning Monday evening.

A very inspiring Rally Day program was presented Sunday evening with Mr. Herbert W. Wade presiding.

We counted it a very high privilege to have with us Professor Barrett, of the Graham high school, and Professor Self, of the E. M. Holt high school, both of whom delivered inspiring addresses. Professor Barrett used as his subject "The Furtherance of Christian Education." Prof. Self followed this subject rather closely, stressing the qualifications of an ideal Sunday school teacher. He requested that those who were not at the present time teachers, to consider themselves eithr substituts or prospective teachers, in ordr that he would be addressing everyone.

Other interesting phases of the program were special selections rendered by the "Central and Junior Quartettes."

At the close of the program an offering was taken for the Board of Christian Education.

We regret to report that little Betty Jones, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vance Jones, is suffering from injuies which she sustained Sunday morning while on her way to Sunday school. Betty fell from the car in which she was riding. We trust that her condition is not serious. REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—It is a pleasure to note our Sunday school is increasing rapidy. Church attendance is very good, but we wish more of those who attend the morning worship service would come back for the evening services. Our mid-week prayer meetings have been very well attended, but there is still room for larger attendance.

On September 23 we had the pleasure of welcoming three new members in the church: Mrs. Hattie Whitley and Mr. Joe Snider, on confession of faith, and Mr. G. W. Josey by letter. We hope to be a great help to them and that they may be a blessing to us.

The fourth quarterly conference will convene on Friday evening, October 20, at 7 o'clock in the church. All members are requested and urged to be present. Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference, will be with us at this meeting. Each church official is requested to have ready a written report for the past three months, also for the entire year.

Our pastor, Rev. Clarence P. Morris, spent the past two weeks with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. D. Morris, of Fallston, N. C., and in his absence Mr. J. P. Fesperman, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. here, brought a wonderful and helpful message at the morning hour, and Bro. R. T. Sides had charge at the evening hour. We wish we had more men in our community like Mr. Sides, for he can explain the Bible so thoroughly and simply that a small child will understand. We thank him for his work and help to the church.

The Ladies' Aid Circle No. 2 met on Monday evening, October2, at 7:30, with Mrs. Rena Steel on Craven street with eight old members, one new member and two visitors were present. After the business a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments consisting of ice cream and mixed cakes were served by Mrs. Steel, assisted by Mrs. Mildred Weaver and Mrs. L. C. Carter.

Circle No. 1 met with Mrs. Clyde Fagan on North Walnut street, October 2, with 11 old members, one new member and one visitor present. After business was attended to refreshments were served and enjoyed by all.

A general meeting the Aid will be held with Mrs. X. E. Grayson, 602 North Juniper street, on Monday night, October 16. All members are urged to be present as important business will be transacted and new officers for the ensuing year will be elected. Visitors are always welcome.

West End, Greensboro.—There has been very little said about the work of our church through the Herald this year. But that does not mean that we have not been at work. I want to point out some of the outstanding things we have done this year.

Just before Easter we held a series of evangelistic services. Other evangelistic services were held in July and September. There were very few decisions made, but we trust there was much done in developing the spiritual life of our people.

In July we conducted a three weeks' vacation church school. We enrolled 95 pupils in this school. Of this number 48 attended enough to win certificates. Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bowman had charge of the work. The teachers were Alice Hinton, Mildred Stack, Alene Routh, Douglas Kime, Mrs. V. C. Stockard, Mrs. D. W. Trogdon, Una Marie Pleasants, Nellie Routh, Annabel Thompson, and T. J. Whitehead. The school was a very successful one. It is hoped that another can be conducted next year.

Fifteen members have been taken into the church this year. They are Mr. and Mrs. Banner Routh, Mrs. Duncan, Paul Martin, Mildred Stack, Jewell Swanner, Evelyn Leonard, Verla Mae Leonard, Marjorie Fields, Jeeanette Bennett, Dorothy Lee Duncan, Mary Auman, Phyllis Burns, Charles Bilbro, and Mildred Hartsoe.

On September 24 we observed Anniversary Day. The first services were held in the church September 23, 1917. The following have been pastors of West End church: Rev. R. A. Hunter, Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., Rev. E. L. Ballard, Rev. J. D. Williams, Rev. P. E. Lindley, Rev. G. L. Curry. Our Sunday school plant was erected about eight years ago. There was a splendid spirit in our anniversary service this year. There was a special service after the Sunday school class period when special attention was given to the charter members of the Sunday school. The following is the program for the 11 o'clock service:

Prelude.
Call to worship.
Doxology.
Invocation.
Hymn: "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."
Recognition of charter members.
Scripture lesson.
Prayer.
Anthem: "Rise, Glorious Conqueror."
Presentation of the Anniversary Gift, L. W. Routh.
Acceptance of the Gift, Charles Routh.
Offering.
Quartet: "Come Unto Me."
Sermon: "Looking Forward," by the pastor.
Prayer.
Male chorus: "Crossing the Bar."
Roll call of the Honored Dead, O. F. Stafford.
Benediction.
Response.

In the special effort which was put forth to raise money for the building fund we raised about $350.00. We feel that this effort was well worth while. We were glad to see about half of the 32 charter members present for the service. Since the church has been organized the following members have passed to their reward: Mr. W. M. Moore, Mrs. T. C. Bosher, Mrs. Hattie Stafford, Mr. M. C. Thompson, Mrs. A. M. Beasley, Mrs. Flora Charles, Mr. Arrington Coble, Mrs. Emily J. Armfield, Mrs. Sallie Seawell, Miss Ruby Lee, Mrs. A. G. Davis, Mrs. Arrington Coble, Mr. T. J. Hicks, Mrs. A. R. Stack, Mr. P. A. Burns, Mr. W. J. Barbee, and Mrs. F. J. McFadyen.

At the present time the pastor is conducting a leadership training class at the church. The course which is being offered is "The Teaching Work of the Church." Eight Sunday school workers are taking this course for credit.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held on October 13th at 7:30 p. m. Dr. Andrews is to be present with us for the conference. We hope to make arrangements at this conference to close the year in a very creditable way. On the fifth Sunday in October we will put on a special effort to raise money to pay up our Annual Conference Budget and the College maintenance assessment.

Winston-Salem, First—Yesterday was Rally Day in our church with a slight increase in Sunday school and church attendance. A splendid promotion exercise was conducted in the presence of the entire school.

Officers for the Sunday school for the new year were elected a week ago. There seems to be universal satisfaction at the re-election of our splndid suprintendent, Bro. B. K. Millaway.

Our 5 o'clock vesper services, which were discontinued during the summer months, were resumed yesterday afternoon. A pleasing feature of the services was the singing by a group of girls from Hickory Ridge M. P. church under the direction of Mrs. R. M. Cox. Following this service the writer drove to Pinnacle to preach in the 7:30 service, but on the way drove through a severe rain and electric storm. On arriving at Pinnacle it was found that the electric lights on that side of the town in which the church is located had been put out of commission by the storm, so everything was dark, and there was no service. Rev. A. L. Hunter had called earlier in the afternoon to say that on account of the critical illness of his daughter, Ila Mae (Mrs. Glenn) at Lincolnton, he could not be at the services and for me to postpone the revival until a later date.

One of our members here, Mrs. Russell Mooney, passed to her heavenly reward on Sunday, September 24, after being in failing health for several years. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon, September 25.

On Saturday afternoon, September 30, the writer united in marriage Miss Kate Hall and Mr. Carl E. Smith, both of this city.

On the third Sunday in October we are to have a home-coming service for our church. Rev. G. F. Millaway, a former pastor, is to preach at 11 o'clock. We are to have a service at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and hope to have several of our former pastors who are living near enough to come in and bring their greetings in short addesses. We will give further notice next week.

Spring Church Charge.—Several of our young people left recently for college. Miss Catherine Crew is a junior in W. C., U. N. C., Greensboro. Miss Virginia Massey enters the junior class. Miss Virginia Grant and Mr. James Massey, the sophomore class, and Mr. Alson Thompson, the freshmen class, High Point College. Miss Mildred Mitchell enters the freshman class at Fredericksburg, Va. All of these are members of Spring Church charge.

Mr. Ellis Crew, delegate-elect to the ensuing Annual Conference, has a position with the Federal Land Bank in Eastern Carolina.

Other items of interest should be, and will be reported by the proper reporter, so I shall not trespass on others' ground.

First Church, High Point.—Last Sunday's High Point Enterprise carried a good historical sketch and picture of First Church, which was the first of a series of articles on High Point churches. This church was founded in 1897 in the building on North Main street, now owned by the Masons and used as their temple. Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk was the first pastor, and from a small nucleus of 13 members (in this instance not an unlucky number) the church has grown to a membership of 730 members with a Sabbath school numbering more than 500 persons. The rapid growth of the congregation made it necessary for larger and more convenient quarters, and in April, 1925, the present modern colonial building was finished on the corner of North Main and Richardson streets, the site just adjoining the old church. Since its founding nine pastors have served this congregation the first one, the late Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk having served three years, from 1897 to 1900, followed by Rev. William Porter for three years. Then came Rev. J. S. Williams, now of Asheville, who served one year; next came Dr. C. L. Whitaker for two years, then Dr. J. D. Williams for two years, followed by Dr. A. D. Dixon in 1908, who was pastor for nine years, now superintendent of Children's Home. Dr. George R. Brown, now of Reidsville, came here from the West Virginia Conference in 1917, and remained nine years; under his pastorate the present church was erected, it having been finished in April, 1925, when it was opened for the first service. In November of 1926 Dr. Brown was transferred to Reidsville, and Rev. E. Lester Ballard became associate pastor, remaining three years, during which time Dr. S. K. Spahr, of Greensboro, and Dr. P. E. Lindley, dean of High Point College, preached. In September, 1928, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, of Ohio, then a student at Yale University, came to us, and has served as pastor for five years. Of the 15 charter members only five remain, Mrs. J. W. Guire, of Lenoir; Ms. A. R. Hammer, Mrs. F. M. York and her daughter, Mrs. S. D. Shelton, and Miss Lou Pickett. Besides these, the other original members were Mr. W. P. Pickett, Mrs. J. J. Welch, Mrs. J. C. Welch, Mr. F. M. York, Mr. J. Wesley Guire, Mrs. Sarah Sechrest, Miss Permelia Cole, Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler, and Mr. Tyson Sechrest. This church has two effective organizations, the C. E. Society, of which Miss Irene Reynolds is president, and the Woman's Auxiliary, composed of eight circles. Mr. Furman R. Auman is chairman of the board of stewards and secretary Quarterly Conference. Mr. John C. Whitesell is superintendent of the Sabbath school, while his wife is president of Woman's Auxiliary. Ralph H. Vance is assistant superintendent of the Sabbath school. Mr. J. B. Spencer is treasurer of the buiding fund, and Capt. A. M. Rankin has served as church treasurer for 30 years.

On Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, chose as his sermon subject, "Know Thyself," from the text, "Take heed unto thysef; study to show thyself approved unto God." The choir rendered the lovely anthem, "Lift Up Your Heads, O Ye Gates," with Miss Beulah Moton at the organ. With the evening service the first of a series, "The Life of Jesus in Song," was begun, which will deal with the great hymns and anthems of the church. The choir and congregation joined in singing familiar hymns telling of the Nativity, Youth, and Work of Jesus. The minister spoke briefly of "The Religion of Music." Next Sunday evening, October 8, the service will be devoted to "Hymns of Good Cheer," including those for the lonely, the worried, the sorrowful, those who doubt God's love and those who fear death.

STATISTICAL SUMMARY OF SUMMER CONFERENCE LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOLS BY CONFERENCES

We are keeping our promise to the editor of the Methodist Protestant-Recorder by giving the following statistical summary of the leadership training schools conducted under the auspices of the Department of Religious Education of the Christian Education Board and our twenty-two organized conference councils of religious education. The schools are listed in order of their enrollment. At the beginning of the series we faced very serious difficulties. With the continued economic situation throughout the country, the limited financial resources for our work, one would naturally expect a disruption of our entire summer program. We also found ourselves handicapped through further reduction of workers. By action of the board, Dr. Stephenson, who assisted us some in our 1932 series, was relieved from working in our 1933 series, due to the busy program being promoted through his own department. Our office assistant was also reduced to half time.

Regardless of these readjustments and difficulties, we are delighted to report that instead of an expected decrease, there has been a decided increase along all lines. The results set forth in the following statistics are due to the sacrificial work on the part of Rev. A. R. Corn, who worked in six of our southwest schools, and Miss Sallie Bett Barnhill, our office assistant. Also, our instructors and conference council leaders throughout the church, who gave of their time in most cases without remuneration. The following summary gives the rank, according to enrollment, place, leaders, number of life service declarations, and the total attendance. The total attendance includes students, visitors, and faculty:

1. Ohio: Sabina; Leaders: C. J. Morton and R. C. Tolbert; enrolled 354, life service declarations 142; graduates 63; attendance 1,150.

2. Indiana: M. P. Camp Ground, Marion; Leaders, C. J. Kerlin and R. G. Skidmore; enrolled 224; life service declarations 82; graduates 45; attendance 738.

3. West Virginia: Jackson's Mill, Weston; Leaders, Frank Shaffer and Ralph Richards; enrolled 198; life service declarations 51; graduates 32; attendance 500.

4. Maryland: Westminster, Md.; Leaders, R. W. White and C. E. Forlines; enrolled 190; life service declarations 85; graduates 22; attendance 407.

5. Pittsburgh: Waynesburg, Pa.; Leaders, A. J. Green and J. W. Shell; enrolled 149; life service declarations 128; graduates 27; attendance 308.

6. Louisiana: Grayson, La.; Leader, F. L. Shows; enrolled 140; life service declarations 64; graduates 10; attendance 298.

7. Onondaga: Lycoming, N. Y.; Leader, G. C. Weaver; enrolled 133; life service declarations 52; graduates 0; attendance 192.

8. Mississippi: Clara, Miss.; Leader, Miss Bettie Ridgway; enrolled 122; life service declarations 40; graduates 13; attendance 300.

9. North Carolina: High Point, N. C.; Leader, T. J. Whitehead; enrolled 110; life service declarations 25; graduates 4; attendance 276.

10. Georgia: Atlanta, Ga.; Leader, C. E. Brantly, Jr.; enrolled 91; life service declarations 22; graduates 10; attendance 570.

11. Michigan: Gull Lake, Augusta, Mich.; Leader, Walter Mollan; enrolled 91; life service declarations 52; graduates 15; attendance 4,100.

12. Missouri: Rogersville, Mo.; Leader, W. A. Wilson; enrolled 87; life service declarations 17; graduates 7; attendance 1,280.

13. Iowa-Missouri: Ladora, Iowa; Leader, Hugh E. Williams; enrolled 81; life service declarations 47; attendance 205.

14. Illinois: Lewiston, Ill.; Leaders, B. F. Langdon and M. Z. Hovda; enrolled 79; life service declarations 39; attendance 300.

15. Arkansas South: Haynesville, La.; Leader, C. A. Calhoun; enrolled 75; life service declarations 47; attendance 813.

The increase for the years 1931-33 is revealed by the following figures:

	1931	1932	1933	Increase (1933 over 1931)
No. schools held	19	20	24	5
Enrollment	1,583	2,005	2,534	951
Instructors	162	190	216	54
L. S. declarations	675	861	1,101	426
Graduates	116	117	262	146
Total attendance	8,495	10,699	12,833	4,338

In promoting these schools, the secretary of the department was in the field almost continuously for three months, traveled 10,180 miles and caught something of the inspiration of our leaders of this work in their effort to expand it, even though they were confronted with many difficulties.

In order to finance these schools, a uniform registration fee of 25 cents for each student was paid to this office by the various conference councils. This fund made it possible for us to meet all the expenses connected with our summer schools without drawing any funds from the general church.

Further Signs of Progress. In addition to the unexpected increase and our ability to finance the work with registration fees, there are other features of the work which are most encouraging. There seems to be a general movement for camp sites similar to the one which resulted in Ohio, Indiana, etc., some years ago. Missouri has raised a camp site fund and is contemplating the purchase of a 40-acre site. Eastern has appointed a camp site committee to secure a permanent camp location for next summer. Alabama has appointed such a committee. Georgia has completed the first unit of their buildings on their permanent camp site at a cost of $136, paid for same, and has raised pledges to the amount of about $500 with which to build other units. Onondaga has added new classrooms to her splendid equipment at their Lakeview camp. Mississippi was fortunate enough to secure the consolidated high school building, which includes a dormitory for boys and one for girls, an adequate dining hall, and an administrative building. The leaders of Pittsburgh are talking about a permanent camp. Louisiana raised $690 in cash and pledges with which to erect buildings on their permanent site at a cost of $3,000 for next summer. The Kentucky school will continue to meet in the adequate equipment provided in the Alvin Drew School at Pine Ridge. In order to accommodate the increasing number of students at Sabina, it will be necessary to add additional equipment. Michigan plans to establish an additional school at Miller Lake. The West Virginia School enjoyed a large increase in attendance this summer due to the splendid equipment which they have secured at Jackson's Mill. The Kansas Annual Conference and the Kansas Leadership Training School will meet jointly next summer, the mornings being given over to the leadership training school and the afternoons to the Annual Conference. The Kansas School has made a donation of $10 for the establishing of a new school next summer in some weaker conference. The Maryland Council has elected a part-time director of religious education.

These signs of progress reveal a greater interest and a deeper appreciation on the part of the entire church for the work being done through our leadership training conferences. It further assures us that in the better days which lie ahead we will go on to better things.

In promoting all the activities of the Department of Religious Education, of which leadership training is only one phase, the expenses of the department during the last fiscal year were reduced about $5,000, as compared to the average expenditur for the past quadrennium. For the first five months of the current year our vouchers have been $1,259.91 less than the same period last year. The further economy and expansion of our work in these times, and both are sorely needed, should be a source of encouragement to all.

F. L. GIBBS, Executive Secretary,
Department of Religious Education of the Christian Education Board.
Westminster, Md., Sept. 22, 1933.

FIRST CONFERENCE DISTRICT MOVES FORWARD

At the first conference district rally some weeks ago Miss Winnie Bert, of Enfield, spoke on the subjject, "The Student Loan Fund at High Point College." Miss Virginia Massey in a very unique manner told a story of the student life at High Point and the struggles which some of the students were having in order to remain in college because of the lack of the necessary funds. Rev. N. M. Harrison, of the college, happened to be present and told of four students within the bounds of the first district who had made very fine high school records, two of whom had had a year at High Point College with creditable records, and none of whom could continue his education without some assistance.

To the 300 or more people present he said: "Suppose we could raise one dollar per person here today as a student loan fund for young men and women from the first district who desire it, we would make it possible for all of these young people to attend college and realize their dreams in a college education. He also stated that if the audience will raise $150, or more, that he would match dollar for dollar as a loan to these first district students from the already accumulated loans at the college.

Much interest in the fund was shown and payments in cash were raised in a very few minutes for the amount of $120. A committee was then appointed to raise the balance of the amount needed.

The fifirst district moves forward and sets an example for the other districts in the conference. The thing needed at High Point College today is a large student loan fund and it is hoped that others will fall in line with the first district.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Workman

Mrs. Ellzabeth Workman, the widow of D. H. Workman, was born November 2, 1855, and departed this life September 26, 1933. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. H. B. Cole and Mrs. John W. Hall, both of Burlington, N. C.; also by two sons, James G. Workman, of Burlington, and W. W. Workman, of Snow Camp; also by one sister, Mrs. Mary A. Pegg, of Gibsonville, and by two grandchildren. She was a faithful member of Bethel M. P. Church on Alamance charge. The funeral services were conducted by the pastor, J. A. Burgess, assisted by G. W. Holmes, and her body was laid to rest in the near-by cemetery. This church has had a greater loss of its older members than any church on Alamance charge since the writer has been pastor. We are sorry for the children and the bereaved sister. They should find comfort in the wisdom and goodness of God.

J. A. BURGESS.

Hanner

Mamie Elizabeth Causey-Hanner, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Causey, died when she was quite a child, was reared in the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett. She was born December 23, 1891, and died June 28, 1933. At her death she was 41 years, 6 months and 5 days old.

On December 5, 1907, she became the wife of Charles E. Hanner, who survives. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Hanner was blessed with five children, three daughters and two sons. One son died in infancy. Mrs. Cecil C. Monett, of the community of the home; Violet, of Raleigh, N. C.; Mable and Howard, of the home, are the living children. Mrs. S. O. Ingram, of Arden, N. C.; Mrs. Paul E. Johnson, of Four Oaks, N. C.; Mrs. Ernest Hanner, of Greensboro, N. C., and Miss Eva Causey, of Asheville, N. C., are the four sisters.

Early in life Mrs. Hanner accepted Christ as her Savior and joined Tabernacle Methodist Protestant Church, where she remained a consistent member until she was called to join the church triumphant. She loved her church and her God. Her going meant her becoming a part of the great church in the Beyond, where she has joined the great number of loved ones who have gone on before. And she is now waiting for those she has left who are to follow her.

She was a good mother, a devoted wife and a kind neighbor. She is much missed by those who knew her and had learned to love her. Her going has made a vacancy in the home, in the church and in the community in which she lived. We are all sad because of her going. But we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, knowing that what He does is for our good, even though we must see it through tear-dimmed eyes and become conscious of it with sorrowing hearts.

No harm from Him can come to me
On ocean or on shore.

On June 29 in Tabernacle Church the funeral was conducted in the presence of a large audience of sorrowing relatives and friends by the pastor, Rev. George L. Curry. The body was then laid to rest in the family plot in the church cemetery until Jesus comes on the resurrection morn.

GEO. L. CURRY, Pastor.

McFadyen

Cleta Routh McFadyen passed to her reward on August 20, 1933. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Z. Routh. On January 2, 1926, she was united to Jack McFadyen in marriage.

Cleta was converted and united with Bethany M. P. Church when she was about 16 years of age. When her family moved to Greensboro a few years later, they all joined West End Church. She made a splendid worker in our church. The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society have been greatly helped by her activity. Her fine Christian spirit has been the source of much inspiration for both the young and old in our church.

A husband, two children, five sisters, four brothers and a host of relatives mourn their loss. But their loss is her gain.

Funeral services were conducted at West End Church Monday, August 21, at 3 p. m. The pastor was assisted by Rev. E. L. Ballard. Interment followed at 5 p. m. at Bethany cemetery at Bethany M. P. Church in Randolph county. T. J. WHITEHEAD.

Hardin

Charles Harrison Hardin was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, October 21, 1842, and died in Julian, N. C., July 7, 1933. At his death he was 90 years, 8 months and 15 days old. He was the son of the late John and Elizabeth Ross Hardin. He was the last surviving member of a family of seven brothers and sisters.

At the age of six he and his father were traveling by wagon near Candor, N. C., when the horses became uncontrollable and the father was killed, leaving the six-year-old son to care for the remains of the father and then find his way back home. This was done in such a way that it showed the remarkable courage of Brother Hardin even when he was a mere child.

When he was yet in his teens he volunteered to do service for his country in the great struggle between the North and the South, known as the Civil War. He became a member of Company I, 5th North Carolina cavalry. He was a brave soldier and served throughout the war. His horse was shot from under him but he himself was not at any time wounded.

On December 31, 1872, he was married to Martha Jane Coble, who died more than 10 years ago. These became the parents of five children, three daughters and two sons, four of whom survive. The daughters are Mrs. W. T. Hanner, Misses Lizzie and Anne Hardin, of Julian. The only surviving son is Mr. Walter Hardin, of Liberty, N. C. Mr. J. E. Hardin, the oldest son, of Greensboro, N. C., died just a few days before the going of the father.

As a young man Brother Hardin became a Christian and joined Tabernacle Methodist Protestant Church. For a number of years he was a true, loyal, and faithful member of this church, serving in official capacities a large part of this time. When the present Tabernacle church building was erected more than 40 years ago he was a member of the board of trustees and was the last survival of this board. When about 25 years ago the Julian church was organized he became a member of this church and there remained a consistent member until the day of his death. In this church he served on the official board for a number of years.

On July 8, in the presence of a large audience of sorrowing friends and relatives, the funeral was conducted in Tabernacle Church by the pastor, George L. Curry, being assisted by Dr. T. M. Johnson, a former pastor, and Dr. C. F. Myers, of the Presbyterian church and a friend of the family. The body was then laid to rest in the family plot in the church cemetery to await the resurrection call.

It is with sorrow that we the members of the official board of the Tabernacle charge are called upon to record the passing of this our fellow member, who for so many years sat with us. But we, bowing in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, desire to offer a tribute of love and esteem to his memory.

And be it resolved, that a copy of this tribute be sent to the bereaved family, and that a copy be recorded in the minutes of this Third Quarterly Conference, and that a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

C. R. FIELDS,
GEO. A. GARRETT,
W. T. HANNER,
Committee.
GEO. L. CURRY,
Pastor.

"You say your engagement was broken as a result of a misunderstanding?"

"Yes," replied the girl with weepy eyes. "I told him I never wanted him to speak to me again—and he thought I meant it."—Ex.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

Hindrances to Worship

What is worship? Quoting: "Worship is the conscious outreach of the soul toward God, the invitation for Him to enter into the waiting and eager heart. It must be both individual and social."

"It is the soul searching for its counterpart."

"It is a hungry heart seeking for love."

"It is a man climbing the altar stairs to God."

Worship is the principal factor in a church service, be it Sunday School, Christian Endeavor or "preaching" service. Consciousness of its importance has been steadily increasing in the minds of ministers and religious leaders everywhere.

We come to Sunday School to study the Bible and to learn God's will concerning us. We conduct our Christian Endeavor meetings to discuss topics of interest and receive training in self-expression. We attend church to sing, pray and listen to the sermon. Yes, all this, but if our hearts and minds are not bent upon worship, these factors, agencies and purposes are "as sounding brass and tinkling cymbal."

"O come, let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our Maker," is the invitation of vital importance.

Worship has doubtless been given little or no consideration by many, because: (1) they have never actually experienced the value of it; or (2) the Sunday School superintendent, Christian Endeavor president or pastor is indifferent concerning it; or (3) hindering influences have been allowed to trespass upon its rights. Among these are:

1. Tardiness, in any form. Tardiness in beginning the service on the part of the leader or those in attendance. The service begins when the first note is struck on the piano or organ, or the first word of attention is given by the one in charge. Late-comers are bound to disturb the service and hinder the worship. Standing outside until the first hymn is sung is unfair, to say the least, to those within.

2. Distributions of fans, hymn books, programs, lesson leaves, and what not, after the service has begun. If this must be done, it should be completed before the hour of opening, or provided for by the ushers as the people enter. Also, raising and lowering windows is quite distracting. No such interruptions are necessary.

3. Lack of hymn books. Students are not expected to learn their lessons without textbooks; musicians certainly cannot master their parts without the printed music; how then can we expect folks to worship without hymn books? Group worship must include participation, and to participate, each one or two needs a book.

4. Announcements, lnngthy and tedious. It is a pity that announcements have to be made, during a church service in particular. And some preachers take from 10 to 15 minutes to make them, when 3 to 4 minutes would be ample time. Use a bulletin board in the vestibule, or some other method, for the details of events.

5. Collection, instead of offering. The difference? The former makes one think of a collector calling at one's home to exact payment of a bill. The latter, a free-will joyous gift of love. The several minutes required to receive the offering is not a time for confusion and talking, but a period of mditation, of dedication, a feature of the worship service.

Young people attend our Leadership Training Schools to learn how to become leaders in our churches. They study a course in worship, realize its value, and return to their home churches zealous for improvement there. The lack of cooperation on the part of others, who have not availed themselves of opportunities to learn better methods to carry on the Lord's work, together with the hindrances stated above, smothers their zeal, and they are forced back into the old rut, the way always followed.

It behooves us to make certain that we are not stumbling blocks in the way of progress, but real co-workers with those who have learned improved methods of kingdom service.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TAKES A SOUND AND SENSIBLE STAND

It is well for us, as American citizens, to keep our eyes and ears open and our minds active. Incidents are taking place and words are being spoken to which we should give attention. And, if we are to be worth-while citizens, we shall do some thinking—and possibly speaking—on our own account.

At the annual meetings of the American Legion things are always stirred up. The one just held in Chicago was no exception. There was known to be considerable resentment brewing because of what the economy program of the present administration has done to the benefits being received, or hoped for, by ex-service men. While, perhaps, a majority of the veterans are sensible and sane in their claims, there is a considerable—and a very persistent—element that sometimes carries the organization off its feet and secures the passage of propositions that are anything but wise.

Some of his counselors advised the president against going to the Legion convention in Washington. I am sure that his going there was a good move.

A year ago at the convention in Detroit, President Hoover took a patriotic stand and appealed to the veterans to cooperate with him in the efforts then being made toward economic recovery, asking them not to press for the immediate payment of the bonus that will not be due until 1945.

Soon after the Detroit convention, ex-Governor Al Smith —in a notable article in The Saturday Evening Post—took the same position, insisting further that the many thousands who were receiving benefits to which they were not entitled should be cut off the list.

Candidate Roosevelt skilfully avoided committing himself at that time—leaving the impression, however, that when he came to the White House he would deal more favorably with the claims of the veterans than would Mr. Hoover.

Had President Roosevelt gvne to Chicago last week and promised to give the American Legion what they were asking for, the results would have been nothing short of disastrous to the prospects for recovery. Had he shilly-shallied, no right-thinking man could have respected him for a minute. He was outspoken, fair, and commendable. In his address he impressed upon his hearers two things. He said:

"The first principle, following inevitably from the obligation of citizens to bear arms, is that the government has a responsibility for and toward those who suffered injury or contracted disease while serving in its defense.

"The second principle is that no person, just because he wore a uniform, must thereafter be placed in a special class of beneficiaries over and above all other citizens. The fact of wearing a uniform does not mean that he can demand and receive from his government a benefit which no other citizen receives. It does not mean that because a person served in the defense of his country, performed a basic obligation of citizenship, he should receive a pension from his government because of a disability incurred after his service had terminated, and not connected with that service."

This should end the matter, though it probably will not. The vetoes of Presidents Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover did not prevent the American Legion—backed up by vote-seeking congressman— making successful raids on the treasury. Much earlier and larger raids have already been made than were accomplished by the veterans of the Civil War. It is none too soon for officials and citizens to take adetermined stand against wasteful class legislation.

President Roosevelt does well to add to what has been quoted: "It does mean, however, that those who were injured in or as a result of their service are entitled to receive adequate and generous compensation for their disabilities. It does mean that generous care shall be extended to the dependents of those who died in or as a result of service to their country."

What, then, is to become of the veteran who—though not suffering any injury connected with the service—is now in need of hospital care? The president answers: "In other words, if the individual affected can afford to pay for his own treatment he cannot call on any form of government aid. If he has not the wherewithal to take care of himself, it is first of all the duty of his community to take care of him and next the duty of the state. Only if under these circumstances his own community and his own state are unable, after reasonable effort, to care for him, then, and then only, should the federal government offer him hospitalization and care. I personally know that mistakes in individual cases and inequalities affecting various groups have occurred during the past six months. But at the same time there stands out the fact which you know—that many of these mistakes have been rectified and that we have the definite purpose of doing justice not only to the mass but, in so far as possible, to every individual as well."

National recovery and reconstruction will come about only as the whole people co-operate. Many of the changes now taking place could not have been foreseen twelve months ago. Many things not contemplated at the present time will later be found advisable, if not absolutely necessary. While the critical faculty should be at work, there is special call for good will and a friendly community spirit.

RESISTING THE SALESMAN

You may not, in these days when money is scarce, so frequently visit stores and shops where salespeople stand behind large displays of attractive goods. But solicitors still come as formerly to your front or side doors. From the advertising pages—which means from practically all the pages—of newspapers and magazines, and in the programs heard over the radio, plenty of appeals reach you to buy this and that.

Much advertising matter goes into the wastebasket unread, and many radio appeals are tuned out or go in at one ear and out at the other. But a considerable proportion of the advertising of all kinds must be effective in getting orders, or selling campaigns would not be kept up so persistently. And the buy may prove our personal and family financial undoing.

Salesmen often show a low estimate of the buyer's mentality. Intelligent and independent radio listeners would not be moved—except with disgust—by the average talk recommending toothpaste, brands of cigars, cigarettes, tobaccos, beers, and so forth—if only those listeners used their intelligence and independence.

The appeal is made to vanity, to doing as thousands of others are doing, and to the utterly impossible values claimed for the things recommended. A little familiarity with reports of the Consumers' League would set the buyer right, if he is seeking real values.

Prosperity is desirable, and the purchasing public can aid in securing its return. But that cannot be done by producing and selling articles that are useless or harmful. Nor will we aid by purchasing things we do not need, or cannot use to advantage, or that would prove harmful to us.

If useless and hurtful products were eliminated from industry and trade, much time and labor would be saved. Short weeks and short working days would suffice for the production of an abundance of food, clothing, shelter, transportation, and entertainment; and there would be time and means to take advantage of ample social, educational, musical, artistic, and religious opportunities for all.

If we, as a people, are wise we will learn to resist insinuating sellers of senseless commodities. LUTHER K. LONG.

PASTORS, PLEASE PAY ATTENTION

I am asking the editor to give this notice prominence so that the pastors may be sure to see it. There are two or three things I want to say to you.

1. Please send in the names and addresses of your delegates. The following charges have not yet responded to that oft-repeated request: Bess Chapel, Bethesda, Charlotte, Draper, Glen Raven, Mecklenburg, Melton's Grove, Shiloh, Spencer, Winston, South. It is possible some of these pastors have sent the names but they failed to reach me. Try it again, if that is the case.

2. I am using this year the uniform blank for pastors' reports. This blank is issued, without cost, by the statistical ecretary of the General Conference. I am out of our blanks, and for this year, at least, will save the cost of printing new blanks by using those provided free of cost by the General Conference. The envelopes containing the blanks will be mailed out next week and I shall have something more to say about this new blank that may help you in filling it out.

3. Send in your Journal money, PLEASE.

THE STAIRWAY OF LIFE

We are all on Life's Stairway, going up or down, all going somewhere. And the people! Some are ascending, their faces radiant with sunshine. Many others are climbing with faltering step and trembling heart. There are faces of arresting seriousness, and strong, honest faces that inspire weaker ones. So many thouands need helping up! What a thrilling spectacle, a never-ending panorama of human beings traveling toward destiny! See those coming down! A boisterous, careless, wild-eyed throng of pleasure-seeking, self-loving men and women. How fast they go! Two steps at a time and more—some are literally falling down! Heedless, dissipated, selfish, ignorant, a seething crowd of unfortunate human beings traveling toward destiny!—Grenville Kleiser.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

"It is just as reasonable to attempt to run a farm without horses, mules or plows as it would be to try to carry on the work of the conference without the support of the individual church."—From report of the Committee on Financing the Church.

October Pay-Up Month

Many of our people have waited until now to pay their church assessments. And now, unless they are visited, some will not pay. The pastor and officers of the church should be very busy from now until conference. The interests of the institutions of our church are much in need of the money expected from our membership; but, our people need to do their part just as badly as these interests need what they can give. No one can remain in the church enjoying true religion and never do something for the enterprises of the church. He may not do much—indeed, it may be very little, compared to what others can do—but if it is his best, his gift will be pleasing to his Lord. Let us do our best and urge all, everyone of our people, to do the best they can. Then we shall be happy when conference comes, whether we shall be prosperous or not.

The Torn Church

It is a sad spectacle to witness the disintegration of a church through the dissensions of its members. I have witnessed more of this condition this year than ever I did in a year in my ministry. It is a terrible sin to tear the body of Christ, to disrobe his Bride. And yet some people seem to do it without fear or regret. Again and again we hear of those who for the satisfaction of having their way in minor matters, or in revenge for some slight or fault of a member, appear to make it their task to do all the harm they can to the church of which they may still be a member. It is un-Christian, and it is too bad that the church has to suffer at the hands of such people. I believe that such people are accumulating the wrath of Jehovah against the day of judgment upon them. It is too bad that they will not see it and desist. I now and then see remains of such a procedure. Some church building almost neglected which once was well-filled upon the Sabbath. Most of those who once were members there have gone into other churches after doing their best at their work of destruction. It is a gross sin; it is a crime against organized Christianity. I would to God our people would quit it.

Correct Your Church Registers

Now is the time to make such corrections of your membership rolls that are needed. The Discipline prescribes the manner. We cannot go beyond the Discipline, so you go according to it. But correct your registers. We ought to have reported a correct list of church members to conference. Just when this can be done, if ever, we do not know—possibly never; but we can certainly make an effort to carry out this requirement to the best of our ability.

Pastors' Report Blanks

By the first of next week these report blanks should be in the hands of the pastors. They are rather full, asking for quite a bit of information. I would like to have this for my report to conference. Therefore, please try to make the report as complete as possible and mail it to me not later than the first of November.

Remember the Conference Journal

Do not forget the action of last conference which accepted the suggestion of President Taylor that the Journal be sold on subscription this year. You will therefore need to get your quota subscribed before conference or buy the number for your charge and sell them, as many pastors have done heretofore.

Fixing Pastors' Salaries

The Fourth Quarterly Conference is the time to do this. Soon these conferences will be held. We have had rather an uncertain condition to face this year. Coming out of a hard year with our resources exhausted, it has really been harder for many people to carry on this year than it was last year. But the graph showing the economic conditions is pointing upward. The unemployed host is smaller. Those who work are receiving more for their labors—the minimum wage is higher. These and other conditions give ground for hope.

Your pastor has suffered with you in this financial strain. Already prices are advancing; the things he must have will cost him more than either this or last year. Remember that when you say what he shall be promised for next year. The average salary should not be less for next year. Many of our pastors will not receive enough to live on this year—that should not be repeated in 1934.

"Change or No Change"

Most all of our charges take such a vote at the fourth quarterly conference to ascertain the desire of the membership as to pastoral supply for next year. There should be nothing vicious or even unkind in it. No pastor is appointed for more than one year; his task is done when conference meets—he is then without a church until the conference shall assign him a charge.

It is expected that preachers change. Some more frequently than others. It is a privilege both to the church and the pastor. All ministers are not alike, therefore do not do the same type of work. So when the new man comes he may supply the need of the church which his predecessor could not supply.

I do not think either pastor or people should be restless about this matter and thereby precipitate action that would be harmful; neither do I think they should hesitate to take just such action as seems to the minds of the majority of the members or the mind of the pastor as the best when considering the pastor for next year.

But, we should be fair. The pastor should frankly declare his mind, if he is decided when he starts to conference, and likewise the church should be just as frank to him when the final meeting is held. This will save hard feelings which may last for years. I know of cases where the Annual Conference has been blamed for changing a pastor when indeed the pastor would not return, but kept it from his folks; likewise I recall an instance where the church wanted the stationing committee to move a preacher and not let him know that the church did not want him to return. That is what I mean by what I have just said.

Littleton Charge, Rev. P. T. Bingham, Pastor

I visited Corinth, Weavers and Hawkins Chapel in the order named. The congregations at all the churches were considered about as good as usual. The people received my messages with attention and appreciation.

Corinth and Weavers paid the Annual Conference Budgets in full. Corinth had their Superannuate Special subscribed and Weavers paid theirs. At Hawkins the amounts were more, the A. C. B. was subscribed in full and most of it paid. We did not secure the Superannuate Special.

We are glad to put Corinth and Weavers on the A. C. B. Honor Roll. According to the Journal of last year, this charge did not pay one cent on A. C. B.

Frankly, I am concerned about this group of churches. It has slipped back to about what it was doing some forty years ago, according to the Journal, in the support the charge gives to the pastor. These churches ought not to be there. They are not as poor as all that. I am convinced they can do a great deal better than they are doing. They also know this. They are suffering with a low morale. Too many of the people do not attend church or pay to the support of the work of the church. This condition is general and must be corrected. It should be the daily prayer of the pastor for wisdom and grace to win these erring ones back to their church. And he ought to have the fullest co-operation of his official board in the performance of the task. Brother Bingham is doing his best to carry on. But he came here without experience in doing church work. However, he found a splendid helpmeet, and I enjoyed the hospitality of their home while on the work, except dinner in the home of Brother and Sister Bernard Morris.

Date of Conference Postponed One Week

The conference will meet November 15 instead of the 8th as slated to meet. This has been done to meet the present market situations nearly as possible. We urge all pastors and church officials to make a supreme effort to raise the budgets in full by that time.

Plan of Appointments.

THE GLORY OF OLD AGE

Old age ought to be the most beautiful period of a good life. Yet not always is it so. There are elements in the experience of old age which make it hard to keep the inner life ever in a state of renewal. The bodily powers are decaying. The senses are growing dull. It is lonely. There is in memory a record of empty cribs, and vacant chairs, of sacred mounds in the cemetery. The work of life has dropped from the hands. It is not easy to keep the joy of living in the heart on such experiences. Yet that is a problem of true Christian living. While the outward man decays, the inward man should be renewed day by day. This is possible, too, as many Christian old people have proved. Keeping near the heart of Christ is again, as always, the secret. The Christian old man's best days are not behind him, but always before him. He is walking, not toward the end, but toward the beginning. The dissolving of the earthly tabernacle is a pledge that the house not made with hands is almost ready. —The Hidden Life.

OUR STORY PAGE

WHEN DONALD DISOBEYED

Donald King raised his eyes from the book he was reading and glanced at the mantel and then toward Dorothy, his sister, on the opposite side of the hearth.

Dorothy had been sick with measles and was just beginning to be up and around but not able to get out of doors; this fact hurt Donald almost as much as it did Dorothy, for the weather was ideal for nutting, and the nuts in the north pasture were plentiful. Nevertheless, measles were treacherous things and Dorothy was ordered to remain indoors, and on this particular afternoon Donald had agreed to remain inside with her while their mother attended a missionary meeting at the church.

"My, my!" mused the boy as he turned his eyes again on the clock, "how idle hours do drag by! Here it is only mid-afternoon and nothing to do!"

Finally he caught Dorothy yawning, and a bright idea entered his head; if only he could induce Dorothy to take a nap he could at least sit on the porch, and that would be better than staying indoors all afternoon.

"Don't you want to take a nap, sister?" he asked with a hint of selfishness in his voice. "I think 'twould do you good."

"Maybe it would," agreed Dorothy, "but I'd hate to take a nap after you have agreed to keep me company all afternoon."

"That doesn't make any difference with me," declared Donald. "I'll amuse myself some way while you sleep, and when you wake up I'll read you a story from the book Uncle Tom sent you."

"Agreed!" answered Dorothy, and crawling upon the big day lounge in one corner of the room, Dorothy curled up under a soft red blanket and presently she was sound asleep.

Donald drew the covers close about her and proceeded immediately towards the porch, and scarcely had he taken his seat upon the steps until Ray Dugger came bounding up the steps.

"The Mattox boys are shaking the chestnut trees in the orchard, Don," he announced anxiously.

"You don't mean to tell me," exclaimed Don, "that the Mattox boys are shaking your trees again!"

"Yes, sir," answered Ray indignantly. "Father forgot to put up that 'No Trespassing' sign on our land, and the boys are down there just helping themselves."

"We'll go stop 'em!" declared Don; "we aren't going to let anybody have our nuts!"

With that he started for his hat, but suddenly remembering that he had promised to look after his sister during his mother's absence, he slowly retraced his steps.

"I forgot, Ray," he said, disappointedly. "But I can't leave the place this afternoon—mother's away, and I promised to stick around and take care of Dorothy—you know she's been very sick."

"You don't seem to be doing anything for her right now," returned Ray with a bit of suspicion in his eyes, which clearly conveyed the idea to Don's mind that Ray thought he was afraid to venture into the orchard and claim his share of nuts against the Mattox boys.

"I'm not afraid of the Mattox boys, if that's what you're thinking, Ray," said Don quickly, "but I promised mother to stay on the place and I must do it."

"Then run along back and amuse your sister," sneered Ray—"I'll look after the Mattox boys—and—and get my share."

"Dorothy is asleep right now," answered Donald, "that's how I came to get out on the porch."

Suddenly Ray came a bit closer to his friend and laid his hand on his shoulder.

"Listen, Don," he said eagerly, "the orchard isn't off the place—you can run with me down there and grab your share of the nuts and be back before Dorothy even wakes up."

Don's eyes widened with excitement—Ray had spoken the truth—he had only promised to stay on the place. Still as they raced towards the meadow where the Mattox boys were shaking the chestnut trees, Don had a clear conviction that he wasn't doing the right thing, but once there, snatching up his part of the brown nuts, all thought of Dorothy vanished, and it was almost dusk before he thought of her again.

When he did think, however, he started to the house on the run, with Ray following at his heels. My, my; how he hoped that Dorothy hadn't waked yet—maybe he'd find her still sleeping. Hoping against hope that such would be the case, he entered the room—but one glance in the direction of the couch banished that hope entirely from his mind—not only that—but the room was upset; chairs overturned, magazines scattered about the floor, and never the sign of his sister anywhere.

"Dorothy, Dorothy!" he called, but no answer came to relieve his fear.

"Something's happened since I went away, Ray, as sure as you are born—and Dorothy has left this house. She'll catch cold—and—and—oh, Ray—I can't bear to think what it might mean—and I—I promised mother I would look after her—"

"Maybe she's just hiding from us," suggested Ray. "Let's call her again."

The thought filled Don's heart with joy; again he made a round of the house, calling his sister. Finally he entered his mother's room and called noisily, and then much to his delight he heard a faint answer.

"Where are you, Dorothy?" he asked anxiously; "where are you?"

Slowly but surely the lid to the big clothes basket that mother had forgotten to remove from her room before she left began to rise—and a moment later Dorothy was peeping at her brother.

"Oh, Don," she exclaimed nervously, "I've had the most terrible time—I woke up very suddenly and discovered a great dog with his tongue lolling out of his mouth walking about the house—I was too scared to call you, and I was so afraid he would find and bite me—that I slipped off the couch, made my way upstairs, and then I guess I got scared and hid in mother's clothes basket—and—and—then I must have gone back to sleep.''

That he had left the door unfastened in his rush to get away made Don more ashamed than ever of himself, but it was not until his mother came home that he rid his conscience of the act.

For a moment his mother stood looking at Don in silence when he related what had happened; naturally her first thought was to punish him for disobeying her, but the second glance at his white face caused her to change her mind—and her arm went about the boy's slender form.

''You've already had enough punishment in the anxiety that you have gone through, Don,'' she said softly, ''I won't add any more to it.''

''Not only that, mother,'' he answered soberly, ''but I've had my lesson—you won't ever have to worry about me disobeying you again as long as I live. You see, I never realized just how much I loved sister until I thought something had happened to her.''

''I understand,'' answered the mother sympathetically. ''Now run along and do up your afternoon chores.''

And Donald, believing that his mother did understand, went about his work whistling as he had never whistled before in his life.—Junior Joys.

A BOY WITH A CONSCIENCE

A curious thing happened to me when I was a lad. When I was ten years old my father died, leaving my mother in straitened circumstances with a large family to support. My older sisters at once began to teach, and as soon as I was old enough I found a job in a clothing store. The work was not hard, but one thing troubled me. My father was a teetotaler and had taught me that it was wrong to drink. Well, there was an old gentleman who stopped daily at the store on his way home and took a drink of whiskey. We did not sell whiskey, but he kept his bottle and glass there because it was convenient. As I was the youngest clerk it was my duty to bring the bottle and glass when he came in.

I worried about it a good deal, and finally went to the head of the firm and told him my conscience would not allow me to encourage any man to drink. He looked at me in amazement, then his face turned red, and he cried, ''See here, boy, are you trying to be impudent?''

''No, sir,'' I replied.

''No one stays in my store who can't take orders from me? You may get your pay, and leave at the end of the week.''

That was a blow. When I went home I told my mother the news. She sighed and said: ''You were quite right, my son. I would not have you disobey your conscience for all the money in the world!''

When the week ended, and I was paid in full, I was told to my great astonishment that the firm would present me with any suit of clothes in the store that I wished to have. I was much pleased and walked out with my new suit under my arm, feeling encouraged and almost cheerful.

I had not gone two steps before one of the owners of the drug store next door accosted me. ''Want a job?'' he asked.

I was too much astonished to answer coherently.

''I hear you're leaving Brown's on account of an abnormally developed conscience!'' he went on. ''Well, that's the kind of young fellow we are needing in our business. Can't have too much conscience in a drug store. Somebody's life might depend on it.''

I had recovered my wits by that time.

''I am glad to get work, sir, and I'll do my best,'' I said.

When I went home and told my mother, and showed her my new suit she exclaimed: ''I knew you were right; we do not always have such quick returns for a little investment in doing what conscience dictates.''—Youth's Companion.

THE SPIDER'S WEB

Late one afternoon my attention was drawn to a very large spider which was spinning a web between the eaves of our porch and a vase of flowers that sat about three feet below. He spun three strands and each time went back to a little spot in the web about the size of a small bean. After the web was fastened to the plants in the vase he wove other strands across about a foot long and from two to three inches apart. After he had fastened these lines he began to travel in a circle, starting from the outside, and making the distance between his lines shorter until they were no farther apart than the width of a pencil. I thought it the most wonderful work I have ever seen done by so small a creature.

When I awoke the next morning I hurried out to see if the dew had fallen on the big spider web. They are beautiful in the early morning before the dew goes off.

But I found only a few fragments of the beautiful web, entangled about parts of a fly and a big black ant.

I thought how the cunning spider is like sin, weaving his web for the purpose of ensnaring to death and destruction. How often a snare is made so beautiful and attractive to lure some fine young man or woman into ruin. David said, ''Keep me from the snares which they have laid for me, and the gins of the workers of iniquity.''

The Lord Jesus came to destroy the works of the devil, and deliver us from his net. He did it by taking our place and dying for us. He will save you, if you will let Him. Only trust Him.—Life Line.

BASIS OF GOOD GOVERNMENT

One of the greatest Christian women of this age has said: ''Mankind will be God-governed in proportion as God's government becomes apparent, the Golden Rule utilized, and the rights of man and the liberty of conscience held sacred.'' Here is undoubtedly the key to present-day difficulties. Capital and labor must meet on the basis of God's government, and there must not be, on either side, any seeking for undue advantage. Obviously some employers and employees regard the present crisis as an opportunity for unfair self-exploitation. The Golden Rule is the only rule that works for all.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

WORDS OF APPRECIATION

The Spring Church Circuit Auxiliary wishes to assure you that the Rally that came to Spring church was a great day for the Auxiliary. It was a day full of information and inspiration, and the Auxiliary feels that it was made stronger by having the rally meet with us.

It was a rare treat to have Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer and Mrs. H. C. Nicholson come to us with their inspirational addresses and words of cheer. They made us feel that we are a part of the great missionary work of our church. They have a standing invitation to come our way again.

The Auxiliary appreciates very much the honor the Rally bestowed on one of their number by electing as Chairman of First District Mrs. Rupert M. Robinson. We as an Auxiliary hereby pledge our hearty cooperation to Mrs. Robinson and to the entire District.

Other officers elected were: First vice-chairman, Mrs. J. F. Alexander; second vice chairman, Mrs. Horace Mitchell; third vice-chairman, Miss Winnie Burt; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Z. A. Hardee.

We were so happy to have Mrs. J. H. Cutchin, former District Chairman, with us and to have her bring us a message of hope and cheer. We were glad to have good delegations from Whitakers, Enfield, Halifax and Spring Church charges. We are sorry the Littleton, Creswell and Greenville pastors and people missed such a great missionary feast.

We were glad to have the following pastors and their wives present: Revs. Peeler, Fogleman and Neese. Each of these pastors added their part to making the program a success, and we thank them for their aid. Mrs. Peeler responded to the welcome in a very interesting way and made us feel that they were all really glad to meet with us. Again we say, "Thank you" for coming our way, and "Come again."

Yours in the great cause of Missions,
SPRING CHURCH CT. AUXILIARY.

SPRING CHURCH CUICUIT AUXILIARY

On Wednesday, October 3rd, the Spring Church Circuit Auxiliary met in the home of Mrs. H. E. Vassar with the president, Mrs. C. E. Dimick, in the chair.

The devotional leader was Mrs. H. E. Vassar. She used the theme laid down in our Study Book, "How to Find Reality in Your Daily Devotions," and brought out in a very interesting way how we may make our daily devotions more real. I am sure if we put into daily practice the thoughts brought out in the lesson that our daily lives will be more Christ-like.

Fourteen members answered to roll call. Three babies were present. The Society was glad to welcome as a visitor Mrs. J. L. Bass, of the Elam Baptist church Auxiliary. The Society decided to order another supply of "Elizabeth Wade Products." Reports of two thank-offerings services were given. Good programs and good collections were reported. The third and last thank-offering service will be held at Pleasant Hill the fourth Sunday night in this month.

Another forward step was taken in our Society when it voted to send the M. P. Herald to Rev. H. S. B. Thompson for one year. Bro. Thompson is a former pastor of this charge and he is also one of our honored superannuate ministers. At our District Rally one Auxiliary pledged another $5 on the Student Loan Fund from First District, (we had already given $10.00), so the treasurer was authorized to send a check to Rev. N. M. Harrison for $5.00.

Mrs. Wm. H. Neese had charge of the program for the meeting and Mrs. J. M. Dunham read a paper on "The Romance of the Bible." Mrs. T. J. Kee used as her subject, "Great Missionaries of the Bible." Both papers were very interesting. Mrs. John Hart had charge of the Question Box.

The meeting adjourned to meet November 1 in the home of Mrs. Clifton Cook.

FOURTEENTH DISTRICT HOLDS STUDY MEETING

A mission study meeting of the Fourteenth District was held at Hickory Ridge church, Forsyth Charge, September 26th, beginning at 10:30 a. m. with Mrs. T. L. Speas, our efficient district chairman, presiding. The meeting opened with the hymn, "Prayer Is the Soul's Sincere Desire," after which impressive devotionals were condhcted by Mrs. R. A. Hunter. A cordial welcome was given us by Miss Anna Cox, responded to by Mrs. T. L. Speas. Four ihurches in the district were represented, Winston, First Church, Maple Springs, Pleasant Hill, and Hickory Ridge.

Mrs. W. B. Speas gave an interesting review of our foreign study book, entitled, "Eastern Women of Today and Tomorrow." The special music from Hickory Ridge young people was greatly enjoyed.

Dinner was spread on the grounds, and a very happy social hour spent together.

The principal features of the afternoon session were a review of our home mission study book entitled "The Christian Mission in America," and made very plain to us by Rev. J. E. Pritchard; also a very helpful message from our beloved Mrs. W. C. Hammer, who carries sunshine and cheer wherever she goes.

We were pleased to have with us Rev. C. H. Whitaker, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, and Rev. C. B. Way, and each gave us words of encouragement, and we felt it was good to be there.

MRS. J. F. HUNTER.

AN ALARMING SITUATION

Aside from the question of prohibition, the small number of votes cast in the referendums in the various states, gives cause for concern. It is indeed an alarming situation when on such an important economic and moral issue two-thirds of the possible voters stay at home. And this is what has happened up to the present time. The first 29 states voting cast a total vote in the last presidential election of 27,710,672. Of this number, less than 11,000,000 have approved the repeal amendment, while a considerably smaller number have voted against it. A ballot which is easily obtained is lightly used, or not used at all.—Exchange.

Clothing and Other Gifts

The Woman's Auxiliary, Enfield, 6 pair stockings, 6 dresses, 5 slips, 7 pieces of underwear and 1 bundle of coupons.

The Woman's Auxiliary, Tabernacle, Tabernacle, 6 dresses and 1 slip.

The Worthville Philathea Class, Randleman, 100 yards of sheeting and dress goods, and cash as above.

We greatly appreciate all the above gifts, both of cash and clothing. Something good might be said about each offering each week, but just occasionally an offering comes which deserves special mention. This time there are two. The offering of one dollar made by little Jack Byrd, of Worthville, represents a dollar that he earned selling second-hand school books. When the Worthville people were making up a special offering for the Home, he said, "Mother, I want to give my dollar." He gave his dollar here instead of spending it upon himself. If all of us will do what Jack has done finances will be cleared up here.

The other is a special offering by the Men's Class of State Street Sunday school. They noted our pleas for funds for coal, clothing and school supplies, and responded with a special offering of $15.00. A large number of such specials would help wonderfully

Donations in Produce

The offerings of produce are coming today from Orange Circuit. It will be reported next week. Others are being gotten ready. When ready please send to us if possible. If you cannot send them we will send for them.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Burlington.—Nearing the end of our Conference year, it seems that our members are making a greater effot to attend church and Sunday school. Our pastor has been unusually pleased with this splendid co-operation. During Dr. Paschall's pastorate here one of his greatest desires has been to see the church auditorium and Baraca room filled to capacity during church services. This desire was granted him on Sunday. We greatly commend the Golden Rule Sunday school class regarding attendance, for taking upon itself the great responsibility of putting over so successfully the "Church Loyalty Campaign," a campaign in which a large percentage of the members pledged to attend church at least once each Sunday if possible during the month of October unless prevented by some good reason which he or she could conscientiously give to their Master. This campaign is a splendid idea and has so far proved satisfactory. Some members have attended the services for the first time in practically two years.

Our revival is in full swing. Rev. Elwood Carroll, of Asheville, is doing the preaching. The congregation is receiving him warmheartedly. His sermons are very consecrated, inspirational, educational, and helpful, all of which helps wonderfully in spreading the spirit of revival everywhere. The invitation was extended Sunday and at the evening worship one of the church members re-dedicated his life to Christ. If we could have this spirit always, what a change there would be! Special music has been furnished at each service, which is very helpful and is much appreciated.

All women's Circles of the Auxiliary assembled individually for a short business hour Monday evening after the service.

October has been set aside as Pay-Up Month, and Dr. Paschal stated that he hoped it would be Paid Up Month instead of merely Pay-Up. REPORTER.

Enfield.—The First District held its annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary at Spring Church September 29. Mrs. R. M. Robinson, acting as temporary chairman since the resignation of Mrs. J. H. Cutchin, called the meeting to order.

Rev. E. O. Peeler conducted the morning devotional. Mrs. W. H. Neese gave a most hearty welcome, with the response from Mrs. E. O. Peeler following.

A most interesting phase of the program was the short talks of the Auxiliary presidents. They were very interesting and helpful.

We greatly enjoyed the helpful talk made by Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, our District chairman. We appreciate very much the encouraging things she said to us.

We wish all of our Auxiliary members could have been with us at the lunch. The bountiful lunch was spread on a table under the lovely old trees. Not a person present could say they did not enjoy the mingling together around that table.

Again we were called to worship by the devotional conducted by Rev. Mr. Neese. Our speaker for the afternoon was no other than that most loved person, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro. It was inspiring to listen to her, and how we wanted to do more for "His" work as we listened.

Rev. H. F. Fogleman presented the Student Loan Fund of the First District, securing a few more pledges to be added to those already made.

The nominating committee submitted the following names as officers for the ensuing year: Chairman, Mrs. R. M. Robinson, Pleasant Hill; first vice-chairman, Miss Winnie Burt, Enfield; second vice-chairman, Mrs. Horace Mitchell, Littleton; third vice-chairman, Mrs. J. P. Alexander, Creswell; secretary, Mrs. Z. A. Hardee, Enfield.

These were unanimously accepted.

During the day we enjoyed special music from the various churches on Spring Church charge.

Mrs. J. H. Cutchin extended an invitation from Whitakers auxiliary that we meet with them next year.

MRS. Z. A. HARDEE, Sec'y.

Graham.—The Ray Bible class elected the following officers during the class hour this morning: Mr. J. S. Cook, who has taught this class for the last 25 years, was re-elected as teacher. Mr. Lewis Stanfield was elected assistant teacher. Mr. F. V. Steel was elected president, and I am sure he will give his best towards building up the attendance of the class. He has lots of pep. Mr. Harper Quackenbush, who made a good president the past year, was elected vice-president. Mr. L. W. Cheek, who served so faithfully as secretary and treasurer the last year, was re-elected, and Mr. L. H. Linens was elected as assistant and this writer was elected reporter for the class. We want to urge every member of the class to try and attend as regularly as possible, and watch us grow.

Union Grove Church, Mocksville Charge.—Our revival meeting closed a week ago last Wednesday evening. We had several conversions and as a whole it was a success. Rev. Mr. Hutton was liked by everybody, and we enjoyed having him and Mr. Ferree visit us in our homes during the meeting.

Our pastor baptized two and received eight into the church last Sunday morning at his regular appointment.

We are grieved to give up three of our church members in death within the last 30 days. The first one was Mrs. S. B. White, who was killed by lightning. Inseparable for nearly 50 years in life, James Elisha Jurney and his wife, Susanna Sophronia Johnson Jurney, of Union Grove township, were parted only a few hours by death. Mrs. Jurney, just past her 69th birthday, became suddenly ill and died Monday, October 2. She was buried Wednesday afternoon, October 4, and two hours after the funeral her husband, who was past 74 years of age, succumbed to an illness of several years' duration.

Our Sunday school is still in progress. Its average attendance for the past quarter was 92 and the average attendance for the past month was 102.

Last Sunday we reorganized our Sunday school. The officers are as follows: Superintendent, Mr. O. B. Templeton; assistant superintendent, Professor Wolfe; secretary, Flora Mae Wooten; assistant secretary, Mary Lea White; pianist, Iyllian Harris; assistant pianist, Helen Templeton.

Church officers: Reporter, Lyllian Harris; treasurer; J. A. Wooten; class leader, J. C. Templeton; stewards, Mrs. W. B. White, E. W. Harris, Fleet Madison, Mrs. Will White, Lois White, Hugh White, Etheridge Templeton: trustees, Leonard Templeton, R. F. Rush, J. A. Wooten, J. C. Templeton, O. G. Templeton.

May we ever go forward and upward to reach the goal. Not downward and backward. FLORA MAE WOOTEN.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—Our pastor preached a wonderful sermon on Temperance. I think all ought to say, Preach more such sermons.

There were about 50 out to hear Brother Bingham preach.

Officers were electer, mostly the old board. Let's start in right away and do our best for the Master.

The Lord's Supper was administered; a goodly number partook.

There is some sickness among our members. Mr. V. E. Loflin has been sick but is some better. We hope that he will soon be well and able to be at church. He is always faithful to come to church and is at his place when it is possible. Others are sick; pray for them all, that if it is the Lord's will they may be restored to health.

The Conference year will soon be over. We have only one more appointment, the fifth Sunday in October.

Quarterly conference on Saturday before the fourth Sunday at 2 o'clock at Chapel Hill campground.

We are expecting Brother E. A. Bingham back and we hope that all will do their part and pay up.

Today, Monday, Brother Bingham is to preach the funeral of one of Pine Hill's most faithful members, Mr. Harrison Ferrell, at Pine Hill.

Don't forget the Sunday school, and attend all you can. I wish that I could attend every Sunday. I love to be in Sunday school.

Our pastor is helping in a meeting at Lexington. We pray that they will have a great meeting. ABIGAIL COGGIN.

* * *

Cedar Cliff, Mt. Hermon Charge.—On Sunday, October 13, we had an all-day service. It was in the form of a memorial service. The groves were decorated with flowers. Mr. G. H. Enfield preached in the morning, and Mr. Mabry in the evening.

We have organized a Christian Endeavor Society with the following officers: Margaret Edwards, president; Mrs. R. M. Boger, vice-president; Mr. R. M. Boger, secretary, Mr. Coy Payne, treasurer. We have had two meetings. We meet every Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock.

The reguar quarterly meeting and the last one for the year will be held at this church Saturday before the fourth Sunday, Oct. 26.

This charge is getting along fine with the finaniial part. We are planning to pay up in full, as this church has been doing for the past years.

We are very sorry to hear of one of oor number being sirk, Mrs. A. G. Thompson. She left this morning for Duke, where she will remain for 14 days.

Sinle the last report we have had a marriage, Miss Hazel Cooper to Mr. R. M. Boger. Miss Cooper is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Cooper. Mr. Boger is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Boger. They are both members of this church. REPORTER.

Randolph Charge.—We began our special meeting at Gray's Chapel the fourth Sunday in September. Dr. Andrews was with us for the 11 o'clock service Sunday. Rev. J. M. Morgan came to us on Monday and did all the preaching from then until Friday night. The pastor continued the meeting through Sunday night, October 1st. The people appreciated the preaching of Bro. Morgan very much. Th ey gave good attention and we are sure that all who heard him were greatly benefited. The message by Dr. Andrews on Sunday was heard by a large and attentive audience. We are sure it will bring forth much fruit. We were glad to have these brethren with us.

The meeting resulted in 20 conversions and 18 additions to the church. We are now talking Sunday school rooms at this church. We will take the vote the fifth Sunday. We urge all who are interested to be present at that time. EDW. SUITS.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—Let me remind you that Sunday, October 15, will be Home-Coming at our church. Rev. G. F. Millaway will preach at 11 o'clock. At three o'clock in the afternoon former pastors are to be present to bring greetings and short addresses. Let former members come home and present members who are away come back. J. E. PRITCHARD.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—First Sunday evening was our regular appointment for service. But our president, Dr. R. M. Andrews, preached in Mr. Bingham's place; was real glad to have him.

Sunday morning Mr. Bingham gave us an inspiring sermon, preaching from the Book of Esther, and when he had finished he gave some points that a Christian might be doing or not doing, according to the Book of Esther.

Our Sunday school has started a contest running from the Juniors up. Each class is to see which one will get the highest percentage. By each one learning their topic and golden text by memory, studying their lesson and being on time for this quarter. The winning class will be awarded a prize.

Fourth quarterly conference will be held in Littleton Saturday before the fourth Sunday, October 21, 1933.

Mr. Bingham will preach for us on the fifth Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and the officers of the church will be elected. This will mean we have only one more time, the first Sunday night in November, before Conference. We do not know whether he will be sent back to us or not, but wherever they go, to know them is to love them. It seems that everyone that comes in contact with Bro. Bingham believes he is a good man. Folks, that's what we need to be. We do not know when the Lord will call, and we may not have time to repent of our sins as Saul did.

We were glad to have Mr. Leo Pittard and Mr. Allison Thompson, of High Point College, with us the first Sunday night.

Misses Willie and Arthur Hawkins spent the week-end with their mother, Mrs. Captain Hawkins, Sunday. Willie, Claude, Paul, Arthur, and Phillips, spent the afternoon with her.

We are sorry to report that Mr. and Mrs. Tom Carpenter's little girl is real ill after having scarlet fever.

MRS. CLAUDE HAWKINS, Reporter.

Graham.—Rally Day was observed in our church and Sunday school last Sunday. The story, "The Tie That Binds," was read by Mrs. S. S. Holt. Every one was pleased with the service and we think we had a good offering, but due to the absence of the treasurer, Miss Gladys Amick, who was visiting in Washington, D. C., the amount was not learned at the time of this writing.

The Every-Member Canvass is moving forward nicely. This year we are asking for Service along with Substance, and we are urging that our people take as seriously the matter of pledging their service as their substance. The one is just as important as the other. We urge that no cards be returned without pledging some kind of service. It is the desire of the board of stewards that cards be returned as soon as possible. The board of stewards want to be able to say to the fourth quarterly conference on the 24th what the people are willing to do financially as well as the kind of service they are willing to pledge.

Special prayer services are being held each Saturday evening for those who find it impossible to attend the Wednesday night service. J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Shiloh.—Pastor R. S. Troxler brought one of the most encouraging messages of the year on the first Sunday morning, using as his text, "The winds were contrary." The Christian meets contrary winds on the sea of life, but the presence of Christ brings peace and good cheer.

The fourth quarterly conference meets at Shiloh next Saturday, October 14, at 2 p. m. Every member is urged to be there.

On the first Sunday in November the church roll will be called. As each name is called, the amount paid to the church by that person during the Conference year will be announced. This is not being done to humiliate anyone, for if one has done his best it is acceptable with God. So let's all do our best between now and the first Sunday in November that we may not be ashamed before God or man.

We hope to wind up the year with everything paid in full.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF, Reporter.

Rockingham.—We observe Sunday school at 9:45 o'clock under the direction of W. M. Jenkins, superintendent. Our attendance at Sunday school and preaching is not as good as we would like, but our offering is fine. We hope the attendance will grow in accordance with the offering.

At the 11 o'clock service Rev. C. W. Saunders brought us an inspiring message. He took his text from the 14th chapter of St. John, 27th verse, "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." He also explained that the mission of the church was to get those in the church closer to the Lord, and that it should go out in the community and bring people into the church. He took his text for the evening service from the 21st verse of the 18th chapter of Ezekiel, "But the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die." I don't think I have ever heard him preach a better sermon. It was soul-inspiring and I believe everyone was benefiated by it.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held Saturday evening before the fifth Sunday. We realize much will have to be done before then. Hope all will do their very best in the next few weeks.

RUBY MARTIN, Reporter.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Since our last report our pastor, Rev. P. E. Bingham has brought us some inspiring sermons. The first Sunday in September our revival began. Rev. Mr. Bradley, from the M. E. church at Lincolnton, was the pulpit help. He presented the Gospel in a very forceful way. All who heard him appreciated his messages. There were no additions to the church, but we feel that the church was greatly strengthened by Mr. Bradley's Gospel sermons.

The first Sunday in October Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference, was with us at the 11 o'clock service. He delivered a very helpful sermon and presented the cause of the Annual Conference budget. We are glad to say our church raised the full amount of this budget at this time. We were glad to have Dr. Andrews with us, and hope he will come again soon.

The union Sunday school is getting on nicely. During the month of August the Sunday schools gave two lawn parties and sold ice cream to raise money for the church.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at Littleton M. P. church on Saturday, October 21, at 2 p. m. We hope all officials will be present.

There are just a few more weeks before Annual Conference, and there is much work to be done. May each one do his part and work together to try to make this year the best we have ever had. We hope to meet our financial obligations in full.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Albemarle.—Here are a few items for the Herald: Rev. J. R. Anderson is assisting Rev. D. I. Garner in a revival meeting at St. Paul church, Greensboro. He returned to his home for the week-end, and filled his pulpit Sunday morning, returning to Greensboro Sunday afternoon.

Mr. J. P. Green has been elected our delegate to the Annual Conference, with Ira Smart as alternate. At a meeting of the church September 28 an overwhelming vote was given for the return of our present pastor, only two votes being cast against him.

Sunday school officers for the coming year have been elected as follows: Superintendent, J. P. Green; assistant superintendent, J. U. Whitlock; secretary, D. L. Hatley; department superintendents, Cradle Roll and Beginners, Mrs. J. R. Anderson and Mrs. E. C. Lowder; Primary and Junior, Mrs. D. J. Hatley; Intermediate, Mrs. C. S. Moton. A teachers' and officers' meeting is called for Friday night of this week to complete arrangements of classes and make other plans for their year's work together.

We are very pleased to announce that C. L. Hatley has again return to his home after a stay of almost a year in Oteen Sanitorium. Although he will not be able to take his place in the church for quite a while yet, we are grateful to have him again in our midst.

Mr. and Mrs. John U. Whitlock spent last week in Chicago, attending the World's Fair. They made the trip by auto, without mishaps of any kind.

The Cam Snotherly Circle met in the home of Mrs. Boyd Gantt Tuesday, October 3rd, for its regular meeting. Officers for the new year were elected as follows: Chairman, Mrs. C. W. Hatley; vice-chairman, Mrs. C. L. Taylor; secretary, Mrs. J. R. Anderson; tresurer, Mrs. Boyd Gantt; ways and means committee, Mrs. C. S. Moton, Mrs. J. A. Furr, Mrs. J. U. Whitlock; program committee, Mrs. D. L. Hatley, Mrs. Luke Cook and Mrs. B. C. Burleson. This Circle is planning to have a "Quarter Social" next week at the home of Mrs. J. R. Anderson. The Lucy Hatley Circle members are especially invited to attend this affair.

Mrs. Walter Russell was hostess to the Lucy Hatley Circlie at their October meeting. The following new officers were elected: Chairman, Mrs. D. J. Hatley; vice-chairman, Mrs. J. P. Green; secretary, Mrs. Ira Smart; treasurer, Mrs. J. E. Gantt, ways and means committee, Mrs. C. B. Efird, Mrs. W. J. Hornbuckle, and Mrs. J. D. Smith; program committee, Mrs. Paul Helms and Mrs. Allen Wagoner.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Johnson, of Charlotte, spent the week-end in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Moton.

Liberty—We are having quite a number of activities in our Auxiliary Circles just now, trying to balance up all claims before Conference.

Mrs. V. H. Dameron was hostess to Circle No. 1 at her attractive home on Fayetteville street. Mrs. Clarence Highfill, chairman.

Plans were discussed for forwarding the work of the Auxiliary, after which a delicious salad course was served. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Lawrence Brown.

Circle No. 2 met with Mrs. J. B. York as hostess at her hospitable home on Asheboro street. Mrs. Fred R. Love, chairman. Mrs. R. L. Elkins gave us a talk on her visit to the "Hall of Religion" at the Chicago Century of Progress.

Plans were discussed and dues paid, etc.. after which dainty refreshments were served in a charming manner by the hostess.

The Philathea class, Mrs. Mamie Smith, teacher, met with Mrs. Herman Amick in the August meeting. A pleasant time was enjoyed in fellowship and plans for work by various committees were discussed.

The September meeting convened with Mrs. Fred Reitzel. Business was transacted. New officers were elected and a general good time was enjoyed. A contest was engaged in, and refreshments were servd.

All our work is going on smoothly and also in a harmonious way, and last, but not least, in a prayerful way.

We have devotional readings and prayers at all these meetings, and they promote interest and fellowship and are very much worth while.

Our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, assisted Rev. T. M. Johnson at Liberty Grove in a two weeks' revival. He did some thoughtful preaching. Much interest was manifested and the church was greatly revived.

Mr. Love will preach at his regular appointment the fourth Sunday morning at Liberty and also the installation of officers will be held at that time.

We ask for guidance, O God our Father, so that we may make the most and best of this one time we have to live. We should pray much in these perplexing times. May we have the spiritual equipment that may give us the wisdom and understanding to know just how to be the best men and women whatever else we may accomplish in life.

THE MENTAL GARDEN

Resentment is an ugly thing;
It crowds the roses out.
Keep your mental garden fair—
Put harmful weeds to rout.

Seed-thoughts that you cultivate
Within your fertile mind,
Bring forth varied blossoms
According to their kind.

Anger, malice, worry, fear,
Are noxious mental weeds,—
Quickly rid your mind of them
Before they choke your seeds.

Faith, gentleness, humility,
Truth, patience, selfless love,
Are specimens of lovely plants
Delighting God above.

Your mental garden is a place
In which you daily dwell;
Let nothing ugly flourish there,
Safeguard and tend it well.

And when at last the Gardener
Comes to behold your ground,
Be sure that He will love and praise
The beauty He has found.

THE FAIR OF PHANTASY

During Chicago's well known Century of Progress our architects have been able to cut loose from their ancient dependence upon beams and buttresses and thus give their imagination the fullest possible scope. With artificial light and ventilation, windows need no longer intrude upon the architect's flight of fancy, while the modern door is simply a piece of the wall on hinges. The result of these tendencies is now on display on Chicago's lake front. The visitor is guaranteed this satisfaction—he knows he has never been there before. A minister (who had evidently passed by the side shows) remarked, "There isn't a beautiful shape on the lot." Yet the architecture of the Chicago Fair has its brighter moments. Like most barns, it looks better by moonlight than daylight, while the twilight is a moment of whimsical beauty. Because of the better control of light, the interiors are often more pleasing than the exteriors. Many rooms are quite remarkabe. The parts are rather better than the whole, as neighbors have a tendency to detract from one another. But the garishness and gadiness with occasional moments of loveliness is altogether typical of the city which created the Fair. It belongs to Chicago.—John R. Scotford, in the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty.

GOLD HOARDING PROSECUTIONS

When the government announced it was out to end racketeering, kidnaping and gangdom it was apparently taken as a bluff, especially by the offenders themselves. But what the Justice Department has done since has made the very ground on which kidnapers and racketeers stand quake beneath them. The same thing is apparently happening, or about to happen to the large hoarders of gold.

Persons who failed to turn in their gold hoardings in comliance with executive orders or to make returns listing their holdings with the Treasury, turned anxious eyes to New York where new scenes in the gold drama were being unfolded. Treasury and Justice Department officials proved that threats of prosecution were not idle jests by placing charges against Frederick B. Campbell, lawyer and international insurance figure. Campbell's own action, in the form of a civil suit to have gold returned to him by the Chase National Bank, caused him to be singled out for the first test case against gold holders. A United States attorney in New York opposed his civil suit asking for a restraining order preventing the bank from turning the gold over to the Federal Reserve Bank and won. When the U. S. attorney asked Washington what to do next, Treasury and Justice Department officials decided to proceed with an indictment against Campbell, turning the civil suit into criminal charges. But Campbell was not charged with hoarding gold. The indictment was based, primarily, on the ground that he failed to comply with Treasury regulations requiring all holders of large amounts of gold to file returns showing how much they had. He was alleged to be holding over $200,000 and the grand jury returned an indictment.

March 28 last was the original dead-line for all persons who held more than $100 in gold, bullion, coin, or gold certificates, to voluntarily surrender it to the Treasury. This time limit was extended from time to time, the final date being September 18, with threats of prosecution or publication of the names of hoarders. But no specific action was taken until the opportunity for a test case came.

In the meantime, the Department of Justice had carried on an intensive investigation of the list of people who had withdrawn gold from banks. Between March 13 and August 20, the Federal Reserve Board recently reported, approximately $2,000,000,000 came out of hoarding, most in old large bills of large denominations. When the test case came up there were about 200 persons known to have great sums of the yellow pay dirt and who had defied the President's executive orders demanding its return. The outcome of the Campbell case will likely govern the government's next step in dealing with other "offenders."—Pathfinder.

HUGE CHINESE ROAD SYSTEM

The question of a huge national road system for China, has recently been revived. As originally outlined some three years ago, it was proposed by the national government to build two systems. One of these would be a commercial road system, while the other would be primarily a national defense line, following the frontier. The entire project called for the construction of nearly 22,000 American miles of roadway, at an estimated cost of over $350,000,000.00.—Christian Sun.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Murphy

Sally Margaret McGowan was born February 14, 1873, and after spending 60 years, 6 months and 20 days of usefulness among the peoples of this world, on September 4, 1933, her spirit returned to the God who gave it.

On December 26, 1894, she was married to Capt. J. D. Murphy. To this union were born two sons, who with their father survive. Sister Murphy was converted and joined Kelly's Chapel M. E. Church, South, at Carlyle, South Carolina, in 1894. Hoving to Brown, Summit, where her husband was section master for the Southern Railway Company, she lived several years before uniting with the church here, but in 1925 she joined the Methodist Protestant Church at that place.

She was intensely interested in the program of the kingdom, and when physically able, we found her in her place at the time of work or worship. In giving her best, working in any place, doing all she could for the church she loved, she won the respect and confidence of the entire community. When she left us to join the Church Triumphant her neighbors sensed a personal loss, and it will be a long time before this church will overcome the loss sustained in her passing.

She was one of the best, most consecrated women this writer ever knew. Cheerfulness, faith and optimism seemed always to shine forth from her life, and in her presence one soon imbibed the same spirit.

The village church was filled, and a great number of friends were turned away from its doors on the day of her funeral. The writer, assisted by Rev. W. F. Ashburn, spoke the funeral rites. Interment was made in Forest Lawn cemetery.

Wright

George Robert Wright, son of Milton Wright and his wife, Betsy Troxler, was born October 15, 1848, and departed this life in the wee small hours of October 2, 1933, at the age of 84 years, 11 months and 17 days.

When about 20 years of age, and while walking along the country road, thinking on things spiritual, he quietly and completely surrendered his heart and life to the Lord, later joining the church at Fair Grove Methodist Protestant Church in Rockingham County, near where he was then living.

Fifty-three years ago he settled at what is now the old home-plame of the surviving family of four sons and one daughter. He transferred his church membership to the then young and strugging Midway church where he remained a consistent and loyal member throughout his long life. For many years he taught the Bible class in "the old church," being a great Bible student and a spiritual leader of the church during his earlier life, often taking the place of exhorter in the absence of the minister.

He was twice married, the first wife, nee Miss Rhoda Hopkins, to whom he was married December 22, 1881, lived only a few years, leaving her husband near middle life and childless. His second marriage was to Miss Cattie Sue Butler, May 12, 1904, who with the children mentioned above survive his going.

The last years of his life were hard years. Hard because of the afflictions that were his. Life seemed at times to be a burden, and as he awaited his release, he seemed to retain his interest in and anxiety for the affairs of the church he loved.

Rev. A. G. Dixon, D. D., a life-long friend, and for many years his nearest neighbor, came and spoke briefly, yet interestingly of the friendship and love each held for the other. Rev. W. F. Ashburn, a former pastor, also assisted the writer in the funeral services.

Followed by the largest congregation ever to assemble in the "new church" at Midway, we bore his body to its final resting place beneath the shadows of the church to which he gave his life, and awaiting the dawn of a more Glorious Tomorrow we left it there, but the spirit and influence of George Wright is still marching on.

EVEN GRAMMAR PROGRESSES

Just the other day we had a letter from someone who was very must upset because we had used "don't." Other correctionists have filed objections to our ending sentences with prepositions and some other minor infractions of the rules of ancient purist English grammar. But the Pathfinder tries to be liberal and modern in its writings. It has long refused to be bound by those ancient rules which call for a different English from that spoken by the average American.

In fact, we have always fought these ancient and confusing rules which many a boy and girl now in school often wishes were thrown on the scrap heap because it takes so long to learn them and then they are usually discarded in real life. Pupils in many cases become so disgusted with the study of "English" that they leave school with the idea that they never want to look inside a book again, or obey any rules at all, whether of grammar or anything else.

In writing the Pathfinder we will not permit "rules" to stand in the way of saying what we mean, and saying it with vigor, clearness and punch. We know professors of English who write and speak what they think is perfect English, but who don't say anything even when they try to express themselves, and who couldn't hold an audience for two minutes on their merits.

We say, further, that any person, young or old, who reads the Pathfinder faithfully is not in any danger of being corrupted either as to his English, his morals or anything else. On the contrary, such a person is certain to improve in every way, for his mental diet is wholesome and upbuilding. That is why the Pathfinder during the course of years has gained such a great audience, and has been able to hold that audience.

And at last the English professors themselves are seeing the light. Some of them have even made so bold as to declare that the contents of the grammar textbooks now in use in our schools are out of tune with the facts of current usage. If you have not heard of it there is a bitter battle being waged between the liberalists and purists over modern English grammar usage. Prof. Robert C. Pooley, of the University of Wisconsin English department, is one of the most prominent liberalists. He recently issued a bulletin on the subject. In this bulletin he says present-day textbooks stick to traditional standards and neglect contemporary linguistic principles; that they fail to represent accurately and faithfully modern English as it actually is used in speech and writing.

"Rules of the textbooks," the bulletin continues, "inherited from 18th century language reformers and purists, and supposedly descriptive of the grammar, syntax and usage of modern English, are in many instances partially or totally misrepresentative of current textbooks, their authors are not trained in philology or linguistic science, and in some instances they do not know, or show no signs of knowing, essential facts in the history and development of English. It is true that they cleave to a traditional and authoritarian theory of correctness and are deaf to the language which even they and their colleagues use."

So, if you want to say "don't," use double negatives, split infinitives and the like, or disregard the old rules about the subject agreeing with the verb or otherwise break the "rules of the game," that is your privilege. You can't be hung for it. You will only be being modern and using modern American English—the kind most of us use. If you were to listen for just one hour to a session of either house of Congress, or any gathering of representative people anywhere, you would know what we mean.—Editorial in The Pathfinder.

JESUS RETRIED BY THE JEWS

From the Hebrew Messenger we glean further details of the recent retrial of Jesus by the Jews. It took place in Jerusalem during July before a packed assembly. The judges were composed of a number of highly educated Jews, and the case was opened by Dr. Beldeissel, a prominent Jewish jurist. The prosecutor was Dr. Blandeisler, whose speech covers a document of a thousand typewritten pages, and who spoke to uphold the judgment of the Sanhedrin. The defense was led by Dr. Reichswehr, who stated that he would prove that the judgment of the Sanhedrin in the case of Jesus was unjust, and that His crucifixion was judicial murder. Hhe spoke for five hours and then the judges retired to consider their verdict. When they returned they announced that by a vote of four to one they affirmed the complete innocence of Jesus, finding that the complaint against Him was based on a "dreadful mistake," and declaring their belief that divine judgment would follow upon the Jewish people until they freed themselves of their horrible sin. Perhaps the "blindness in part" is about to pass from Israel.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

20,000 AUTO FATALITIES

Reports compiled by one of the leading automobile insurance companies, show that nearly 20,000 persons have been killed, and more than 570,000 injured in the over a half-million automobile accidents which occurred during the first nine months of 1933. On the basis of current trends, it is estimated that this year's fatalities will exceed last year's record of 29,000.

CRIME

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings warns the legal profession that the federal government has started a campaign to ferret out "scavenger" lawyers who by illegal practices abet crime. He says: "The time has come in this country for a clean-up of the Bar."

Col. Calvin Goddard, director of research at Northwestern University's crime detection laboratory, claims that instead of being on the wane, crime is about to sweep the country in a new wave and riding the crest will be kidnapings, bank robberies, mail robberies and industrial racketeering.

The American Legion is planning a nation-wide war on crime.

An Emergency Committee on Crime, consisting of 14 leaders of public safety forces throughout the country, are named to work with Attorney General Cummings in directing a nation-wide war on crime.

Seven persons, including Harvey Bailey and Albert Bates, are convicted under the "Lindbergh" law at Oklahoma City, of kidnaping Charles F. Urschel, oil milionaire, and face life sentences.

At Edwardsville, Ill., six persons are convicted of kidnaping August Luer, 77-year-old Alton, Ill., banker, and are sentenced to varying prison terms ranging from five years to life.

Eleven desperate convicts escape from the state penitentiary at Michigan City, Ind., kidnaping a county sheriff and holding him as a hostage for a time.—Pathfinder.

THIS BEER SELLER WAS MISTAKEN

A correspondent writing in the People's Forum column of the Columbus Evening Dispatch who signs himself "A Small Business Man," 503 E. Whittier street, tells a sad story. He says that he is one of the "suckers" who bought a beer license in April, for which he has paid to date $80. We infer that the gentleman isn't doing a thriving business and that he thinks the high tax on beer is the cause. Doesn't he recall that the sponsors for beer told him along with the other 125 million people of the country that the purpose of legalized beer was to raise revenue—to pull Uncle Sam out of the hole, that beer drinkers would gladly pay that revenue and thereby "lower taxes?" Now that he discovers the beer drinkers can't pay and he finds himself holding the sack, he wails as follows:

"Well, to make a long story short, I would like to know what to do with our licenses which now decorate our walls.

"The beer cap tax of two cents on every bottle of beer, for poor relief they say; well, I don't see how they figure, for the sale of bottle beer has fallen off 80 per cent, causing the industry to lay off many men who were making good money, besides what it is doing to me and others like me. I will be another one on charity if they don't repeal this abominable tax.

"In conclusion I ask every consumer of bottle beer to quit buying it and not pay the extra tax to the politicians, for iy you do there will be more taxes and you will be paying champagne prices for a poor man's drink. Beer is a good horse and the politicians are going to ride him hard.

"They ruined the industry once with taxes, and they are going to do it again. I never voted dry in my life, but I am afraid they have a dry convert this fall, along with thousands of others that feel as I do."—The American Issue.

MORE FEDERAL RELIEF

Broadening his plans for helping the farmer and at the same time providing for adequate relief for the unemployed, President Roosevelt instructs Federal Emergency Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins to set up immediately a non-profit corporation for the purchase of food, fuel and clothing to distribute among the needy. Designed to stimulate farm prices by the consumption of food supplies, the corporation will be a sort of collecting agency under a broad relief plan. It will have $330,000,000 to spend this winter. Administrator Hopkins says the program will be based on the determination that no person shall go hungry or unclothed or cold. As previously reported, this corporation will work in co-operation with the Agricultural Adjustment Administrator and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, and is expected to function through county setups. Pointing out that if relief appropriations are cut many children will be without shoes and many adults will go hungry and cold, Administrator Hopkins said: "We mean it when we say we are going to take care of these people this winter. Don't accept a relief job if you don't intend to take care of these people."—Pathfinder.

NATION ON A BEER DRUNK

I have just returned from a four months' tour through the northwestern states. In these states, except North Dakota, beer is sold in all sorts of places: saloon bars, soda fountains, restaurants, filling stations, grocery stores, drug stores, hot dog stands, candy stores—nearly everywhere, save in Sunday school picnics.

Under the "New Deal" the suds are sold without any apparent restrictions. Many of the beer saloons are kept open all night and all day Sundays, selling to children along with candy and soda water.

Moreover, in my visits to more than 200 towns and cities, I observed that, in nearly every case, the beer was sold by young girls, mostly in their teens. In once place, within a space of one block, there were three regular bars. In two of them, young girls acted as bartenders.

The beer situation is far more dangerous and menacing than was the saloon in the old days.

My thesis was and is that whatever may be done about the Eighteenth Amendment, we are in for a five-year drunk just the same.

The character of beer has not changed; it has been the principle drunk-producing beverage in this world for four thousand years. —W. E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson.

BANKING

The Treasury announces that it has completed details for reorganizing and reopening 375 national banks in 37 states, and is making every effort to free the $2,000,000,000 still tied up in closed banks. J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency, and his department have been working overtime to speed up the bank reopening program. Last reports show that 14,800 banks have been licensed to open since the holiday and there are more than 2,500 others still to be licensed. A total of $398,134,000 was paid to depositors in closed national banks between March 5 and September 23.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation announces appointment of 100 bank examiners to survey the qualifications of banks for membership in the new corporation. Approximately 2,500 others will be needed to comlete the survey by January 1 when the deposit guarantee law goes into effect.

So many bank employes in the District of Columbia have embezzled funds in the past that bankers are considering new safeguards for funds entrusted to them.—Pathfinder.

WORLD WONDERS

For centuries the pyramids of Egypt have looked down upon wayfarer and native alike. Truly the wonder of all times, they required the work of a hundred thousand men for more than 20 years. Yet only recently there has been completed a wonder—which, to us, seems commonplace—that is more marvelous than even the pyramids. The Khedive Ismail bridge, crossing the Nile at Cairo, is 1,260 feet long. It has two spans of 66 feet, electrically operated, which open to give passage to river traffic. The bridge itself, also has a width of 66 feet. In its building man harnessed machinery, while the pyramids represent the labor of slaves.—Exchange.

KEEP THAT WAISTLINE DOWN

In the race for a longer, healthier life, men who manage to keep a small waistline until they reach middle age have a running start on those who don't. This was the conclusion reached by the Public Health Service after an intensive study of more than 3,000 men from 1909 to 1928. In fact, overweight people seem to have the worst of it regardless of age when it comes to mortality rates. Tuberculosis takes the greatest toll from the underweight.

Taking the age to be 45 years or over, heart disease causes 253 deaths per 100,000 persons of 50 pounds or more overweight; 213 for normal weight and only 161 for those 25 or more pounds underweight. For nephritis and Bright's disease we find that the death rate is about 171 per 100,000 for overweight, 123 for normal and 109 for underweights. Cancer rates are about the same for all weights but appendicitis is more prevalent among the stout. So keep your eye on that bay window and out of the ice box.—Pathfinder.

RUSSIAN CONDITIONS IMPROVING

Two American Senators, William Gibbs McAdoo of California, and Robert Reynolds of North Carolina, who visited Leningrad and Moscow, were favorably impressed with conditions in Russia and gained the impression that recognition by the United States would be welcomed by the Soviets. CUBANS IN REVOLT

A battle between loyal troops and the besieged officers in the National Hotel in Havana resulted in an estimated 50 dead and 200 wounded. One of the slain wos Robert C. Lotspeich, of London, Ohio, who met his death with a stray bullet as he watched the progress of the battle. Other Americans caught in the fighting zone were removed from danger during a truce arranged by Ambassador Sumner Wells. At the end of the day the 500 former army officers who had been virtual prisoners in the hotel since mid-August surrendered. Intervention is still not planned by the State Department despite the death of the American citizen. And no troops may be landed without orders from Washington, reversing a previous order. However, 500 Marines left on the battleship Wyoming for Cuba.

A few days previously an engagement of 50,000 Reds and 500 troops led to the deaths of six and the wounding of about 25. Joseph E. Gibson, an American newsreel cameraman, was injured. The general strike called the day after this clash failed to materialize due to the scattering of the Communists during the encounter. —Pathfinder.

FACTS ABOUT BEASTS

The kangaroo babies, when first born, are only one inch in length!

The flying lemur or galago, a native of the Indian Archipelago, leaps on an inclined plane a distance of over 300 feet!

Some other famous jumpers are the kangaroo, who is able to jump between 15 and 20 feet on the level—and can easily overleap the ordinary hedges and fences. The springbok clears between 30 and 40 feet at a jump —and the flying squirrel travels about 50 feet in the air before landing!

The elephant's trunk contains 50,000 muscles—and is strong enough to lift a log and delicate enough to pick a pin from the ground.

The Arctic fox, the stoat and the blue or mountain hare change their color scheme in winter in favor of a white fur coat. This is done to protect themselves, since they can hardly be seen in the white background. However, there are many other animals that do the same.

Sheep gather together at the approach of a storm and find shelter under trees and hedges, long before others are aware of an impending rain.

The donkey was a beast of burden hundreds of years before horses were tamed.

A seal, although it spends almost all of its life in the water, is not a fish! It is an animal!

A camel's ability to go without food and water for long periods can be easily understood. The camel has four stomachs! It eats and stores its food in advance!

The giraffe can see behind him without turning his head. This is due to the great distance which his eye-balls extend from their sockets!

The beaver cuts down trees, trims trees, cuts them into logs, floats them down the river and, finally, builds its dams out of them.

The hippopotamus and elephant, two of the largest creatures, are vegetarians!—Will Herman.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

Clothing for Boys

Thanks to the Woman's Auxiliaries, as per our recent reports. Our girls are pretty well clothed now for the winter except sweaters and coats. Our boys! Most of the cothing has to be bought for boys, so right now we have to pay for overalls, shirts, stockings, and shoes for 50 boys. It will take around $7.50 per boy to do it. And that is made possible only because the Biltmore Industries of Asheville gave us the cloth for boys' suits, and we have had these suits made at a very reasonable figure. Thirty-nine of these suits are ready for us when we can get the money to pay for the making.

If individual men and men's classes will respond for the boys as the women have done for the girls they will soon be clad for the winter.

This call is a bit late, so requires quick action. Who will help? Thank you, and God bless you.

Faithfully,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

Depression in Bible Times

Esau was in deep depression,
He feared that he would die;
Jacob saved him with his pottage,
With price marked up sky-high.

Jacob came to days of famine,
His sons in need of bread;
Egypt gave their people favor,
Their minds were freed from dread.

Sons of Jacob crossed a desert
And lacked both food and drink;
Heaven sent them bread in plenty
And gave new grounds to think.

Seer Elijah, God's great prophet,
Was driven out from home;
God provided well for him
Wherever he did roam.

Famine entered Christian churches,
But God did not forsake;
This is part of God's great plan
The better care to take.

Depressions come, but God leaves not;
His plans He pushes through.
Hear Him, trust Him and obey Him—
The thing for us to do!

Richard H. Brooks

This dear brother has departed to be with Christ. He died last Friday morning at his home in this city. He had suffered long, but endured patiently and even cheerfully. He was a man distinguished by many virtues. He delighted to do others good and made friends of many. He was a charter member of Grace Methodist Protestant church and was for about forty years a leader in the business of the Odell Hardware Company. Brother J. Norman Wills, an intimate friend and associate, who knew him better than did any other man, has been asked to write a fitting tribute to the deceased. We expect it will appear in our columns this week.

May the family of Brother Brooks be constantly sustained by the assurances of the Gospel of Christ!

KEEP THE FAITH

"I have kept the faith." But he lost his head! They cut that off, but it didn't touch his faith. He rejoiced in three things—that great Apostle to the Gentiles; he had "fought a good fight," he had "finished his course," he had "kept the faith." Paul won the race; he gained the prize; and he has not only the admiration of earth today, but the admiration of heaven.

Why do we not act as if it paid to lose all to win Christ? Why are we not loyal to truth as He was? Ah, we haven't his arithmetic. He counted differently from us; we count the things gain that he counted loss. We must have his faith, and keep it if we would wear the same crown.—Unknown.

NO TEARS THERE

The New Jerusalem, which is to be the eternal abode of redeemed souls, is brought before us by every image that can enhance its beauty and glory. It is "prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." But this fact does not touch our hearts as much as the statement that when we reach that blessed place God Himself, with a hand of infinite gentleness, shall wipe all tears from our eyes. It is true, then, that many faithful ones will be in pain and sorrow to the very last of their earthly lives, and that, so to speak, they will die with tears still on their cheeks; but as soon as they come into God's presence all these tokens of grief shall instantly vanish away.—The Methodist.

NOTICE TO PASTORS

I find on checking up my supplies that I do not have enough Information Blanks or Conference Treasurer's Envelopes, and shall have to have some printed. This will delay sending out the blanks until some time next week. There is no great hurry, of course, and I shall have them in your hands in ample time.

In the meantime, send in the money due for Conference Journals. I still owe the Book Concern $388.20.

THE FULFILLMENT OF THE INDIVIDUAL

After having written what follows I read a new book by Prof. H. A. Overstreet, "We Move in New Directions." Already this volume has attracted unusual attention. And it will doubtless be of great service in furnishing a philosoph yof life, of industry, and of social relations that will help us to get safely through many adjustments that are ahead of us. In the course of his discussion Professor Overstreet uses the exact words of the title I had already chosen for this article, The Fulfillment of the Individual, claiming that they express what should be the most important aim of human society.

What is the purpose of life? What is the chief end of man? What is the desire of Jesus for His followers?

"The chief end of man is to glorify God, and to enjoy Him forever." I well remember the first time I ever heard that answer quoted from the catechism. I was twenty years old at the time. My religious education—some would say—had been seriously neglected, beceause the catechism had not been included. The answer impressed me as a dignified utterance, and I was interested. But it was not then, nor has it ever been, entirely satisfactory.

I have seen certain fathers, ministers, public officials, politicians and other self-important people, show intense desire to be glorified—but their ambition never seems commendable. It seems likely that God—in common with other intelligent beings—desires to be understood and appreciated. But that He would make His highest creature on earth for the primary purpose of being glorified by him does not seem reasonable.

Some of the other answers to the questions proposed have been: To be good; to do good in the world; to do God's will; to advance the Kingdom of God; to build a Christian society; to find salvation; to rescue a lost world; to save people from their sins.

All these answers are important, contain a measure of truth, and have interesting applications. They call attention, however, to partial truths rather than the central idea.

I like the statement of Jesus, "I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly." The desire of Jesus for us, the chief end of man, the purpose of each person concerning himself is, and should be, the fulfillment—the filling out of, the perfect development—of the individual. As a matter of course, accomplishing this will glorify God, will advance the Kingdom of God, and bring to pass many other desirable ends.

What is an individual? In an individual is included mind and body. He is a personal being, concerned with himself. He is also a social being—connected with a family, with a community, and with various other social, intellectual, religious, and poitical organizations. He has to do with industry and may be tied up with many industrial and financial institutions.

I know many babies, boys and girls, young men and women, and older men and women. Association with them in various ways affords great satisfaction. I like a baby as a baby, healthy, clean, and wholesome—a real baby. I like a boy, a girl—genuinely boyish or girlish. I enjoy young men and young women who are making a real start in life and are full of hope and promise. Men and women in the maturity of their powers, meeting life's responsibilities, doing life's tasks, and enjoying the rational use of their faculties, are good to know and are full of interest. But I don't like to see a ten-year-old boy endeavoring to act like a fifty-year-old man. I don't want to see a fifty-year-old woman frisking about all dolled-up like her fourteen-year-old daughter, and I don't like to see young people trying to live the lives of infants of a few years.

What we all like to see is: Each person at his own age and in his own sphere fulfilling his mission, acting out his own developing individuality, doing the things fitting for such a person to do, enjoying himself and his life, enjoying others—giving and receiving the blessings of a good society.

When there are a considerable number of individuals in the world the problem of their relations comes to the front. And the closer these individuals are thrown together the more insistent becomese ethe necessity for mutual undersanding and the adjustment of rights and duties. Two things—to be specific—must be considered and arranged; namely, freedom and restraint. These together have been, and are, the great problems of human relationships.

In the early days a railroad corporation wanted to cross the Mississippi river by building a bridge. A steamboat company objected because the bridge would interfere with navigation, and they sought a court order to prevent its being built. Abraham Lincoln as attorney for the railroad, contended that one person had as much right to cross a river as another had to go up or down the river. When there was a conflict, he maintained, the two rights, or freedoms, had to be adjusted by the use of restraints and accommodations. On that common sense contention Lincoln very justly won the case for his clients.

Just what freedoms are to be allowed, and just what restraints are to be imposed, become the every-day practical problems of life. How much freedom and how much restraint are to be granted to or imposed upon children by their parents? How liberal and how strict are school teachers and church officers to be? How much prohibition and how much license are to enter into the customs and policies of a community's social life?

I make four suggestions:

1. What may be profitable—or at least permissible—for mature folks may not always be allowed to young people. The kinds and quantities of food and drink to be served vary with one's age and bodily condition. The hours for retiring at night and rising in the morning are not the same for all members of the family. Permission to attend various sorts of parties is given or withheld for various reasons—age, place held, lateness of the hour, the sort of company one goes with or finds there, and the things done at the party. Whatever may be said concerning the tobacco habit as it applies to grown men and women—and there are plenty of things to say—the use of the weed seems entirely unwise and harmful in the case of boys and girls.

2. It is fine when, by means of conference together, parents and children consider and settle among themselves problems of freedom and restraint. It is exceedingly gratifying to boys and girls to be consulted, and to feel that they have a real part in determining family policies.

I remember with gratitude that, when I was eleven or twelve years old, my father and I came to a good understanding—to the advantage and credit, I think, of both of us. I had a look into his fatherly heart, and he perceived my ambition to be a really worth-while boy. I acknowledged his intelligence and authority, and he recognized my developing personality. He became my best friend and counselor—we became mutual friends—and there was never any more trouble between us.

This does not mean, of course, to do away with the right and responsibility of parents to act in the capacity of a court of last resort and to make decisions which must be accepted without the possibility of reversal—an exercise of authority which, however, wise parents will use only on rare occasions.

3. Churches and ministers — and many parents — are rather slow in making needed adjustments between freedom and restraint. Frequently the policy is: Hold on to the restrictions as long as possible—allow freedom only when you can no longer prevent it. The result is the development of an uncomfortable ragged edge. Unnecessary strains on conscience are felt, and there is consequent irritation. Church and family rules are broken and many young people relinquish—and some of them never regain—an interest in the church. A smaller number of rules and regulations might be better. Mistakes are often an important part of a child's education—and some of these mistakes would much more safely be made while the children are still under the care and within the reach of parents and minister than when they have gone out into the world on their own. A more friendly and vital relation between the church and pastor and the young people—after the style of parents and children in the best type of homes would greatly help. Freedom and restraint are matters in which young people are vitally interested. As a rule they are just as honest and desirous of doing right as are their elders. Moreover, it is their own lives and destinies that are at stake, and if they have been well brought up, they may be depended upon to use their heads on these problems as effectively, to say the least, as former generations have used theirs.

4. Religion is indispensable and inevitable. The individual, the family, and society at large—each and all—need its comfort, its inspiration, and its power.

I am not afraid of the intellectual attacks against religion. Their weakness and inconclusiveness, as a rule, can be matched only by the weakness and inconclusiveness of many of the apologies and defenses of religious people. Unworthy living, being content with the lower when the higher is within reach; these are the evil contagions against which we need to be on guard. Knowledge of the truth comes from doing, as well as by thinking.

One of the best aids toward the fulfillment of the individual is to give mind and heart to the understanding of God's present will, and to set all the energies and powers toward the doing of that will today.

Let us be grateful for every fine character developed in any place in the world. That is the work of God. Let us cultivate such a spirit of appreciation and co-operation as will draw us into fellowship with all good people everywhere. May we seek our profit and advancement—not in the things that injure and impoverish others, but in whatever ministers to the well-being, the fulfillment of all of us together.

Luther K. Long.

MERCY

The Standard Dictionary says that mercy is "the act of treating an offender with less severity than he deserves." Also, "forbearance to injure others when one has power to do so." It has other meanings, but this one seems to be in line with that statement of Jesus when He said, "Whatsoever ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

Possibly today there are more people that are unmerciful in their judgment of others than any other way. It is so easy to say unkind things about folks. Sometimes I wonder if we as ministers are as kind in our remarks about others as we should be. Do we set a good example in our criticism of a brother minister that will help us, or help the one to whom we make the remark? Do we realize that it may come back to us in the opinions they may form of us?

There are not many people but express their opinions of others, whether they are just or not.

I asked a man this qustion some time ago: "Why is it that a certain person is so severe in his criticism of others?" This person had become so critical that this writer found no pleaure in being in his company and was troubled at this attitude. This man replied: "I believe it has become a disease with that person."

Such a dread disease! Not of the body possibly, but of the mind and soul. Can it be that one can reach that habit of fault-finding till there is nothing good in any one? Are we not afraid when we are in the presence of one who is continually grinding on something about one, that when we are gone he will take up the cudgel of the tongue against us?

Of course all preachers know that when they go to a field, the ones who are the quickest to find fault with the former pastor are the very ones who will be on to our bones as soon as our backs are turned to another field.

I have actually known folks who were so diseased in mind with fault-finding that thy would dig up the dead to talk about somebody that had not pleased them, if indeed anyone can please them. When people reach that stage of fault-finding that they must dig up the dead to carry their point, it seems that there is only one cure.

The prayer treatment and fellowship with Jesus, it seems to me, is a sure cure. When you are tempted to say things about folks that would hurt their names or their feelings, stop and ask what would Jesus do in such a case?

"Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." This should be practiced in the absence of a person as well as to his face. Being just as kind in the absence of a person when some one would stab them. Sometimes a simple rebuke may be administered by simply turning away and not listening. Then there are so many things done by implication.

Saying a thing in such a way as to be able to deny it, if proof is demanded, yet leaving the impression that certain things are true. This is one of the meanest ways of damaging another. The persons who leave a thing so they may change it to suit themselves or make themselves safe from attack are the most hypocritical of all.

This article is written because this is the season when a great many people may be damaged, put to extra expense, inconvenienced, and leave somebody with a hurt that may have to be settled in eternity, at the Judgment. Therefore measure out the best, be merciful that you may obtain mercy.

ROSES AND ROMANCE

By James L. Elderdice

No other flower that grows has figured more prominently in the world's literature of romance and love, whether in poem or legend, than has the rose, the "Queen of Flowers." Homer, Sappho, and nearly all others of the classic writers of antiquity alluded to the rose quite frequently, as do modern poets and romancers.

The rose has ever been considered the emblem of love. Among the ancients it was sacred to Venus, the Goddess of Love. In Greek mythology it was consecrated by Cupid to Harpocratese, the God of Silence, for the purpose of bribing him to keep secret the loves of Venus. Hence the rose became the emblem of silence; and the expression "sub-rosa" (under the rose), was a mandate to secrecy. In the stories of Hindoo mythology it is related that one of the wives of the god Vishnu was discovered in the heart of a rose.

How natural it is when one wishes to refer to the object of his affection to remark that she is "as sweet as a rose"! And how often the awakening of love is associated with the rose. More than one lover recalls the fact that

"She wore a wreath of roses,
The night that first we met."

Tennyson, in "Maud," sings:

"But the rose was awake all night for your sake, Knowing your promise to me."

According to Persian lore, the Rose and the Nightingale are lovers. So tradition tells us that the bird will utter a plaintive cry whenever the flower is gathered, and that it will hover around the plant until it is overcome by its sweetness, when it will fall senseless to the ground. It is said that the Rose will burst forth from its bud at the opening song of its lover, the Nightingale. The Persian poets say that one may place a handful of fragrant herbs before the Nightingale, yet it is not satisfied, but wishes nothing more than the sweet breath of its beloved Rose.

"Though rich the spot
With every flower this earth has got,
What is it to the nightingale
If there his darling rose is not?"

There are a number of traditions to account for the red rose, among which is the following by Thomas Moore in his Irish Melodies:

"They tell us that Love in his fairy bower
Had two roses of birth divine;
He sprinkled one with a rainbow's shower,
But bathed the other with mantling wine.
Soon did the buds
That drank of the floods
Distilled by the rainbow decline and fade;
While those which the tide
Of ruby had dyed
All blushed into beauty, like thee, sweet maid."

"In the language of flowers the Rose is the emblem of Love. Many a young lady, who has been unable to wait until Leap Year, has been able to inform the objject of her affection that he has won her heart by sending or presenting him a rosebud. The Rose from its grace and gradually maturing beauty has been made the emblem of youthful charm. The White Rosebud is emblematic of those who have not yet experienced the thrill of love, because until Love came to animate the world all roses were white, and every heart was insensible to what we call love.

"There are many kinds of Roses, and each variety has its own message to convey. If the Monthly Rose is used to express affection, the Yellow Rose shows jealousy or a decrease of love. The Rose is also a symbol of beauty. Berkeley in his 'Utopia' describes lovers as declaring their passion by presenting the fair beloved a rosebud just beginning to open; if the lady accepted, and wore the bud, it was a signification that she favored his love. As time increased the lover's affection, he followed the first present by that of a half-blown rose, which was again succeeded by one full blown, and if the lady accepted this last one, she was considered as engaged for life."

UNITY OF OUR FAITH

Unity is the immediate result of a central attraction. The earth on which we ride remains intact because of a force that is directed toward the center. Without this attraction toward the center of things our day would be over. I was in a blacksmith shop the other day watching the owner of the shop repair a wagon wheel. The smith casually remarked that the wheel was hardly worth repairing because the hub was in such a bad condition. The hub was the secret of the solidarity of the wheel. Every unity must have a hub to which its several parts adhere.

The fundamental basis of unity is conservatism. It is never safe to be liberal unless one have a deep-seated conservatism. Jesus said, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, then you can (be liberal) ask what you will." The hub is conservative, otherwise there could be no such a thing as a wheel that would stand up under a load. And what do we want with a wheel that will not stand the strain and stress? In fact, the test of any organization is whether or not it will stand a load. For the same reason it follows that we are commanded to have no other gods before us.

Faith in one God is conservative, yet we heard nothing about the brotherhood of man until the people of the world began to accept the Fatherhood of one God.

The secret of unity is hidden. The great pivot around which all truth revolves is hidden, and is only approached by the most zealous adherents. I cannot see the axle around which the wheel of my car revolves, but I certainly want to know that it is there before I turn on the gas and become liberal with it. Dr. Elderdice used to exhort us in the Seminary to keep up our devotional life, and I suspect if more of us had heeded this exhortation we would be greater preachers today. Times like these through which we pass will reveal who among us have been able to keep the home fires burning. The outward semblance of prosperity cannot last unless it adheres to the principles of truth and justice.

Jesus is the end as well as the beginning of our faith. In fact it is just as tragic not to be liberal as it is not to be conservative as far as the human soul is concerned. Christ, says E. Staley Jones, is the ultimate of our faith. And being the ultimate he becomes the universality of our faith. Two and two make four is universal in mathematics. Jones says that anything other than this goes to pieces on the mathematical universe. Jesus is the end of our faith and he that follows not Him walks in darkness and is headed for eternal destruction. No systems without an undying faith in Jesus and His principles of life can stand.

THE USE OF LEISURE

What to do with leisure? Have a hobby. Nature study, walking, gardening, music, golfing, carpentry, stamp collecting, sketching, voice culture, foreign language, chess, books, photography, social service, public speaking, travel, authorship. A delightful hobby is to keep a personal "word book," in which to jot down felicitous and striking phrases culled from one's daily reading. Another interesting hobby is to write poetry, for the sheer joy of weaving words into fascinating form.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes once said that anybody could write poetry. He referred aspiring poets to the dictionary where they could draw out words like fish from a pool—and added:

"Just so with your verse—
'Tis as easy as sketching—
You can reel off a song
Without knitting your brow.
As lightly as Rembrandt
A drawing or etching.
It is nothing at all,
If you only know how."

Learn to loaf. This applies particularly to the brainworker and the sedentary. Live in a day-tight compartment. Cultivate the art of complete relaxation and receive everything phlegmatically. Imitate the jellyfish. Learn to float aimlessly on the sea of life.

FATHERLY DISCIPLINE

Some months ago an item was circulating in the newspapers concerning a father in Girard, Kansas, who was arrested for punishing his five-year-old son. The father was accused of holding the little fellow against a hot stove. Neighbors claimed they had found the suffering child in the yard at his home, burned severely from his chest to his knees.

Many years ago I attended a celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of an important church in Michigan. As a special treat, a leading minister from Boston was secured to deliver the anniversary sermon. He spoke, quite naturally, of the many changes in theological thinking during the half-century of the life of the church. The doctrine of the incarnation, thoughts concerning the various theories of the trinity, the shifting of the emphasis in the feelings of Chirstians as to the atonement, changing views concerning the historical character and authority of various books of the Bible, the problem of the punishment of the impenitent—these were some of the topics discussed by the preacher.

Speaking of divine punishment, he told of a father who was dealing with a disobedient small son. To punish him, the father grasped the child's wrist and held the hand over the fire until it was badly burned. Both speaker and audience were duly shocked at such unreasonable and unfatherly action.

"But," said the preacher, "was not the father within his rights? Was he not responsible for the discipline of his disobedient child? And was he not free to choose his own method?"

As our Christian and humane feelings revolt against such exercise of paternal authority—this was substantially the speaker's thought—so the deveoped Christian consciousness of our day has come to reject the old notion of God as a God of vengeance who unfeelingly torments throughout eternity those of His children who, because of one thing or another, fail to conform themselves to His divine will. "God is love." And love and justice do not quarrel. "Mercy and truth are met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other."

The problem of family discipline is not an easy one. Nor are God's ways with His children always plainly evident. Study and prayer and practice are necessary if we would become good and wise fathers and mothers. And the same thing is true if we would become worthy children of the Heavenly Father.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

October, Pay-up month

Second Sunday in October, Rally Day, Promotion in Sunday school, etc.

November 15, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

Churches on A. C. B. Honor Roll

These have paid A. C. B. in full:

Burke's Chapel, Connelly Springs Ct., Rev. L. S. Helms, pastor.

Haw River Church, Glen Raven Ct., Rev. J. P. Pegg, pastor.

Bethel Church, Randolph Ct., Rev. Edward Suits, pastor.

Cedar Cliff Church, Mt. Hermon Ct., Rev. L. E. Mabry, pastor.

Piney Grove Church, Siler City Ct., Rev. H. L. Isley, pastor.

Lawndale Church, Cleveland Ct., Rev. C. E. Ridge, pastor.

Worthville church, Randleman Circuit, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, pastor.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge, Rev. P. T. Bingham, pastor.

"It is just as reasonable to attempt to run a farm without horses, mules or plows as it would be to try to carry on the work of the conference without the support of the individual church."—From report of the Committee on Financing the Church.

Kernersville Charge, Rev. C. L. Grant, Pastor

I visited Kernersville, Ai and Sandy Ridge churches on this charge, and held the fourth quarterly conference. The conference was poorly attended. The church attendances were good—i. e., about as many people as usually attend. I saw but little difference in the number present from what I saw there twelve or more years ago.

But this is one charge that does not seem to want to do much. One or two churches appear to want to carry on, but the others appear indifferent to the program of the denomination. Attitudes of churches are the composite attitude of the membership. I have found a few churches suffering with this complex this year. Like the patient who has lost his desire for food, it is hard to tempt the appetite with a spiritual bill of fare that would make them rise up and eat.

Brother Grant has faithfully discharged his duties as pastor on this work, I believe, and there are some loyal people there; so we are not despairing of the group, but we are not describing what we want them to be—just what they appeared to us upon a brief visit to their work.

North Davidson Circuit, Rev. O. C. Loy, Pastor

I held the fourth quarterly conference of this charge at Canaan church . Preached in the morning to an attentive congregation. The business of the conference was despatched with the usual harmony. The people want their pastor to return. Finances were somewhat behind, but Canaan church was out on A. C. B. and pastor's salary. One is impressed by a visit to this church with the appropriateness of this name—the people who worship in Canaan church so act that one feels like he would like to go to Canaan. The salary was fixed as the same as this year. The group is not so strong since Bethesda was removed and they want an additional church on their group.

State Street Charge, Rev. H. W. Maier, Pastor

The fourth quarterly conference was held at Bethesda church Tuesday night. It was preceded by an ample supper. There was an unusually large attendance. The usual business was transacted, salary fixed at same as present year, the conference instructed for the return of the present pastor.

Randleman Charge, Rev. Joel B. Trogdon, Pastor

The fourth quarterly conference was held in Mt. Lebanon church, Saturday afternoon. All the churches were represented; pastor's salary for next year fixed at same as promised for the present year. Finances much behind, due to the fact that Randleman Mills had not run since last fall. The people want their pastor to return. There was evident a good spirit in the body and those present expressed an earnest desire to support the work of the conference to the limit of their ability.

Forsyth Charge, Rev. R. A. Hunter, Pastor

I visited Mt. Carmel, Union Ridge, and Maple Springs churches. The visits were in the order named. All three congregations have good church buildings and made one feel that affairs were moving with quite a degree of unanimity. They gave attention to my messages and have a way of making one feel that he is glad to visit them.

We presented the interests of the denomination and a most substantial amount of the A. C. Budgets was pledged at the churches. Union Ridge guaranteed theirs, having come within about one-fourth of it at the afternoon service. Forsyth charge is one of our best rural works. There are here some of our finest people and new life is evident in the churches visited to cause one to believe in an enlarging future.

First Church, Winston, Home-Coming

We dropped into this service in the afternoon after the Union Ridge service. We found Pastors Millaway and Surratt there; Pastor Hunter being an ex-pastor also had a part in the program. What I heard of the service indicated they had been enjoying a most excellent program for the day. We congratulate the pastor, Dr. Pritchard, upon the success of the day and wish for the congregation many happy returns of the occasion.

Pastoral Support

We want to emphasize two elements in this. The support that every pastor has a right to expect from his official members, and so long as he is their pastor, from the majority of the entire membership. It does not speak well for a person's high sense of honor to refuse to give his pastor his personal support in every worth-while project he tries to put on. So long as he is YOUR pastor YOU owe it to him to stand by him; to pray for him, to endeavor to help him in his work and to defend him from the attacks of his enemies. When he leaves and another pastor comes, you owe it to the new pastor that he shall receive your loyal support. You ought not to forget your former pastors as your friends, but they should not come between you and your present pastor. And no former pastor should spend much of his time in the homes of his former parishioners. It is never wise and is often harmful. Then, too, your pastor should receive your financial support. If our pastors are to give their entire time to the work of the church they certainly ought to be supported by those whom they serve. This support ought to be freely given and distributed through the weeks so that they would not be embarrassed by the lack of the necessities of life. We know some pastors this year who have really been in needy circumstances. This ought never to happen in this good state of ours. While there may be times when the majority of his members may not have much money to give, there surely are no times when some of the members could not supply the temporal needs of the pastor's family. If the church is to remain with us, then the pastor will most likely be needed. We are exceedingly concerned about the material support of our pastors. We think it should be freely given and be ample for the support of the pastor and his family.

HOW MUCH?

"You'll work yourself out of a job," smiled George, when he saw how rapidly Harry worked. "Don't work too hard your first day or you'll be expected to keep it up all the time."

"No danger but I can," laughed Harry in reply. "I like to work."

The days passed into a week and then another week. Still Harry kept busy all the time at his new job.

"Harry, you work as though you're the manager of the place," spoke up George several weeks later. "How much are they paying you?"

"Oh, enough for a beginner," was the reply, as he continued his work. "Why?"

"If you're not careful, you'll be doing twice the amount of work you're paid for," warned George.

"I am not worrying about how much I am paid," explained Harry. "That's for the company to take care of. My business is to do my best during the time I am working for them."

Success depends upon where we place the emphasis of "how much." It is a mistake to try to see how much we can receive for the least amount of work. The boys who are sought for the better jobs are the ones who see how much they can do during the time they are at work. Real worth in any boy will soon be discovered and then the pay part will take care of itself. Our part is "how much work."—Publisher Unknown.

GOD BLESS OUR OLD DAD

We happened into a home the other night and over the parlor door saw the legend worked in letters of red, "What Is Home Without a Mother?" Across the room was another brief, "God Bless Our Home."

Now what's the matter with "God Bless Our Dad!" He gets up early, lights the fire, boils an egg, and wipes the dew off the lawn with his boots while many a mother is sleeping. He makes the weekly handout to the butcher, the milkman and the banker, and his little pile is badly demolished before he has been home an hour.

If there is a noise in the night, Dad is awakened and has to go downstairs and find the burglar. Mother darns the socks, but Dad bought the socks in the first place, and the needles and the yarn afterwards. Mother does up the fruit; Dad bought it all, and jars and sugar cost lots too.

Dad buys the chickens for Sunday dinners, serves them himself, and draws the neck from the ruins after everybody else is served. "What Is Home Without a Mother?" Yes, that is all right, but, "What Is Home Without a Father?" Ten chances to one it is a slab, and the landlady is the widow. Dad, here's to you! You've got your faults, you may have lots of them, but you are all right and we will miss you when you are gone.—Publisher Unknown.

THE MAGIC OF A SMILE

Freda worked in a small baker's shop, where besides helping with the baking, she waited on the customers. One day she felt tired and very depressed. Everything had seemed to go wrong. She had a bad cold, the last batch of rolls had got burnt, and she had cut her thumb.

"Nothing goes right," she thought, brushing away a tear, and wishing she could go home and lay her aching head on the pillow. Waiting on customers, who cared nothing for her, was hard work.

The door opened suddenly, and a slender little lady came in.

"Good afternoon!" she said, smiling at Freda in the most friendly way. "I've brought a little present for you. A friend of mine sent me a box of handkerchiefs, and I chose the prettiest for you."

Freda forgot her aching head and her sore thumb.

"For me?" she cried.

The little lady nodded.

"Yes, for you. You give such willing service, it is always a pleasure to come into this little shop. Many a time I have gone away from here cheered because of your smile. The gift isn't much; it is just a little something to show you my appreciation."

"Thank you! Thank you!" Freda cried. "I shall keep it always, and when things go wrong I shall look at it and remember that you said I had helped you."

Such help as we can give each other in this world is a debt we owe to each other. Don't be content with thinking good of people. Tell them what you think. A little appreciation is often just the encouragement your friend may need.—Selected.

THE NEW BOY'S MOTTO

After Halstead Murray and Roger Barnes left school they each applied for a place in the First National Bank in Hughestown, the small city where they lived. Roger got the place and came around to tell Halstead about it. "Sorry for you, old fellow," he said cheerfully; "but there was only one place. Stevens is one of the directors, and my uncle worked for him for years. Uncle Sam said a good word for me, and there I am."

Mr. Murray was blacking his shoes when Halstead told him about Roger's visit. He finished the side of the shoe he was rubbing, and then, as he dipped his brush in the blacking box again, he asked with a quizzical smile, "What did you say to that?"

"Why," Hal laughed a little, "I said I was glad for him. That was all."

"That's right," said the father as he fell to rubbing the second shoe. "We'll have to try to catch hold of some other rope, boy."

But no other opening appeared, and Halstead was feeling rather blue, when he received a card asking him to call at the bank one day. He went promptly and came back with the great news that Roger had left and he was engaged in Roger's place.

A week afterward he found his Cousin Clara at the table when he came home, a little late, to dinner. "How's banking?"' she began.

"I can only tell you about ice banks," returned Hal, cutting his beef soberly. "I'm an ice chopper, ma'am. Been at it all morning."

Clara looked puzzled. "Why, your mother said you'd gone into the First National. What do you mean?"

"I'm hardly in," he said. "I'm rather an outside clearing house. It stormed nearly all the time for a week, you know, and my part of the banking business is to keep the bank steps and sidewalks cleared."

Clara smiled. "I see," she said, "beginning at the lowest round, and all that sort of thing. Too slow for Roger, wasn't it?"

"Roger says," replied Hal, "that he told Mr. Peters that he could shovel snow anywhere. He came there to learn banking."

"How about you?" Clara persisted.

Halstead hesitated. Then he opened his watch at the back and passed it across the table. Engraved on the inner cover were the words, "Obey Orders." "Father and mother had that put on when they gave me the watch two years ago," he said.—Unknown.

A CHILD'S FAITH

As I was seated in a railroad train not long ago, two gentlemen, who occupied the seat just behind me, were discussing the different ways that persons claim to have been converted.

"I, sir," said one of them, "was converted by a little child's prayer and questions. It was my grandson, who astonished me one morning by coming into my bedchamber before I had risen, and, supposing I was asleep, the little fellow stood looking at me for some time, as if in deep meditation. Then he knelt down and addressed the great Father of us all, and said:

" 'God, won't You let grandpa be a Christian, same as me and mamma is? Grandpa don't swear nor drink whiskey like papa does, and mamma prays and prays and prays for papa, and maybe God don't like papa 'cause he drinks whiskey. Now, God, I want to know if You will let grandpa, who don't drink whiskey or swear, be a Christian like me and mamma. Now, God, I'll wait and see if mamma knows, for she says You always do what You say You'll do; and if grandpa may be a Christian, I'll just wait till he wakes and see if mamma is right, 'cause she thinks You can hear everything, and I want to know for sure. She says that You are always in the room and everywhere. Now, make grandpa a Christian, so that I may know it is true, and so that grandpa will let me know as soon as possible, and I'll thank You very much. Grandpa wears glasses and maybe he can see You, 'cause mamma say we see by faith, and maybe it's glasses.'

"Then the little fellow came and whipered in my ear, 'Grandpa!'

"'What is it, Willie?' I answered, unconcernedly, although I was deeply moved.

"'Wait,' said he, 'till I bring your glasses.

"'Now,' said he, 'do you see anybody in this room 'cept me? Cause there is.'

"'Why, yes, Willie; I see myself. Of course there is someone besides you.'

"'But, Grandpa, do you see God? Look good now, 'cause I made a bargain with Him to make you a Christian like me.'

"'Run downstairs now, Willie,' I said.

"'I can't, Grandpa, 'cause I told God I'd wait and see if He'd have you.'

"What could I do but promise that child that I would try to see God? And morning, noon and evening I was met with the question, 'Did you, Grandpa?'

"'Father, what does Willie mean?' asked my daughter after she had heard him repeat the same question several times, as if he and I were in secret league with each other about something I was about to do.

"'Don't tell, Grandpa, 'til we see,' Willie entreated.

"I couldn't let that child's simple faith in God be shaken. I am now a minister of the Gospel, and Willie's father was saved from a drunkard's grave by the power of the Holy Spirit through the medium of my preaching."

Willie is preparing for the ministry.—Christian Standard.

JESUS IS PRECIOUS

A Christian, staying at the home of a friend, asked a little boy what the morning lesson in the Scriptures had been. He replied,

"Jesus is precious."

"And what do you mean by precious?"

The child was silent for a few moments, and then replied,

"Mother is precious, we could not do without her."

"Well answered, my boy; never forget these words, 'Jesus is precious,' we could not do without Him."

"Unto you therefore which believe He is precious." (I Peter 2:7).—The Life Line.

GO THOU AND DO LIKEWISE

Rev. C. W. Bates,
Greensboro, N. C.
Dear Mr. Bates:

I am instructed by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Asheboro M. P. Church to send you the enclosed check, which is a gift from the Auxiliary for the Methodist Protestant Herald. The ladies expressed their appreciation for the good work of the paper, and said they wanted to have a part in relieving the present strain.

With best wishes for you and yours,

Sincerely,
Esther Ross.

Now ain't that fine! The check has been endorsed and turned over to Dr. McCulloch, who will express his thanks. I know there are calls from all directions, until we get a bit bewildered as to where to put our money, and usually end up by putting it back in our own pockets. But here is an opportunity to help about which there can be no question. More subscriptions, 3,000 of them, will put the paper out of danger. Until then, the subsidy or some other means of relieving the financial stress is imperative. Will you do your part, little or much as you can, to help?

C. W. Bates, For the Committee.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

NOTICE OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING

The Executive Committee of the N. C. Branch of Woman's Work will meet at 10 a. m., Friday, October 27, at the home of Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, High Point, N. C.

Report blanks have been sent to each Auxiliary on my list, and I am hoping to have them filled out and returned 100 per cent. This is the first time in six months I have asked for reports, and I especially need them so as to have a good Branch report for the Annual Conference.

The cooler weather should have put new "pep" and hopefulness into each of us. The need for greater activity and prayerfulness for the Kingdom of God was never greater. Our denomination is responsible for this work in certain areas of the world. Touching appeals from all these areas are coming to us, pleading with us to meet the obligations we have assumed. If each of us will do her part, we shall not have to close our mission fields or bring our missionaries home, and have the death of starving children laid at our doors, to say nothing of the souls depending on us for spiritual life.

Please send me the best report in the history of your organization.

If you have not received your Year Book of programs, send five cents to Mrs. D. S. Coltrane, 902 West Market Street, Greensboro, and she will mail you one. They are not sent free any more.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN, Cor. Sec'y.

WE ARE FAR SHORT OF OUR $1,000

The following amounts have been received on Minnis' salary:

Mr. E. C. Kittrell	$100.00
Mr. and Mrs. Lon McPherson	50.00
Misses McCulloch	30.00
Fountain Place Sunday school	20.00
Rehoboth, Granville	10.00
Burlington, First	7.00
Rev. Homer Casto	5.00
Union Grove, Orange	3.00
Mrs. C. W. Bates	2.00
Calvary DVBS	1.25
Mrs. S. P. Montgomery	1.00

This makes a total of $209.25, and leaves $790.75 to be raised if we reach our goal by the meeting of the Annual Conference. Remember, that all the money you raise on Mr. Minnis' salary will count on the "World Service Budget" of your local church whether it comes from individuals in your church or from organizations.

Send in your large amounts, from a dollar up, to Mrs. S. W. Taylor as soon as possible. I am offering the following suggestion to help you enlist every member in your church: Make up calendars, 50 cents for the month, 25 cents for a Sunday, 10 cents for each week day. Send me the names and money just as rapidly as possible, telling me from what church it comes and I will assemble the calendars, posting them at Conference. The money I will turn over to Mrs. Taylor, who will send you a receipt for your "World Service" Budget. Each 12 months thus made up will bring in a little more than $50.00. Help me make up as many years as possible by Conference. Write me for any additional information you want.

MRS. C. W. BATES,
Chairman of the Minnis' Salary Fund.

CORRECTING THE CHURCH REGISTER

I am as much in sympathy with that register as anyone, I suppose. Therefore, I am asking, What is a correct register? There are certain rules by which our public schools furnish a correct register, but I find that rule will not apply to my church. There are certain rules in our various orders to which I belong, but I find they will not work in my church. There are also certain rules used in the Vital Statistics Bureau to keep the national register correct, but they are impractical in my church. So what is a correct register in my church and how shall I proceed to secure it?

I suppose all will say, Follow the rules in our Discipline. That is exactly what I have done and am doing again. But it does not get the result that many want and expect. They say I am carrying excess baggage, or rather the church is. I want to say here, my churches will continue to carry this "excess" unless the "excess" goes out according to the rules of our church as found in the discipline. Now, brethren, I say you have a correct register when you have followed the Discipline, and there is no such thing as excess. If this, some call excess, is not fit, don't receive them in, and after they are in, if they become unfit, turn them out as per Discipline, and your register is correct. Our Discipline is very plain and simple in this procedure, and should there be a preacher or minister unable to interpret or understand this procedure, he is officially unfit for a commission and should be left without an appointment for his own good, and the good of the denomination. However, I believe our ministers are just as competent to furnish a correct numerical list as those of other denominations, and I also believe our list as furnished by the pastors, and published in the minutes, is as correct as any denomination.

And now we pray that God will keep those whom He has committed to our care, and, brethren, let's be diligent in caring for the flock of God.

J. D. MORRIS.

HINDRANCES TO WORSHIP

Last week's Herald gave such a splendid article on the above subject. It was indeed timely. The Young People's Leadership Training School stresses hindrances to worship. So get the Herald of last week and read and profit, too, by this article.

Dr. Lindley's book, "Human Nature and the Church," would be helpful along this line, and many others. He suggests a setting for a church auditorium. Centre a cross or some such emblem, and on either side of center, minister and choir. If the pastors would read this article two or three tiues a year to their congregations, it would mean much, and we could get more from the service.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Rev. F. E. Smith, for ladies of Weston, W. Va., 12 dresses, 3 pins, 1 pocket book, 3 pair stockings, 5 summer suits for little boys, 1 cap, 2 waists, 2 aprons, 3 coats and 3 pieces of underwear.

Woman's Auxiliary, Siler City, 12 dresses, 15 slips, 6 pencils, 1 spool of thread, and 1 piece of print material.

Fire Comany No. 1, High Point, some gymnasium equipment.

Orange Circuit, Harvest-Home donation, 129 half gallon and 17 quart cans of fruits and vegetables, 1½ bu. of pears, ½ bu. irish potatoes, 8 bu. sweet potatoes, 1 package red peppers, 1 package dried fruit, 2 sacks corn meal, 1 package seed peas, 2 cakes soap, 3 shirts, 1 coat suit, 1 waist, 3 coats, 1 dress, 1 pair shoes and 1 fine shoat. A very fine donation. We would be glad to report it by churches but cannot.

Mr. J. F. Cox, Lexington, 10 bags of kindling for cook stoves. Waste material from old rubber casings, kindling equal to the old time "lightwood."

Miss Mary Ward Johnson, High Point College, 2 coats.

Mrs. P. S. Kennett, High Point, 2 coats and 1 dress.

We greatly appreciate all these gifts and pray God's richest blessings upon all the givers. With the Orange Circuit donations many names were given. We would like to publish them all, but space forbids. God knows and will bless each one.

The kindling is a new and rare gift. It will prove a blessing to those who must kindle fires in our cook stoves about 5:30 each morning this winter.

Every gift sent here helps, and, best of all, in your gift we have you, and it is YOU we need.

Special for Boys' Clothing

We have 50 boys to clothe for cold weather. Overalls, shoes, stockings, shirts, and a suit of clothes. At the lowest possible estimate it will take an average of $7.50 per boy. We are asking men, young men, and men's classes to send us money for these clothes speedily. Thanks to the Woman's Auxiliaries and indi-

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, filled his appointment last Sunday, bringing an uplifting message, using as his text Romans 12:1-2. He has only one more appointment at this place before Conference, which will be the fourth Sunday. At this time the installation of officers will be held. We feel that we have had another successful year's work with Bro. Trollinger as our leader, and we hope if it is the Lord's will, that he will come back for another year.

Some time ago Mrs. Sallie Kernodle presented us with a nice supply of good books, which were very much appreciated, and they are being read and enjoyed by a number of our people.

Annie May Pearson, Pattie Bartee, G. W. Apple, and Howard Apple are away in college and are missed very much, especially in the young people's work.

The interest in Sunday school seems to continue. Next Sunday will be Promotion Day, and our Sunday school will be reorganized.

On last Sunday evening the Christian Endeavor was conducted by Durward Apple. The fourth quarterly conference will be held at this place on Wednesday, November 1st, at 2:30 o'clock.

Death has visited our church and taken from our midst one of our oldest members, Bro. G. R. Wright. Funeral services were conducted October 3 by the pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, assisted by Dr. A. G. Dixon and Rev. W. F. Ashburn. Our sympathy goes out to the heart-broken family. May the God of grace comfort them in their hour of trouble.

Cleveland Circuit.—Since there has been no report from this charge for some time, I will mention just a few things that might be of interest to the readers of the Herald.

The special meetings have all been held, and as a result of these meetings there were 65 conversions and reclamations, and 21 additions to the church.

We had as pulpit help for Pleasant Hill Rev. C. G. Isley, of Lexington. For Kistlers, Rev. A. D. Shelton, of Fallston; for Mt. Pleasant, Rev. C. H. Hill, of High Point. Lawndale, being a union church, we held a joint meeting with Rev. W. L. Scott of the Belwood Circuit, M. E. Church, South, as pulpit help. All these brethren did splendid work that was entirely satisfactory to pastor and people. It was a pleasure to labor with them and to have them in our home.

During the canning season the good people here have remembered us with many useful articles, such as fruits, vegetables, etc., all of which has been greatly appreciated by the pastor and family. Since our last report the parsonage has been given two coats of paint on the outside, which serves to protect the building and make it a thing of beauty.

We are now looking forward to our Circuit Rally to be held at Oak Grove church the fifth Sunday in October. Dr. R. M. Andrews will preach at 11 o'clock and hold our fourth quarterly conference in the afternoon. We are expecting a goodly number from the other churches to be there with well-filled baskets.

We are badly behind, with our finances, but we are all set now to this task and I am confident we will raise more money and come to the Annual Conference with a better report than last year. Already we have sent in about 50 per cent of our A. C. B. and we are also doing something for the other Budgets. Brethren, of the laity, come on and stay up our hands and send us to Conference with a report that will reflect credit upon the charge and the pastor, and make all our hearts glad.

Mebane.—Our pastor brought to us two splendid sermons yesterday. Our attendance seemed to be a little better. The Sunday school is going as usual. Special music was given at the Sunday school devotional which was enjoyed by all.

The Circles of the Woman's Auxiliary held their monthly meetings, as follows: Circle No. 1 with Mrs. Lee; No. 2 with Mrs. A. H. Jobe, No. 3 with Mrs. Albert Sykes, No. 4 with Mrs. Frank Jobe, No. 5 with Mrs. Violet Smith. The Ever-Ready Circle will meet Tuesday of this week. Next Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour we will have our Rally Day program. At the evening hour we are planning to have a pageant; everyone is invited to attend these services. We are very glad to have Mr. C. C. Smith back with us again, as he has been on the sick list for some time. Mr. Mauldin is still sick. We hope he will soon be back with us.

Mrs. Streetland spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. I. Smith.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Since our last report, church, Sunday school, and societies have been reorganized. The old board of church officers was re-elected. The Sunday school officers are as follows: Superintendent, Mr. N. G. McClimon; assistant superintendent, Mr. W. M. Compton; secretary, Marchant Davis; assistant secretary, Lottie Harrison; pianist, Lucille Davis; assistant pianist, Mrs. A. A. Foster; choir leader, Mr. N. N. Smith; assistant choir leader, Mrs. A. A. Foster. The officers will be installed the fifth Sunday by our pastor.

The Ladies' Aid met Sunday and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. R. T. Bennette; vice-president, Mrs. A. A. Foster; recording secretary, Mrs. W. R. Harrison; assistant, Mrs. N. G. McClimon; corresponding secretary, Mrs. N. G. McClimon.

Our Christian Endeavor is moving forward and having some interesting programs. We held our second meeting on Temperance last first Sunday night. These programs have been splendid programs! We feel it the duty of every church and society to have more such meetings. The C. E. met last Sunday night for the purpose of electing the officers for the incoming year. The meeting was opened by song, scripture, and prayer. Miss Lucille Davis was appointed chairman and the following officers were elected: President, Lottie Harrison; vice-president, Lula Pearson; secretary, Eddie Waddell; assistant secretary, Arbutus Jones; treasurer, Marchant Davis; pianist, Lucille Davis; assistant pianist, Kate Poole; choir leader, Kate Poole; assistant choir leader, Mark Compton; Junior superintendent, Miss Romaine Poole; assistant Junior superintendent, Miss Kate Poole; Junior secretary, Elaine Foster; assistant, Lillian Compton.

The president appointed the committees and we hope to begin to work, and work as we never worked before. Our topic for next Sunday night is, "How May Our Meetings Be Made More Helpful to Us?" We hope to profit by it.

The vacant corner in the church is noticed very much lately, and we regret to say it is caused by the absence of Mr. Joe Poole, one of our oldest and most faithful members. We hope he'll soon be back in our services, as it is seldom he isn't present. Little Benjamin McClimon and Mrs. E. L. Davis are also on the sick list at present. We wish for each a speedy recovery, and remember them in our prayers.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Gaston will leave October 23 for Tuck Cedar, N. C., where they will make their home. We surely will miss them, but hope they'll come back to visit us every time possible.

Miss Lucille Freeman, from Fairview church, was the week-end guest of Miss Lottie Harrison last week-end.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held here Saturday, October 21, at 2:30 p. m. After the conference the Fairview and Liberty Hill Sunday schools will meet at the church spring for a picnic supper. This has been held for the past two years and we look forward to it—for it is not often we get to be with each other.

Best wishes to all Herald readers.

Concord, Saxapahaw Charge.—We were delighted to have a large congregation for the service Sunday afternoon. There are still others in our community that should attend church. We might have a large attendance every Sunday, for we need them and they need the Sunday school and the help of the church. We give to the visitors a hearty welcome. Everyone enjoyed the fine sermon our pastor preached; he used as his text Hebrews 12:1-2. He gave us the truth in the matter concerning the running of the Christian race. We know that we have to run the race, and people, why not run this race with the best of our ability, for if we do we will receive a reward that will not fade, as the earthly rewards do.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held at this place Saturday afternoon.

The community singing will be held at Eli Whitney high school auditorium the fifth Sunday afternoon. Our choir is practicing each Wednesday evening.

We are glad to see Mrs. A. N. Roberson, one of our good members who has been sick, back in her place Sunday. We missed Brother T. H. Moore, who is sick; hope he will soon be able to be back with us.

The first Sunday morning in November will be our last appointment for this year before Conference. At this time the following officers will be installed: Board of stewards, R. S. Woody, L. E. Moore, G. R. Zachary, Neil Hargrove and J. C. Guthrie; treasurer, Roy Roberson; board of trustees, M. T. Hargrove, L. E. Guthrie, J. F. Woody, and H. G. Hargrove; class leaders, Mrs. J. C. Guthrie, R. T. Woody and Raymond Davis; ushers, C. O. Ferguson, chairman, Colon Guthrie, Clifton Zachary and Carey Woody; reporter, Bessie Coble; Board of Christian Education, R. S. Woody, chairman; L. E. Guthrie, Mrs. R. S. Woody, Mrs. H. G. Hargrove and Bessie Coble; Sunday school superintendent, R. S. Woody; pianist, Margaret Guthrie; assistant, Mrs. Loy Roberson; choir leader, Parker Lewis; janitor, J. L. Davis.

We have had a joyful year with Brother Loy and family; hope they will be with us next year.

Best wishes to the Herald.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, preached a real soul-stirring sermon the second Sunday morning. We always enjoy the wonderful messages that he brings us. We hope and pray that Bro. Henderson and family will be sent back to us another year.

Our Sunday school was re-organized at this service. The church officials were also elected at this time. I feel that we have a real good Sunday School and we are hoping it will grow in interest and attendance.

Our Christian Endeavor meets each Sunday night. This is a great work, and we feel proud of our young people, as they are taking so much interest in the programs.

The Ladies' Aid Society met with Mrs. M. L. Stallings this month. We had real good attendance. Mrs. Stallings had charge of the devotionals. Several others took part on the program, which was very interesting. The secretary called the roll and read the minutes of the past meeting. After the usual business was attended to Mrs. Stallings served delicious refreshments.

The fourth quarterly ronference will be at Antioch church October 21. Our president, Bro. R. M. Andrews, will be with us at this time and preach.

We ask for the prayers of the Christian readers. MRS. M. L. STALLINGS.

C. E. Society, Siler City.—Sunday night, the 8th, the C. E.'s and visitors enjoyed a good program conducted by Hubert Stone. He had asked a number to write themes on the subject, "What the Present-Day Church Should Be Doing." These themes showed that much time and thought had been put into them, and they were very helpful, as they gave many interesting points about what the present-day church should be doing.

Tuesday morning, the 10th, at 6:30, a campfire breakfast was thoroughly enjoyed in the grove at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Fox. Bacon, eggs, fried apples, toast and coffee were served.

As has already been told in the church report, the C. E.'s helped put over the program for Rally Day with Misses Lucille and Arleva Poole, Verda Shaw Fox and Joy Holt as soloists for the evening.

Sunday night, October 15th, another interesting program was conducted by Miss Edith Leonard. This was in the form of a "Thermometer meeting." A number of talks were made and themes read, and after each of these the members woulds decide how many "degrees" it had helped the society. The object was to see if all the talks would help the society 212 degrees.

Next Sunday night we have a special missionary program with Miss Clata Andrew leader. The different foreign countries will be discussed and a tableaux will close the program. We invite all parents and friends who are interested in us to come out to these meetings and enjoy them with us, and also learn something about what kind of work we are doing. The meeting is at 6:30.

Winston-Salem, First.—Yesterday was a day to be remembered and talked about by us. At the morning hour Rev. G. F. Millaway preached the sermon in our Home-coming service and to say that the sermon was a good one is putting it mildly. While Brother Millaway's body has grown somewhat feeble, his mind seems to grow in keenness. The scripture lesson was from the fourth chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews, and Brother Millaway recited it absolutely from memory. In addition to the music by the chair, Miss Sibyl Davis and her sister, Mrs. J. B. Winecoff, of Greensboro, sang a beautiful duet. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon we assembled for another service. Short addresses were made by Revs. G. F. Millaway, R. A. Hunter, H. F. Surratt, R. M. Andrews. Brothers P. W. Mock and W. N. Pegram spoke briefly. All in all, it was a very enjoyable day and will do good. While these special days are enjoyable and are a tonic to the workers, yet the tragic thing is that there are so many members of the church who do not avail themselves of the opportunity of getting new inspiration.

On Thursday night of next week, which will be October 26, we are to have a joint meeting of the congregation and the fourth quarterly conference, with President Andrews presiding. J. E. PRITCHARD.

Siler City Church.—Our pastor filled his appointment the first Sunday morning with a splendid sermon. The text was taken from the sixth chapter and 58th verse of John: "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life." Immediately after the sermon Miss Clark joined our church, coming from Bonlee Baptist church. We extend to Miss Clark a hearty welcome into our midst.

We observed Rally Day the second Sunday beginning with Sunday school and closing with the evening program. The three smaller classes with Mesdames C. E. Brady, Duncan Welch and T. L. Smith as teachers, had charge of the Sunday school devotionals and rendered appropriate exercises for the occasion. At the evening service "The Tie That Binds," a program of song and story, was rendered by the C. E. Society with Prof. Paul Braxton reading the story. Mr. L. L. Wrenn also made a splendid talk. This was a very impressive and uplifting service, and Misses Sallie Smith and Minnie Cooper, with the co-operation of Prof. and Mrs. Paul Braxton, of the high school faculty, and the C. E. Society deserve much credit for putting it across so nicely.

The fourth quarterly conference convened in our church on Wednesday night, the 11th. Mr. L. L. Wrenn was the speaker for the evening. His subject was "The Church." We always enjoy Mr. Wrenn's talks, but this was above the average, and we feel sure that everyone who heard it went away uplifted in spirit. Every church was well represented, especially Hope, which had a large turn-out. All the business was transacted harmoniously and all had encouraging reports. We believe every church will go to Conference with all claims paid in full. The pastor's salary was raised $100.00. It was voted unanimously for our delegate, Miss Kara Andrew, to bring Mr. Isley back. Mr. Isley's splendid yearly report was read and accepted by the Conference.

Again the third Sunday morning Mr. Isley filled his appointment with another of his uplifting sermons, taken from Eph. 3:13: "Till we all come in the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, into a perfect man." The Lord's Supper was observed with a large part of the congregation partaking.

After the service new church officers were elected for the ensuing year, as follows: trustees, P. S. Siler, O. E. Stone, B. E. Fox, T. C. Fox and J. H. Fox; stewards, L. L. Wrenn, T. L. Smith, J. A. Cooper, B. E. Fox, William Wright, Mrs. D. L. Johnson and Miss Clata F. Andrew; class leaders, Mrs. L. L. Woody, Mrs. J. E. Fox and Miss Flossie Siler; pianist, Mrs. C. E. Brady; assistant pianist, Miss Minnie Cooper; head usher, Mr. E. D. Woody; Sunday school superintendent, Mr. L. L. Wrenn; assistant Sunday school superintendent, Mr. W. E. Sharpe. Mr. Sharpe has served as superintendent for the past few years and has been untiring in his efforts to make the Sunday school a success and seeing it climb to the largest in number since its organization. I'm sure every member appreciates every effort put forth by Mr. Sharpe. Mr. Wrenn has served as superintendent several years in the past and we are sure the school will prosper under his leadership, with the co-operation and prayers of the entire church and school. The writer was re-elected reporter.

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Stone and son Hubert spent the week-end in Richmond, Va., visiting their son, Evans, who is taking a business course.

Lexington, Mt. Carmel.—Rev. Mr. Isley delivered a wonderful sermon, using as his subject "How May I Know I Am Saved?" To add to the service we were very fortunate in having the Alamance Quartet of Burlington, who rendered several numbers. A large congregation was present for this afternoon service.

The attendance continues to grow over last year, both in church service and Sunday school.

Since our last report the death angel has taken one of the little girls from the Beginners' class. Little Travis Louise Landis died September 4 and was laid to rest September 6 in the church cemetery. Travis was five years and five months old. The beautiful floral tribute spoke for esteem and love for Travis. The funeral was conducted by a Baptist minister of Lexington.

The officers of the church were elected at the Sunday afternoon service for the ensuing year. They will be installed at the first Sunday morning service.

The fourth quarterly conference met Monday night with a large number of officials from both churches present. The business was transacted in harmony. It was unanimously voted that Rev. Mr. Isley be returned for his sixth year with the charge. We truly hope Conference will see fit to return him. Mr. Guy Barber was elected as delegate and Mr. Arvil Walser, alternate, both of whom are from First Church.

Miss Grace Frank and Mr. Paul Frank, members of our young people's class, were united in marriage October 7. Miss Frank and Mr. Johnny Smith, of First Church, Lexington, motored to some part of Virginia and were married, while Mr. Frank was united to Miss Clara Grubb of the Churchland community at his home by Rev. R. L. Fisher. These young people have our best wishes for a long and happy life.

Calvary.—It looks like, being within a short block of the Herald office, and going there at least once a week, it would be easy for Calvary to have a report in every issue. But there are two reasons for not doing so. One is that we do not want to monopolize space; the other is that the pastor or the reporter are busy, too busy to avail themselves of the opportunity if they wanted to take it. So news does not appear often. But lest you should think nothing is going on in the church, I am giving you some brief items.

The booth at the fair, so called, was a success financially, the women folks clearing about $165.00. This has already been applied to the purpose for which it was raised—the Auxiliary share of the church debt, more specifically, the parsonage debt. My tribute here to the way the women folks worked, at home and at the booth, to get the money. David said of his men that "they who stay by the stuff shall share as those who go out to battle." I am willing to give equal praise to those who cooked and to those who served.

Our Rally Dap and Thank-offering service held last Sunday week was very successful. We had a combined Sunday school and morning church service, during which the little folks in the hut recited and sang and the pastor talked. The offering for Rally Day through the Sunday school was $19.00. At night the song-story, "The Tie That Binds," was given as a part of the Auxiliary Thank-offering. The offering amounted to $30.00.

Last Sunday was observed as "Empty Box" Day, with a fair response to the request that the folks pay up, and indicate that they had done so by bringing in and placing on the collection plates their empty offering envelope boxes. We are still far behind, but we are hoping to come out in our finances.

Last Sunday night we had the installation service for the Boy Scout troop recently organized in Calvary church. The Scout Executive, Mr. Frank Braden, had charge of the preliminaries. The installation service itself was in charge of A. L. McAlister, assisted by the troop from the Church by the Side of the Road.

This has been a rather difficult year for the church in more ways than financially. I suppose in that respect we are not different from most other churches. As I see it, the church generally has had more serious problems to face during the past year than in any year in a generation. (That may be a sign that I am getting old and pessimistic.) But in our local work we have had to face the loss of several families out of our church and Sunday school work. They have not yet removed their names from the church roll, so we will not report a loss of membership. In fact, the gain in membership is about an average. But their going has cut that much into our attendance, which was none too good to start with. But we are not discouraged. The spiritual slump may have reached its lowest level. We hope so.

Friendship Station.—We have not had a report in the Herald from our church in quite a while, however things have been done that should have been reported; but the reporter has been sick in the Yadkin Hosital; but she is now back home and is quite well again.

We have been having good services; well attended and interesting. We had Annual Conference Day and about half of our Annual Conference claim has been paid already. Our pastor's salary is behind, but we believe he will be paid up in full before he goes to Conference.

We deeply regret that at a church conference last Saturday night our pastor told us he was expecting to move this fall. He has been here three years and so many things have been done that needed to be done, a great deal has been accomplished, and most all of our loyal members fear and dread a change of pastors at this time. We are praying that the will of the Lord may prevail in all the actions of our Annual Conference.

Bro. J. A. Hurlocker remains about the same, having been confined at his home for seven years. Pray for him.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Harkey, accompanied by our pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. O. B. Williams, spent last week in Chicago, attending the World's Fair. They made the trip by automobile and toured through several Middle Western states; they report a fine time without any accidents.

High Point, First.—Appreciative thoughts may linger in one's mind and soul without fulfilling their deep intent. Spoken into ears of those to whom due or transmitted to the printed page so that they may read them gives life to inner feelings. Flowers generally belong to the living.

Last evening's worship hour in First church, High Point, was devoted to the fall thank-offering service of the Woman's Auxiliary. The play, "All in a Day's Work," written by Mrs. H. W. Maier, of Lexington, North Carolina, was presented to an audience that taxed the capacity of our assembly room—some had to stand. The generous offering was about $100.00 and the general appreciation of this fine piece of work was so great that I am persuaded now to write of thoughts in my mind.

I want, first of all, to commend Mrs. Maier for this splendid and highly instructive production. It was our pleasure to have the author and her good husband, the Rev. H. W. Maier, in the congregation. Both participated in the service. I trust that many of our churches will use this play for a service—if not now practicable, at some not distant time. It is educational, inspirational and devotional.

Then I desire to record appreciation for the splendid work of Miss Mary E. Young, Dean of Women of High Point College and secretary of the thank-offering of our Auxiliary, who so successfully directed the play. The cast was composed of students from High Point College, assisted by little Miss Garnett Hinshaw and Master Stanwood Kennett, children of members of the faculty—to each of these goes credit for superb performance and our gratitude for their helpful contribution. Much real talent was displayed.

And, further, I am indeed grateful as a pastor for the splendid support being given the church program by the women of the church through activities of the Auxiliary, whose president is Mrs. J. C. Whitesell. This efficient and consecrated leader is enjoying, through her loyal helpers, one of the best, if not the best, year the Auxiliary has had. Special attention, in addition to their financial program for the local church as well as our World Service, is being given by the women to the prayer meetings and church worship attendance. Many calls are made each month by these women of the Dorcas-spirit. What a church it would be without these faithful women!

Now, dear Editor, all members of the parsonage would record, with gratitude to God and appreciation to our many friends who have in various ways shared with us the experience of the last six months, the gratitude we have for the safe return of Mrs. Farmer to our little home circle. Her stay in Tucson, Arizona, benefited her very much, and we are happy to report her loving presence with us again. Arizona sun-rays, medical and surgical skill and, best of all, Divine help in answer to definite prayers, worked wonders.

With loving prayers for you and all readers of your splendid pages, I am, fraternally, yours in Him,

ROY IRWIN FARMER, Pastor.

Kannapolis—As our Annual Conference is just around the corner we are all busy trying to make our annual round up. The Lord has been with us wonderfully during the past and we trust that he will still be our guide in the future. We have had some sweet and glorious blessings to be thankful for, and we all appreciate the co-operation that all members and visitors have manifested, especially during the past 11 months. We are thankful for the work of the Tithers League and we hope that each one who is now a member will continue this through the coming year and that others will join, so next fall by the Lord's help we will leave Methodism enough so that we will not have to make the annual round-up. Our pastor has been very faithful to his duties the past year and we as a church appreciate his interest and help, for he has brought us some very helpful and encouraging messages.

On Sunday, October 15, Rally Day was observed by the Sunday school by each teacher sitting with her class, all having the privilege of being recognized. The classes were represented as follows: Mrs. C. B. McCommons, Beginners; Mrs. J. V. Dwiggins, Primary; Mrs. C. B. Price, Junior girls; Mr. W. T. Kiser, Junior boys; Mr. J. G. Lisk, Senior girls; Mr. R. T. Sides, Ladies' and Men's class, with Mr. M. W. Henderson, superintendent of Sunday school, and Mr. J. T. Lisk, assistant superintendent. Some fine remarks were made by the following: Mr. M. W. Henderson, Mr. R. T. Sides and Mr. X. E. Grayson, after which Bro. Morris brought a beautiful sermon, taking his text from the fourth chapter of Nehemiah, a very fitting text for Rally Day. The new officers for the ensuing year have been elected but not installed. A list of these will be given at a later date.

The Missionary Society was indeed glad to have Mrs. C. W. Bates with them on Friday evening, October 13. She brought some real interesting points and I am sure her visit will be a help to the society. We were glad to have the other visitors come with her.

The Ladies' Aid held their regular general meeting on Monday evening, October 16, at the home of Mrs. X. E. Grayson. Nineteen old members, two new members and five visitors were present. After the business was transacted a splendid social program was enjoyed, consisting of games, contests and imitations, songs and recitations. A delicious luncheon was served bp Mrs. Grayson, with Mrs. J. V. Dwiggins, Mrs. N. F. Harris, Mrs. C. B. McCommons and Mrs. C. B. Price and Little Miss Geraldine Braswell assisting.

We are very sorry to note Master Dewey Filley is improving slowly at the Gastonia Sanitorium where he is taking treatment for T. B. of the bone.

We are also sorry that Grandma Tilley is indisposed at her home. Hope these will soon be back with us.

May we forever be what the Lord would have us be.

First Church, Lexington.—Our series of revival services which began October 1, closed October 11. Rev. E. A. Bingham, of the Davidson charge, brought uplifting and inspiring messages to congregations which filled the auditorium of the church each evening at 7:30 o'clock. Prof. B. F. Sink directed the singing during the meeting. Special music was rendered by visiting quartets at each service. The results of the meeting were 12 conversions and 11 accessions. Those uniting with the church were: Hilda Crouse, Lelan Allen, Lucille Allen, Wilma Ridenhour, Margaret Everidge, Virginia McBride, Lucille Brown, Glenn Vernon Brown, George Kermit Ridenhour, "Bobbie" Bean and Mrs. J. C. Norwood.

On Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Isley chose as his text Acts 2:42. His subject was "Christian Fellowship." This was one of Mr. Isley's best messages. At the close of this service Mr. L. B. Koontz united with First Church bp letter, coming from State Street M. P. church. At this service we were delighted to have Mr. Isley introduce the Alamance Quartet from Friendship Church, Burlington. The quartet is composed of Messrs. Irving Isley, Garland Isley, Irving Edwards, and Moton Euliss. Miss Trula Isley is the accompanist. These men were schoolmates of our pastor. Mrs. Garland Isley also accompanied the quartet. Their singing was enjoyed by all present and we invite them to come again and worship with us.

At the evening service Mr. Isley spoke on "Facing the Future." At this service the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Stewards, Phonse Bean, chairman, B. F. Everidge, Willie Kimball, O. F. Johnson, V. E. Russell, Glenn Younts, A. E. Cutting, Arch Miller, L. B. Koontz, Wilford McBride, T. D. Westmoreland, Arvil Walser, Roy Wallace, Glenn Brown, H. N. Fine, George Miller, J. I. Thompson; trustees, J. H. Yates, David Brooks, C. I. Auman, W. C. Gibson, Arvil Parker, J. C. Russell, W. L. Aaron, R. H. Gibson; ushers, B. F. Everidge, Will Kimball, John Hamilton, J. D. Allen, Clyde Clodfelter, James McBride, and James Yarborough; reporter, Margaret Lea Swink; class leader, W. A. Snider; assistant class leader, C. L. Hedrick; pianist, Jessie Everidge; assistant pianist, Lola Mae McCulloch; church treasurer, J. J. Mallard; church secretary, Ernest Hamilton. The following Sunday school officials were elected by the Sunday school: H. C. Koontz, re-elected superintendent for the 14th year; Oscar Koontz, assistant superintendent; Grady Lanning, secretary.

The fourth quarterly conference for First Church and Mount Carmel convened at Mount Carmel October 16 at 7:30 o'clock. Reports show that our church is about to end its best year yet. The pastor's salary is paid to date, we have added 28 new members, and sent 5¾ subscriptions to the Herald. We hope to pay our Conference claims before the Annual Conference convenes.

G. A. Barber, delegate to the Annual Conference, was unable to be present, so Arvil Walsar was elected alternate. The vote for Mr. Isley's return was unanimous.

Miss Georgia Etta Davis spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Davis. Miss Davis is a freshman at Averett College, Danville.

Miss Margaret Lea Swink had as her week-end guest Mrs. Glenn Everhart and daughter, Margaret Jackson.

Mr. Clifford Koontz and Miss Wadie Goley were united in marriage recently at Hillsville, Virginia.

First Church, Thomasville.—The regular church service was held last Sunday morning, also the election and installation of church officers for the ensuing year.

Pastor Madison preached a wonderful sermon on the subject, "Temptation." His text was from James 1:12: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation."

On Sunday evening, Christian Endeavor met with I. A. Teague as leader. New officers were also elected for Christian Endeavor another year as follows: Mrs. W. G. Myers, president; I. A. Teague, vice-president; Virginia Jarrett, recording secretary; Finch Jackson, corresponding secretary; Dorothy Jarrett, treasurer.

For the evening service the Rally Day program was used. Miss Pauline Bailey gave the story, "The Tie That Binds," by Miss Lillith Shell. Miss Bailey is one of our Christian Endeavor workers, but has not attended regularly since going to High Point to business college in September. She is greatly missed in our Sunday evening C. E. services, as well as church services.

Ruth and Lois Dorsett, small daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Dorsett, are quarantined to their home with scarlet fever; also Beulah Brown Wright, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everette Wright is ill with scarlet fever. We have quite an epidemic of scarlet fever in our city.

Mrs. J. J. Watts remains ill at her home, although her condition is slightly improved.

Little Dorothy Westmoreland is well again and has returned to school after having her tonsils removed.

"Uncle" Bud Royals has been able to attend church occasionally after being confined to his home for several months since being stricken with paralysis. He is able to walk a little with some help. We are so glad that he can do that well. Our services never seemed quite complete without "Uncle Bud" in the congregation. He loves to go to church and when his health permits he is always there.

Mrs. L. R. Pearson, of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., is spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. T. G. Madison.

Our church is proud of the fact that she has produced one of her members, Mr. Ishmael Dorsett, as a ministerial student in High Point College. Ishmael is a promising young man with plenty of talent. Go forward, Ishmael, the church is praying for you.

The members of the Minnis Circle are preparing a thank-offering program to be given soon. The date will be announced later.

Seagrove.—Bro. L. A. King, one of our members and a local preacher, preached a good sermon for us last Sunday at 11 o'clock.

Our pastor, Rev. G. E. Reynolds, will fill his regular appointment next Sunday.

We are still holding services in a tent, but the brick have been purchased for our new church and will be placed on the lot at an early date.

The fourth quarterly conference convened at Fair Grove Saturday, October 14, with nearly all of the churches represented. The conference voted unanimously for our pastor to return next year. Our church will pay all claims in full.

We are having a very good Sunday school but we are hoping for a great improvement when we get our new church completed.

The Ladies' Aid Society will sponsor a church supper on Halloween night, October 31, at the vacated Ashworth residence next to Dr. Johnson's. This supper will consist of chicken stew or oyster stew, as preferred, vegetables, slaw, dessert and coffee. A complete supper for 25 cents. The proceeds will be applied on the new church. We are few in number and the task ahead looks almost impossible, but we have faith to believe we will win. Our building committee is S. G. Richardson, chairman, Dr. D. J. Johnson and James Walker. L. A. King is chairman of the finance committee. Any donation, however small, will be appreciated from anyone who would like to help. Just mail it to L. A. King, Seagrove, N. C.

Shiloh.—The fourth quarterly conference was held at Shiloh church on Saturday, October 14, at 2 p. m. The attendance was not as large as desired, but we are thankful for those faithful ones who are almost always present to help transact the business of the Kingdom. Rev. R. S. Troxler announced that he felt his work on Shiloh Circuit was finished and his service here would close with this Conference year. Brother Troxler has served this work faithfully for the past nine years and has been one of the most beloved pastors that has labored in this field. His purpose has been to keep burning the spiritual fires of the churches; to do this he has preached "Jesus Christ." At the very beginning of his ministry here Bro. Troxler won the confidence and love of our young people, and his leadership among them has been effective and fruitful. His presence in the C. E. meetings has been a great inspiration, and his wise counsel has helped our boys and girls to walk in paths of service and great usefulness in the church. Mrs. Troxler has labored in all the activities of the church, the children have grown up among us; they are all a part of us, and it is with genuine regret that we see them go from among us, if they really must go. It seems that it can't be true, but painful separations have ever been a part of life. The love and prayers of Bro. and Mrs. Troxler's friends will follow them whether they labor here or in neighboring fields of service. Height, nor depth, nor distance can separate us from the love of Christ, nor can it kill the love of brethren. So with those two friends of old we pray, "The Lord watch between me and thee while we are absent one from another."

Bro. Troxler's message at the Sunday morning service was from the text, II Tim. 4:5: "But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry." In Paul's last exhortation to Timothy, he told him he must be watchful. The enemies that are to be most feared are not the seen, but those that are unseen, powers of darkness and spiritual wickedness in high places; the devil, as a roaring lion goes about seeking whom he may devour, and he always attacks when least expected and least able to resist.

Paul also admonished Timothy to walk circumspectly, looking everywhere; to do the work of an evangelist, and to endure afflictions. To do this is not easy, but the closer we walk with God, the easier it is to do.

The fifth Sunday will be Rally Day at Shiloh for the whole Shiloh Circuit. Come and bring your lunch, or else lunch with your friends and spend the day with us.

We were glad to have Floyd and Fred Berrier with us Sunday. Floyd is in the ice cream business in Florida, while Fred works in a similar business in Richmond.

We were also glad to have Vesta Troxler with us Sunday. Vesta is attending High Point College this year.

Mount Hermon Charge.—The fourth quarterly conference for this charge will meet at Cedar Cliff church Saturday, October 21, at 3 p. m. A full attendance on the part of the church officials is urgently requested. Several matters of importance will demand our prayerful consideration at that time.

It would seem now that this charge will be able to close a very good year. The interest on the part of the people at the Sunday schools and the worship services seems to be the best since I have been here. We had splendid services, both at Cedar Cliff and Belmont last Sunday (second Sunday), with the largest attendance at the night service at Belmont for the year. The third Sunday at Mount Hermon and Friendship the congregation was large and the interest fine.

Indications now are that with co-operation on the part of all, the financial report will be as good as last year, and perhaps better. Cedar Cliff has, or will, meet all her budget for all interests. This is characteristic of this church, as it has done so for several years past. The other churches responded fine to the special effort to raise the A. C. B. and will continue to do so, in order that it may be paid in full if possible. We are farthest behind on the W. S. budget, but hope to do considerably more on it, along with the aid of the Ladies' Auxiliary, we hope to make a good showing on it.

Plans are now under consideration for beautifying the parsonage grounds. Our parsonage is conveniently located one mile south of Belmont on highway No. 62, and when a little more work has been done on the interior and the grounds planted to shrubbery, etc., it will present a beautiful appearance to those who pass the highway.

On the third Sunday we were privileged to join the host of friends who gathered at the home of Mr. R. Whitney Isley to celebrate the 76th birthday of Mrs. Minerva Isley and Mr. Green A. Nicholson. They were both taken by surprise, but seemed to have enjoyed it to the fullest extent. After a short prayer and thanks by the writer, the two honorees were given many useful gifts and wished many more happy birthdays. Following this every one present enjoyed a sumptuous dinner together.

We hope for Mrs. A. G. Thompson, who is now in Duke Hospital for an extended treatment, a speedy recovery.

On the fourth Sunday, all the churches on the charge will make a Harvest Home offering. From the interest that has already been shown, there will be a large offering. The garden and field crops of this community are generally considered good. We are sure that the people want to show their appreciation for the blessings of God, by giving back to His cause and kingdom a part of their increase.

Sixty copies of the Herald were sold on this charge last Sunday under the Sunday plan of delivering them at each church.

L. E. MABRY, Pastor.

Mount Pleasant, Mount Pleasant.—The church and Sunday school officers were elected Sunday morning. Mr. Condon Coley was elected superintendent of the Sunday school for the coming year. Mr. W. A. Stafford has been superintendent for the last few years, rendering his faithful and efficient service. Following the election of officers, Dr. Johnson held a very impressive installation service in which the officers were reminded of their responsibility and of their opportunity for service.

A Rally Day program was held Sunday morning with Mrs. Suits, superintendent of the Primary Department, having charge. Dr. Johnson used a very appropriate subject in connection with Rally Day, "Rouse to Action."

Sunday night Rev. E. Lester Ballard gave an illustrated lecture on his visit to the Holy Land. This program was given under the auspices of the Business Girls' Circle. The lecture was of much interest as well as of educational value.

On October 28 the fourth quarterly conference will be held at Mount Pleasant.

MARGARET CAUSEY, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—The fourth quarterly conference will meet at Hebron church Saturday, October 21, at 2 p. m. All official members are requested to be present.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Richard Henry Brooks

Richard Henry Brooks, the son of Isaac Newton and Martha Brooks, was born in Chatham County, North Carolina, on March 25, 1865. After an illness of more than five years, in the early hours of the morning of October 13, his suffering came to an end, and his spirit went home—to the place prepared for those who have been faithful.

And no man was more faithful to every trust than was Richard Brooks. He inspired confidence, and was in every way worthy of it.

Mr. Brooks came to Greensboro in 1883—a young man of 18. For three years he was employed by a retail hardware concern. Then, realizing the opportunity offered by a larger, growing business, he became associated with the Odell Hardware Company. Eventually he became vice-president, sales manager, and the buyer for a large part of the business.

When the Sunday school of Grace Church was organized, in April, 1891, Mr. Brooks at once identified himself with it. For many years he was one of the teachers, later serving very acceptably as superintendent. He was a charter member of Grace Church, a member of the board of stewards, and at the time of his death was chairman of the board of trustees.

He attended quite a number of the sessions of the Annual Conference as delegate, and was chairman of the committee which proposed the forward movement in church extension, which has meant so much to our church in this state. He was a representative in the General Conference of 1900, which met in Atlantic City. A few years ago, upon the organization of the Superannuate Board of the General Conference, he was elected chairman, and served as long as his health permitted.

On June 27, 1907, he was happily married to Miss Fannie Vestal, who, with two sons, Louis and Alan, survives. Their first-born, Richard, died in early childhood.

The funeral service was held in Grace Church Saturday morning, October 14. It was conducted by Dr. S. K. Spahr, pastor-emeritus of the church, who was assisted by Dr. S. B. Turrentine, president of Greensboro College. Dr. Spahr, who had known Mr. Brooks for nearly ten years, and visited him frequently during his illness, said that, owing to his frail body, Mr. Brooks might be thought of by many as a feeble man. This, he assured his hearers, was not the case. The "earthly house of this tabernacle," the tent in which the real man resided, was the only thing that was frail. Intellectually and spiritually, Mr. Brooks was a robust man. During his long illness, he was vigorous in mind and soul, and retained the full use of his faculties unto the end. In faith, in hope, in courage, in devotion, there was no evidence of weakness. While his physical being had to yield in its battle for life—as all must at some time—he lived triumphantly—and so he died. He was the soul of honor, gentleness and courtesy.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

vidual women, our girls are already pretty well outfitted for the winter except for shoes. We report some encouragement in the above cash report this week. Who else will respond quickly?

Magazines

Many of you subscribe for magazines. Mrs. Mabel Williams Russell, 804 Lindsay street, High Point, N. C., is anxious to help the Home. She asks that you make your subscriptions through her, and she will in turn give her commissions to the Children's Home. If you take one or more magazines in your home, order through Mrs. Russell. They will cost you no more and the Home will profit a bit by each subscription. Please order your periodicals through her.

And send on the coupons. October will soon be ending and the present contest must close. Who will get the $5.00?

God bless every one of you, and help you to send your pastor to Conference with a good report. Pray for us.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON, Supt.

The Call of the World

The world is calling you and me—
Calling, calling, calling!
Its voice is heard where lights are bright,
It ceases not in darkest night—
Calling, calling, calling!

It seeks to lead away from right,
Calling, calling, calling!
Would lead our feet in path of wrong,
By words and tune of impure song—
Calling, calling, calling!

To sin and shame the world moves on,
Calling, calling, calling!
To weeping, woe, and bitter sorrow,
With no relief for black tomorrow—
Calling, calling, calling!

The Living Sacrifice

Everywhere the Apostle Paul went in his missionary journeys he found men eworshiping at the altars of their gods. He found them in Jerusalem offering the sacrifices prescribed in the Law. And he found them in Antioch and in Ephesus bringing their gifts to lay on pagan altars. What they brought ranged in size and in value from a dove to an ox. It cost the worshiper something to make such an offering. And the value of the gift was determined by the financial status of the one who offered it. If poor, he could bring a turtle dove or two young pigeons. If rich his offering must have commensurate value. But back of that offering was something more than the value of the thing offered. It was a symbol of the man himself. Its blood poured out was a symbol of his own sacrifice—an evidence of his love for the god to whom he sacrificed. Other elements might enter into it but that was the controlling motive.

In the 12th chapter of Romans, Paul takes this practice over into the Christian life, but glorifies it when he exhorts the brethren to present not a dove or an ox, but their own bodies; not the cold and lifeless bird or anmal, but their own selves, as living sacrifices; not bound upon an altar, but given over to a life of service. And when we think of Paul's use of the word "body," we are not to think of so many pounds of flesh and blood and bones. We are to think of that body as the thing through which the spirit and the mind, the man himself, acts and feels and thinks. It is only through the body that we can serve our day and generation. We advance the Kingdom of God, or we retard it, as we give or withhold our bodies from His service.

So the Apostle is quite right when he insists that the dedication of our bodies as living sacrifices is the sign and symbol of our love and loyalty to God. How else can we express it? Thought without action, emotion without expression, is a poor evidence of our attitude. It is no evidence at all.

"Present your bodies a living sacrifice." Sacrifice—we do not like that word. It involves too much of giving up. It interferes too much with our pleasures and desires. It means death to selfishness and we are not willing to die to self. But the need for it is as great today as it was at the moment Paul wrote it. It was the willingness of the early Christians to do that very thing, as the Apostle himself put it, "not to count their lives dear unto themselves," that pushed the church and the Kingdom forward so marvelously in those beginning years. And if the church in our day does its work in the world, that same spirit and willingness must characterize its members. We must learn anew the meaning of that word sacrifice.

But what does sacrifice involve? It involves the giving of our time. One of the problems of our day has to do with the use of leisure time. The Christian must face that problem as it relates itself to the service of Christ. What do you do when you are faced with the choice of what you shall do with the hours at your disposal? Do you give God His share of them? Or does He have to take the leavings, if there are any?

It involves the dedication of our talent. Do you have talent that could be used in the service of Christ? What are you doing with it? When you are asked to accept a position in the church, do you say, as so many do, "I can't; let somebody else do it"? Or do you take up the task? Folks wouldn't ask you to serve if they didn't think you had the ability to serve, and they certainly wouldn't ask you if there were no place in which you could serve. The church isn't suffering from lack of talent. It is suffering from an unwillingness of those who have talent to dedicate it to the service of the Lord; in other words, they are unwilling to present their bodies, the instrument through which talent is expressed, as living sacrifices.

It involves also the giving of substance. We hear a good many people saying these days, " Ido not have any money to give to the church." I wonder just how many of them can look into the face of God and say that sincerely. A great many of them seem to have money for other things. And a good many are saying, "I do not have much money to give to the church." They compare what they used to have with what they have now; or they compare what they have to give with what some one else gives. And because what they have seems so small they give nothing. Both are under condemnation. If you have money to get what you want for yourself you are under obligation to share it with God. Will a man rob God? "Yet ye have robbed me, all ye people of the land." And if we have little, there is still the example of the widow's mite to shame us for not giving that little.

Self, service, substance. These are all involved in presenting our bodies as living sacrifices. And that stands as a challenge to us in this our day. What will we do with the Apostle's exhortation? C. W. B.

AN OPEN LETTER

High Point, N. C.
October 20, 1933

Senator Robert R. Reynolds,
Asheville, N. C.

Dear Senator:

For nearly three-quarters of a century Uncle Sam's silver dollar has been saying to the American people, and to the world, "In God We Trust."

It is to be presumed that you, as the representative of a great State, endorse what our silver dollar says for us.

Won't you, therefore, before you make your twenty-one repeal speeches in North Carolina, stand before each of your audiences and ask God to bless your cause—the making of liquor, the selling of liquor, and the drinking of liquor?

And if, for any reason, you cannot do this, won't you please ask some praying supporter of your cause to do it for you?

This certainly seems a reasonable thing for you to do, Mr. Reynolds. If we are trusting in God as our silver dollar says we are, then the people of North Carolina ought not to be asked to follow you in a great moral issue unless the cause can be taken to God, and His blessings invoked upon it.

In a Book, the authority of which you will not question, I am sure, it is written: "Wine is a mocker; strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." And again it is written in this same Book, "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." If your cause is one that will exalt the nation you should certainly not hesitate to ask God to bless it.

Won't you, then, before you speak for repeal in North Carolina, recognize Jehovah as the God in whom we trust, and evidence your faith in your cause by asking God to bless the making of liquor, the selling of liquor, and the drinking of liquor? And let me suggest again that if you cannot stand before your hearers and do this, that you call on some praying supporter of your cause to do it for you.

Very sincerely yours,
S. W. Taylor.

HOW DO YOU THINK OF YOUR LOVED ONES WHO HAVE DIED?

By Luther K. Long

Roman Catholic Christians think that their dead have need of prayers to help bring them through the fires of purgatory on into the perfect peace and bliss of heaven. It is becouse of this that they pay money to the priest to say masses for the deliverance and repose of the souls of the dead.

Protestant Christians, for the most part, have no settled or uniform viws or practices concerning this matter of prayers for the dead—except that they reject utterly the sacrifice of the mass. Otherwise than this attitude, the pulpit has but little definite teaching, and the church service no adequate recognition of the departed and their sorrowing families.

I once buried a boy twelve years of age. He was a fine youngster and lovely to his two-year-old sister, the two being all the children in the family. He had pneumonia and the end came swiftly and unexpectedly—leaving the family and friends in deep distress. I was calling one day soon after the funeral. In the course of the conversation the mother turned to me and asked, "Do you believe it is right to pray for the dead?" I answered with another question, "Were you brought up Roman Catholic?" No, all her people were Protestants.

Getting at her idea, I found the situation like this: She did not mean to pray for the boy's salvation, for she believed he was safe with the Lord. But her love for him was so great and she missed him so much, that she felt it was a comfort to speak of him in her prayers, to commend him to the Heavenly Father's care, and to thus gain and increase a sense of the reality of the child's continued relation to herself and to the Father. Of course, I commended that sort of remembrance and fellowship with those gone on, and I maintain much the same relationship with my own loved ones.

It has been my custom for some years to remember in the prayer at a funeral not only the one just gone, but also in general terms those other departed ones whose friends are present—seeking to bind into a closer fellowship of loving interest the entire circle of loved ones here and on the other side. The Easter season is an especially fitting time to thus broaden the scope of one's sympathies and prayers.

Our Jewih friends can teach us something along these lines. Thriugh my frequent attendance here in Washington at the Friday evening service in the Synagogue of the Washington Hebrew Congregation—where Rabbi Abram Simon has ministered so ably for the past thirty years—I have come to appreciate the beauty and impressiveness of their prayer-book service for those gone on and those left behind. It seems to me that they get into this service more of the spirit of Jesus than our friends of the Roman Catholic church do in their elaborate ritual—the very spirit that all God's children everywhere should be glad to emulate. I am taking the liberty to transcribe here some of that service:

"Minister: All you who mourn the loss of loved ones, and, at this hour, remember the goodness, the hope and the sweet companionship that have passed away with them, give ear to the word of comfort spoken in the name of your God:

Only the body has died and been laid in the dust. The spirit lives and will live forever in the shelter of God's love and mercy. But in this life, also, the loved ones continue in the remembrance of those to whom they were precious. Every act of goodness they performed, every true and beautiful word they spoke is treasured up and becomes an incentive to conduct by which the living honor the dead.

"And when you ask in your grief: Whence shall come my help and my comfort? then, in the strength of faith, answer with the Psalmist: My help cometh from God. He will not forsake me, nor leave me in my grief. Upon Him I cast my burden, and He will grant me strength according to the days He has appointed to me. All souls are His, and no power can take them out of His hands. Come, then, and in the midst of sympathizing fellow-worshipers rise, and hallow the name of God. (Mourners rise.)

"Minister continues: Extolled and hallowed be the name of God throughout the world which He has created, and which He governs according to His righteous will. Just is He in all His ways, and wise are all His decrees. May His kingdom come, and He will be done in all the earth.

"Congregation: Praised be the Lord of life, the righteous judge is forevermore.

ARE WE SHIRKING?

We cannot ignore our responsibility. We cannot shake off our obligation. We are our brother's keeper and God expects us to be the trustees and stewards of this glorious Gospel which He has given to us. What are we doing to fulfil this trust? What have we done to obey this command? What are we going to do? Our poverty, our weakness, our limited resources, are no excuse. God will take what we have and will make it sufficient for our part at least in this great and inevitable responsibility.

Do not let us dare to shirk this obligation. It will meet us in a dying hour. It will meet us when these lost mllions meet us before the throne of God.—A. B. Simpson.

THE BLUE EAGLE PLEDGE

I PROMISE—

1. To support the code and cut the arguments.
2. To give the iron ear to the fellow who has all the reasons why it won't work.
3. To remember that we are in a war, and that if it was all right for the Government to ask a few million boys to settle a disturbance in Europe, it must be fairly reasonable to request a few million merchants to endure a little discomfort for the common good.
4. To bear in mind that, after all, this time Uncle Sam is not asking me to leave my home and family to show a machine gun squad that I can take it.
5. To realize that patriotism is patriotism, even when there are no bugles.
6. To realize that the call to make the world safe for Democracy was no more important than a call to make America commercially safe.
7. To read my code before criticizing it.
8. To regard the Blue Eagle as a Blue Eagle, not as a Chisel-beaked Woodpecker.
9. To remember that I have ean obligation to do something more than stick a picture of a bird in my window.
10. To realize that the slogan is "We Do Our Part," not "We Dupe Our Partner."
11. To develop a healthy hatred of trickery, chiseling, and the "old run-around."
12. To have no time for the fellow who would rather obstruct a plan that might cost him a $500-a-year loss, than to support a plan that would enable ten million people to eat regularly.
13. To realize that this time, nothing I am fighting can come back at me with poison gases.
14. To stop talking "interference with natural economic laws," "inevitable business cycles," etc., and to realize that no one ever got a wrecked truck out of a ditch by citing "precedents."
15. To not waste valuable time watching the other fellow.
16. To remember that we were all demanding "Action"—and that we finally got it.
17. To realize when criticizing Little Nira that nobody has yet suggested a better plan for quick action.
18. To be willing to take it on the nose for a year, if absolutely necessary to cure a national sick headache.
19. To keep ever foremost in my mind, when talking about the sacrifice being asked of me, that, after all, I'm not being asked to don a uniform, go to France, dodge shrapnel, sleep in the mud, and get what comfort I can out of the fact that a girl named Nellie is knitting me a pair of socks.
20. To think what a mess this would be if we left it all to Congress.
21. To work more, and talk less, always realizing that it is impossible to pull a drowning man out of a well by throwing him a plate of boloney.
22. To believe in the recovery program with all possible sincerity, and to give it a fair trial, even if I'm skeptical.
23. To remember that the only difference between a "slacker" in this crisis and a slacker in the World War is that the slacker then had a lot more good reasons for being scared stiff.

24. To recall that we were all shouting for a "President who would DO something." Now that he is trying to, for John's sake quit knocking and support him.

IMPORTANT MATTER

Greensboro, N. C.
October 12, 1933

Dear Brother McCulloch:

You are doubtless aware that the fifth Sunday in this month is World Temperance Sunday. It comes just before the people of the state are called upon to vote on the question of the repeal of the 18th Amendment. The result of that vote will doubtless have much to do in determining the fate of our state prohibition laws. The observance of this Temperance Sunday furnishes a fine opportunity for warning the people, through our pulpit messages and Sunday school classes, against the evils of strong drink, and the moral dangers involved in the repeal of our prohibition laws. It will mean much to the cause if all the churches will make use of this special day.

Fraternally yours,
J. Clyde Turner,
Chairman Ministers' Committee, United Dry Forces.

BUY TODAY!

Now's the time to freely buy,
Heed the country's battle cry;
Worry, fear, dejection, doubt,
Put these enemies to rout.

Now's the time to freely buy,

THE TEST OF CHARACTER

There is no safer test of Christian character than humility. "I am meek and lowly in heart," was the Master's own differentiating feature, and all arrogance and self-importance, no matter what other qualities we may have, are the certain signs of the ascendancy of the self-life and the carnal heart. "Knowledge puffeth up, but love buildeth up." How many puffed-up people we meet! Like unhealthy flesh, flabby and inflated, such souls impress us painfully with their own shadow and make us think of the saint who asked as his special benediction that he might be made a blessing to every one as he passed through life, and yet never leave the shadow of himslf to fall upon his work. Oh, for the shining face that "wist not that it shone"! Oh, for the love and service that artlessly asks, "Lord, when saw we Thee hungry and fed Thee?"—A. B. Simpson.

A FALSE NOTION

We met a sorrowful sight the other day. A young lad, or we might say, a young man, about fifteen years of age—a chap we have known for several years and one who has memorized much of the Bible. He has testified for the Lord before others and seemed to be doing quite well. But when we saw him recently he told us he was not strong enough to hold out. So back to the world he was going. Now what did we tell him?

We told him first of all that he was too strong. He was so self-willed and stubborn he would not let God keep him. We also told him that he was bent on having a good time (so-called) in the world and was determined to go that way. We warned him of how God might have to punish him for leaving so much light to walk in darkness.

And then we saw that this lad was being led away by an unsaved girl. The devil is very clever. Young women should use their influence for Christ but they are too often only tools in the devil's hand to upset young men. But Christian young men should learn to obey God at all cost. They must not consult their own youthful lusts. "Flee youthful lusts"—fly for your life, Paul told the young man Timothy. In our weakness, for we are weak whether we know it or not, we must not try to be strong enough to resist some sins—we must rise and flee for our lives. It is an utterly false notion that we cannot stand for Christ, because we are not strong enough. It is simply because we are not weak enough and surrendered enough to Christ to let Him keep us.—The Prairie Overcomer.

—William Revell Moody, for many years head of the Northfield Schools founded by his father, the late Dwight L. Moody, died at his home in East Northfield on Thursday of last week, aged sixty-four years. Mr. Moody was graduated from Yale in 1891. After the death of his father in 1899, he became responsible for the administration of the schools—a death-bed commission of the famous evangelist. In the years that followed, the son adhered to his father's princple that the students should pay only half of the cost of their education and should perform tasks in return for the institution's paying the other half. He secured many gifts for the schools, including Sage Chapel, Gould Hall, and Crossley Hall, and several million dollars for current expenses and endowment. Mr. Moody resigned as head of the schools seven years ago because of ill health and was elected chairman of the board of directors. In 1929 he resigned this post, but he remained a trustee until his death. For more than thirty years Mr. Moody prepared the programs for and presided at the annual General Conference of Christian Workers, also founded by his father, at East Northfield. He wrote two biographiees of his father—one published in 1900 and the other, a more complete work, in 1900. Mr. Moody is survived by his wife, four daughters, one brother, and one sister. The brother is Dr. Paul Dwight Moody, president of Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt. Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon in the First Congregational Church, East Northfield.—Zion's Herald.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Dear Dr. McCulloch:

I am very sorry to say that Dr. Andrews will not be able to send a letter for publication this week. He was bitten, after the last of his Sunday's appontments with Brother Henderson, by a particularly poisonous spider, and had to have medical attention at midnight Sunday. He was carried to Presbyterian Hospital in Charlotte early Monday and stayed there until Tuesday at 10 a.m. Through the good offices of Brother Hendry in Charlotte, Brother Grady Tadlock of our Charlotte church drove home for Dr. Andrews Tuesday.

When they arrived here I got in touch with a doctor almost immediately, and on his very good advice Dr. Andrews is in the High Point Hospital, recovering nicely but will not be able to take care of any of his appointments this week. He hopes to make most of his appointments of the week beginning Sunday, October 29.

We are particularly sorry for this interruption in his work at this time, but hope the brethren can take care of it until he is on his feet again.

Sincerely,

October 25. Mrs. R. M. Andrews.

"JESUS MEANS WHAT HE SAYS"

In one of the crowded courts of London, a poor Irish lad was lying on the bed of death. On his window-sill were a few bright red flower-pots, and the carefully tended flowers gave their pleasant smell to the evening air. His room was very clean: all was tidy and as comfortable as his poor mother could make it, for she had hard work, now her Mick was ill, to find enough to keep the home together.

"Michael, you are very ill: perhaps you may die. Are you ready?—do you think you would go to Jesus?" asked a Christian friend who visited him in his illness.

"Yes, yes," said he; "I am sure I should go to heaven."

"And why are you so sure, Mick?" he was asked again.

"Oh,' was his answer, "Jesus says, 'Verily, verily, I say unto you'—and that's Mick—'He that heareth my Word'—and I do listen to His Word—'and believeth on him that sent me'—and I believe—'hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life'—and Jesus never told a lie!"

Here was his assurance—here his peace and assurance: Jesus was true—He could not tell a lie.

Mick knew very little about doctrines of religion, but he did know that the Word of Jesus was to be depended on. If Jesus said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you," Mick believed what He said; he did not trouble himself to reason on the words of the blessed Savior, but received them as a little child. And thus the dear Irish lad was perfectly happy.

"He that believeth not God," saith the Scripture, "hath made him a liar." Oh! what a beautiful thing is a little grain of simple faith! By it the soul is saved forever—Jesus glorified—Heaven gladdened—Satan disarmed. —Scattered Seed.

FOREVERMORE

Dreaming here upon my bed of pain,
Of the time when Christ will come again,
Of the time when suffering will be o'er;
Oh, it will be good
Never to know sickness any more!

Never to remember, through the years
We spend with Him, the bitter taste of tears,
Never to remember griefs we bore.
Oh, it will be good
Never to know sorrow any more!

Homesick for those mansions far away,
Waiting, longing, praying for the day
We clasp again those loved ones gone before.
Oh, it will be good
Never to be parted any more!

Thinking back along my path of life,
Of the fierce temptation and the strife,
Of the times I was not conqueror;
Oh, it will be good
Never to be tempted any more!

To hear His blessed voice through endless days,
To clasp the hand that led us on life's ways,
To see at last the One Whom we adore.
Oh, it will be good
To be with Christ our Lord forevermore!

I WARN YOU

Forget not that your first and principal business, as a disciple of Christ, is to give the Gospel to those who have it not. He who is not a missionary Christian will be a missing Christian in the great day of bestowing the rewards of service. Therefore, ask yourselves daily what the Lord would have you do in connection with the work of carrying the news of salvation to the perishing millions. Search carefully whether He would have you go yourself to the heathen, if you have the youth and fitness required for the work. Or, if you cannot go in person, inquire diligently what blood mortgage there is upon your property in the interest of foreign missions, how much you owe the heathen because of what you owe to Christ for redeeming you with His precious Blood. I warn you that it will go hard with you when your Lord comes to reckon with you, if He finds your wealth hoarded up in needless accumulations instead of being sacredly devoted to giving the Gospel to the lost.—A. J. Gordon.

OUR STORY PAGE

PETER GRAHAM'S PARTNER

When Peter Graham came out of the orphanage for homeless children and went to live with Miss Lettitia Brent in the big house on the hill, he was a very lonely boy; but as time went by and he grew older, he learned to love the farm, and with the owner, the animals, and live stock he formed a great friendship. Then for the first time in his life, Peter felt as if he were beginning to understand what the word happiness meant.

But the summer he was nine years of age he faced another problem. It came when he started to the public school, and great indeed was the disappointment, for Peter had dreamed of the friends he would make when once he started to the little brown schoolhouse, two miles from the Brent farm. But it took only a few days among the students of Hickory Dell for Peter to realize that he was considered an outsider.

The boys in the school seemed to pair off together: there was Tom Allen and Fred King, who were desk mates and played together always at the rest periods; Joe Brice and Lem Cagle seemed inseparable; and Sam Duncan and Lewis Wade went to school and came home side by side.

Of course there were other boys in school who didn't pal around with anybody, but these boys happened to be some that Peter did not care particularly for, so instead of finding congenial companionship as he had hoped to do, Peter found himself as lonely as ever.

Miss Lettitia, seeing the look of discouragement on his face one evening as they sat down to dinner in the big, old-fashioned dining-room, began to question him concerning the school.

“It's a nice school, Miss Lettitia,” said Peter solemnly, “but I'm lonesome. The boys all seem to pal together, every one of them seems to have a partner of some sort he runs around with, and seems not to care whether he knows anybody else or not. I can't break into any of their circles.”

Miss Pettitia's face took on a decidedly thoughtful expression. She loved this manly chap who had come to dwell in her house—loved him as much as any nephew she had—and Peter was worthy of it, too. So the unhappy expression on his youthful countenance hurt her gentle, loving heart.

“I'll tell you, Peter,” she said presently, “the thing for you to do is to choose somebody for a partner, and then you won't be lonely.”

“But theres nobody in the schoolhouse that I want for a real pal, Miss Lettitia, except the fellows that already have partners, so what can I do?”

“Find yourself one from the outside,” suggested Miss Lettitia, “and then speak of him as a great fellow to the boys at school—see?”

“I get your idea, Miss Lettitia,” exclaimed Peter, “and am going to find me a partner too.”

A few days later Miss Lettitia noticed a change in the boy. He went about the house whistling as merrily as before, and his eyes fairly twinkled. But she asked no questions; whatever was making Peter happy she must learn from the boy, and one morning just before he went away he asked if he might have an extra slice of cake in his lunch box.

“I want to take it to my partner, Miss Lettitia,” he said unblushingly. “Sure,” answered Miss Lettitia, “we'll fix a piece of cake for your partner. Is he a nice boy, Peter?”

“Nicest fellow you ever saw, Miss Lettitia,” declared the boy, “and I'm going to ask him over to see us one of these days.”

“Your partner, Peter,” responded Miss Lettitia, “will always be welcome in this house.” And again Peter started off whistling.

The happy attitude in Peter caused the boys in Hickory Dell to give him moroe consideration, and soon Peter was playing on the Hickory Dell Nine, and making friends right along. Then Joe's partner without a word to anybody, moved to another state.

“I'd love to have you for a partner,” said Joe, turning to Peter, ‘since Clem's moved away.”

“Cant have me now,” answered Peter, “I've already got a partner.”

“You've got a partner?” exclaimed Joe. “Never see you playing around with him.”

“Mine isn't that kind,” scoffed Peter, “but he's a real honest-to-goodness fellow, and I couldn't leave him now to play partner with anybody else.”

Joe made no reply to that remark, but down deep in his heart he resolved to find out who this partner was of whom Peter thought so highly. But as the days went by he saw nobody displaying any unusually friendly advances toward Peter, so Joe decided Peter's pal must be an outsider. Accordingly he turned his attention in that direction.

Day after day he kept an eye on Peter as he went to and from school. But with the exception of his daily stops at the crossroads store that Joe's uncle, Bill Evans, kept, Peter rarely ever stopped between the house on the hill and the one in the dell. But one day Peter stayed so much longer within th little store than usual, that Joe decided he'd missed seeing him come out.

Anyway, he reasoned, it would be a good excuse to go to the store, and maybe if his Uncle Bill was in a pleasant frame of mind he'd ask for some candy or cheese.

Imagine his surprise when he reached the door, to see Peter with a basket of groceries on his arm, leaning eagerly across the counter while his uncle, with a joyous expression on his kindly old face, was relating some thrilling encounter he had made during the Spanish-American War.

“That was great,” said Peter when the man had ceased speaking, “and I'm proud of you—you're a partner, Mr. Evans, that a fellow ought to be proud of.”

“Half-heartedness doesnt go with me, Peter,” answered the man. “Remember, I'm proud of you, too.” With that he opened a side door and Peter, with a frendly wave of his rough hand, passed out.

Joe waited until his uncle closed the door, and then he went in.

"What did he mean calling you his partner, Uncle Bill," asked Joe without so much as a greeting.

"Just what he said," answered the man as he gave Joe a searching glance. "You see," continued the man slowly, "when Peter started to school, you fellows sort of rubbed it into him about having partners and no room for anybody else, and he came to me about it."

"I hope you told him where to get off," said Joe slangily.

"I don't understand slang, Joe," answered Uncle Bill, "but if you mean I should have sent the boy along without a kindly word, you're mistaken. When I learned he was lonely and wanted a friend, I told him I'd be his partner until he proved unworthy of my friendship, and—and—" the man's voice faltered—"somehow, Joe, I think it was the best move I ever made, for I found after a few days of comradeship with this youngster that I was as much in need of a partner as Peter was."

"Why didn't you tell me, Uncle Bill?" questioned Joe. "I'd have taken time—"

"No you wouldn't," answered the man, "you were too busy thinking only of yourself and Lem to think of anybody else—but if you'd like, I think Peter and I might take you into our partnership now. I'll speak to Peter about it."

With Uncle Bill sanctioning the move, Peter was only too happy to welcome Joe into the circle, and before long the three were as chummy as could be. They are still partners, for you see, Joe and Peter are learning the grocery business, so that when the time comes that Uncle Bill will be unable to look after the store, the boys will be perfectly capable of taking it over and looking after it for their partner.—Junior World.

THE LOST TRAVELER

It is related of a lost traveler that, when he was near the point of perishing on the desert sands, he cast his eyes down and saw a small bag. Hoping to find water or dates, he quickly alighted from his camel, and eagerly seizing the bag he tore it open.

"God pity me!" he exclaimed, "it is only pearls."

By nature all men are lost, wandering through the dreary, dangerous Desert of Sin. But there are fountains of Living Water, from which they may drink and not perish.

One of the many Scripture passages representing man's lost condition is, "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way." "Gone astray!" Lost! But this glorious fact is also announced, that the Good Shepherd came "to seek and to save that which was lost." Blessed intelligence indeed! But we must be willing to be saved on the Good Shepherd's own condition—to be led by Him out of the desert of sin. His infinite concern for us is in a measure represented by the following incident:

A daughter wandered away from home and plunged into a life of sin and shame. But a loving mother traveled for many years all over the country, through dismal streets and dark alleys, in search of the lost one, sacrificing her all, and life itself, in the eager but fruitless search.

Thus Jesus forsook His all above, and sacrificed His life for the poor, lost traveler through the perilous wilderness of sin.

We are all either lost or saved travelers to the far-off country. To which class do you belong? Men need not be in hell to be lost. Millions are lost on earth. It is only a little time until a change of locality will take place. What you perhaps need most of all to realize is that you are now lost! Until you do, you will evade the seeking Shepherd. Oh, begin to pray that God may show you your lost condition!

Many persons who are not Christians realize, however, in a degree that they are lost. This ought to be sufficient to manifest some concern for their souls.

Just a little while before she died, a lady said: "If I had been as much interested in my soul as I was in the world, I might now be saved."

A young man with whom the Holy Spirit often strove cried out, "The Spirit of God is leaving me, never to return! Oh, I am lost! forever lost!"

Dear lost soul, may you soon be able to say with the poet,

"Amazing grace! how sweet the sound,
That saved a wretch like me!
I once was lost, but now am found—
Was blind, but now I see."

BILLY FINDS SOMETHING OUT

Billy was washing dishes because his mother was ill and his sister was away from home. He really didn't mind doing the dishes; in fact, he wanted his mother to have the rest and quiet, but he was afraid somebody would see him at the task.

"What on earth?" said his college brother stumbling over a rug in the semi-darkness. "Mother isn't trying to sleep out here that you must have the blinds all down and the doors locked a pretty day like this."

Billy explained that it was inconvenient, but he would not allow anybody to know that he had to do a girl's work. Somebody had pecked on the back door only a few minutes before, but he had kept as still as a mouse because of his rolled-up sleeves and his big apron.

Hugh started to laugh, a big hearty laugh, but remembered in time that his mother was ill. "That was Bob Peterson," he said quietly. "He was looking for you to ask you to go camping with his party. He—"

But Billy had dumped his apron in a corner and was making his escape as fast as possible. "You may stay here till I get back," he told Hugh. "I must find him. He'll get some other boy in my place."

Bob Peterson was making up a camping party of fourteen-year-old boys as a part of his vacation work to earn money to go to college, and was making his way along the street with his list of names when a flushed and breathless boy caught up with him. "I—I suppose I deserve missing the chance because I was ashamed to open the door," said Billy honestly, "but say, Bob, did you ever have to wash dishes when you was a kid like me?"

"Did I? Well, I guess I did. I wash dishes now in our boarding house at college. That's how I pay my board. You're fortunate to have home training."

"Do—do you like it?" he said with a sinking heart.

"Not for one lonely little minute, Buddy, but it pays better than some things. And, Billy, I wouldn't have you in my camp if you didn't know how to wash dishes. Last summer when I was green and inexperienced I took Jimmy Glade because his mother coaxed so hard for him to go, and we had to divide up and do all his chores. After this I take boys who know how to cook and wash dishes and keep the camp in order."

Billy thought a minute and then he said to Hugh, "Do you remember that man who talked in our Sunday school about compensations last year?" Hugh looked puzzled and Billy went on. "He said we never had any loss or hard thing to do that did not have some corresponding gain—I guess that was the word he used."

"Why, yes, I do remember that, Billy. That touches us. I couldn't get through college as soon as I am going to if I hadn't learned in the home kitchen to wash dishes, and I wouldn't have you in camp but for the same fact. There are compensations sure enough."

"I'm going back to finish the dishes," said Billy suddenly, "and I'm going to open the door and lift the shades. I guess it isn't such a terrible thing after all to have to help with the home chores."—Hilda Richmond, in The Youth's Evangelist.

THE SHEPHERD'S CALL

Many years ago, I walked up to the top of the Torres at Ilfracombe. It was a beautiful afternoon in the month of July, the sun was shining brightly, and the sea was dotted over with little sailing ships.

Everything was peaceful, just such a day as we all enjoy so much at the seaside.

When I had climbed right up to the very top, I lay down on the grass and enjoyed the lovely view. Suddenly my quiet rest was disturbed by a loud cry. When it was repeated, I raised myself to see if I could find out whence the cry was coming.

After a time I discovered that it was coming from a man who was riding a little pony and who was standing just then on the top of the hill next to the one on which I was resting.

At first I thought he was calling to me, but in a very few minutes I discovered that he was calling to the sheep, for now I saw that they were walking quite fast up the hill towards him.

Very soon the top of the hill was quite white with sheep, the shepherd being surrounded with them. Do you know what I thought of? I expect you can guess. I thought of the time when the Lord Jesus will come and call in the air, when all His own sheep and lambs, who know His voice, will go up and meet Him.

It made my heart so glad, for I had known Him for a few years then, and nothing could possibly give us, who are His, greater joy than to be called up to meet Him. Just as the sheep went up from the valleys to the hilltop when the shepherd called them on the Torres, so shall we, dear fellow-believers, go up to meet our Good Shepherd when He calls in that happy day.—Scattered Seed.

PERFECT TRUST

I may not always know the way
Wherein God leads my feet;
But this I know, that 'round my path
His love and wisdom meet,
And so I rest content to know
He guides my feet where'er I go.

I may not always understand
Just why He sends to me
Some bitter grief, some heavy loss,
But, though I cannot see,
I kneel, and whisper through my tears
A prayer for help, and know He hears.

My cherished plans and hopes may fail,
My idols turn to dust,
But this I know, my Father's love
Is always safe to trust:
These things are dear to me, but still Above them all I hear His will.

Oh, precious peace within my heart;
Oh, blessed rest to know
A Father's love keeps constant watch,
Amid life's ebb and flow;
I ask no more than this; I rest
Content, and know His way is best.

GOING TO BED

Fred's mother was away taking care of grandmother. Father woud not come home till almost ten. It was past Fred's bedtime already. What should he do?

Bridget was the only other person in the house, and he could tell by the sound of voices that she had company.

Mother had told him to go to bed at eight, but she supposed father or Bridget would be there to go up-stairs with him. It was cozy in the sitting-room, but how dark and lonesome his little bedroom would be!

He never had gone to bed alone. What a happy surprise it would be if father should come home early, after all! But Fred heard no welcome footsteps. "There seems to be no one looking out for me," he whispered in a wee voice.

"Chirp! Chirp!" came from outside. Some birds were chattering over their perches for the night.

Fred listened to them. They did not seem to be afraid. They stayed out in the night alone.

"A bed is safer than a tree, anyhow," Fred thought. "I guess God in Heaven wouldn't let anything happen to a little boy any more than to a little bird."

When father came home he found the child fast asleep with a smile on his face.—Publisher Unknown.

Sufficient quantities to supply the members of his official board will be sent free of charge to any minister requesting this pamphlet, together with a descriptive price list of our literature.

For 80 cents, samples of all our pamphlets, bulletins, and tabloids on various phases of tithing will be added.

When you write, please mention the Methodist Protestant Herald; also give your denomination. The Layman Company, 730 Rush Street, Chiuago, Ill.

TO MEMBERS OF CONFERENCE CLASS, NOTICE!

Will all those who have not finished the course of study as required by the Conference please send me at once a list of the studies that you have passed, so that I may check up on them before Conference, and see if they correspond with the record as I have it. This will save some time then, and especially if you expect to be ordained at this time. It will also enable me to place you in the proper class in the Journal for next year. Will thank you to attend to this at once.

AS TO THE EGG-AND-A-HALF PROBLEM

Dear Dr. McCulloch:

I have always entertained great respect for your mathematical ability. In a case of pure mathematics I should beg to stand aside—allowing you the undisputed right-of-way.

But when you write concerning the business performances of a flock of hens you are getting into one of my specialties, and I feel entirely competent to enter the lists.

I have known hens to lay small eggs, ranging in size from that of a robin's egg to that of one laid by a prairie hen. A hen laid for me an egg that was more than twice the size of an average-sized egg. She did it all in a single day.

Another of my hens laid two eggs in one day. The first was a large, perfect egg. The other was of full size, but it had no hard shell—just the flexible covering over which the shell is usually deposited.

I never knew a hen to lay an egg and a half in a day, or in a day and a half. Even if she did, I do not believe you could count on the output—or should I say the out-lay?—of a flock of six hens being so many eggs.

Suppose you go out to the hen-house with a market-basket on your arm and proceed to gather the eggs. You can pick up the whole eggs all right, but what about the half eggs? By the time you are in the house again your basket is a mess. If you were on hand in time, with a dish, you might do a better job collecting the half eggs. Don't you think it would be better to state your problem something like this:

If a hen and a half deposit a unit and a half of scrambled egg material in a day and a half, how many units of scrambled egg material will six hens deposit in a day?—L. K. L.

LOOK TO GOD FOR GUIDANCE

The demands of the spiritual life are simple, but implicit. To be true to your high calling, you must have a heart of humility and gratitude, a spirit of obedience and submission to divine authority, an honest principle of mind which causes you to look to God for guidance and approval, and a desire to live a holy and devout life. Anything less than this high standard of thought and conduct will keep you from your rightful place in the divine arrangement. Stand, therefore, with your loins girt about with truth, having on the breastplate of righteousness, taking the shield of faith, and the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God. Then will it be said of you: Well done, thou good and faithful servant.—Grenville Kleiser.

NOTICE

The Executive Committee of the United Dry Forces of Guilford County invites you and your congregation to hear Honorable Clyde Hoey speak at a temperance rally at West Market Street Methodist Church Sunday afternoon, October 29th at 3 p. m.

Fred Tate will preside. Clifford Frazier will introduce Mr. Hoey. Grady Miller will direct the music.

This is our united observance of World Temperance Sunday. Will you please announce it to your people.

REID WALL,
Campaign Director.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Misses Frances and Virginia Thomas, Greensboro, 87 good books for our library.

Mrs. T. J. Wilson, Rock Hall, Md., 1 coat.

Ladies' Aid Society, East Liverpool, Ohio, 2 quilts, 4 dresses, 2 pair socks, 1 night dress, 1 pair bloomers, 1 waist, 1 pair pants, 1 little boy's suit and one slip.

We are thankful for the money and the other gifts represented above.

Special for Boys' Clothing

The women have helped wonderfully in clothing our girls this fall. The men are helping to clothe our boys. We greatly appreciate the help that has come. Our boys must go poorly clad or we must buy on a credit. Which shall it be? You men, and men's classes, will help us to answer that speedily, and we thank you.

The above report, together with the five dollars reported last week, means that the men of First Church, High Point, have already contributed $31.75 for this special fund to pay for boys' clothing, and we know of $15.25 more to come. Thank you, High Point. Stockings, shirts, overalls, shoes and a suit of clothes for each of our 52 boys will cost an average of $7.50 per boy. So the men of High Point are taking care of six boys with $2.00 on the seventh.

Please let us hear from you and your class soon. Thank you and God bless you.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

—Miss Velna McCulloch seems to be improving at the hospital notwithstanding the fact that the physicians have not been able to definitely determine the nature of her ailment.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

First Church, Burlington.—The regular services were held Sunday. At the morning worship the Sunday school and church officers were elected for the coming year. The installation services will be held next Sunday.

Preceding the election of officers, Dr. Paschall, pastor, delivered a wonderful sermon on the subject, "The Type of Program the Present-Day Church Should Carry Forward." This was following the line of thought used the preceding Sunday, "The Type of Person the Present-Day Church Member Should Be." Both the morning and evening services were well attended.

The Woman's Auxiliary met Monday evening in the Hut. The regular business was transacted.

The fourth quarterly conference met Wednesday evening, October 18, with approximately 60 present . A short devotional was conducted by the pastor. We are glad to report that the financial conditions are better this year than last. Dr. Paschall gave a very fine report. He stated that during the past Conference year there had been 21 members received in the church. Eleven were received on confession of faith and 10 by church letter. The other reports were also very good. An adjourned session of the conference will be held next Thursday evening in the hut. It has been urged that every church member attend.

We are sorry to report that Miss Susie Stafford received minor injuries in an automobile accident which occurred Friday afternoon near High Point.

The sympathy of the church goes out to Mrs. A. S. Isley in the death of her father, Mr. Spoon. The funeral was conducted Sunday afternoon at Mount Pleasant church.

Henderson.—It is difficult to appraise church work these days. Conditions are so abnormal that it is not easy to say whether church work is normal or not. We can not measure normalcy today by the standards or measures of even five years ago. People have allowed the loss of material things to affect their interest in the church and in the abiding values. However, the condition of our Henderson church can doubtless be said to be normal. The preacher has endeavored to encourage the people in every good word and work. He has advised the people to look up and not down, to hold on instead of letting go, to go on and not back. And I think there has been on the whole a favorable response.

During the year we have made an effort to hold all the special day services. Sometimes the interest was not at high tide and the offerings were not always large, but we have endeavored to be loyal to the program of our church. The pastor has in his preaching and exhortations and in private conversation endeavored to cultivate in the church membership a spirit of loyalty to both the General and Annual Conference programs as well as to the local program. The response has not been altogether discouraging. Many of our people have a real desire and an earnest mind to do the Lord's work.

Our annual evangelistic meeting, which began the 20th and closed the 29th of September, has already been reported by our church reporter. The attendance was larger than usual and the preaching was exceptionally good. I have never heard more favorable comments on the preaching of any man who has assisted me in a meeting. Our own people and many of other churches heard Brother Elwood Carroll gladly and with profit. I think I have never seen such a good meeting with so little accomplished as far as conversions and additions to the church is concerned. We attribute this to the fact that most of our Sunday school children old enough to make the decision and unite with the church had already done so and very few unchurched adult people attended the meeting.

The fourth quarterly conference convened the 18th of this month with more than an average attendance. As far as outward manifestations were in evidence, a very fine spirit prevailed. The treasurer's report showed that we, like most other churches, are behind financially, but not hopelessly so. The board of stewards is at work, and we are hoping to have a better report for the Annual Conference, in some respects, than we had last year. Brother E. C. Kittrell's extra hundred dollars will certainly make our World Service contribution look better.

I am thinking of the anxiety of our pastors and church leaders during these closing days of the Conference year, and I sincerely and earnestly pray that all of you may have wisdom for your task and that God's blessings may be upon your efforts. The raising of money to carry on the work of the Kingdom is just as much the Lord's work as a revival is. May God give us good success in this.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

NOTE: I appreciated Brother Bethea's article entitled "Mercy" in the Herald of October 19th. I want not merely to read it but heed it. Go thou and do likewise.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—Last night's service marked the closing of our two weeks' revival, which has meant much to many souls. We are so grateful for these refreshing spiritual showers of blessing. Those converted and those reclaimed numbered 28 persons. Our pastor, Dr. S. W. Taylor, did the preaching. His messages, clear, eloquent, convincing, powerful—were heard by appreciative audiences. For this we are very grateful. Repentance is a fine thing.

"Repentance hath a purifying power, and every tear is of a cleansing virtue; but these potential clouds must be still kept dropping; one shower will not suffice; for repentance is not one single action, but a course."—South.

"True repentance consists in the heart being broken for sin, and broken from sin."—Thornton.

"Repentance is the golden key that opes the palace of eternity."—Milton.

We are hopeful for a brighter day at Lebanon and that in the near future. It is a good field, ripe unto harvest. We are blessed in having one of the best pastors in the conference for our leader—a man steadfast and happy in his work, who preaches the truth in vital, thought-producing sermons. We love to think that a goodly number of our membership are thinking more. The man who thinks is truly God's best friend and the devil's worst enemy. We do hope Dr. Taylor may return to this field after Conference.

The doors of the church will be open to receive into full membership all who may wish to unite either on confession of faith or by letter next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The report of the nominating committee will be submitted, and the election of officers for the ensuing year will take place, also, next Sunday at the 11 o'clock service.

Our thank-offering service of the Woman's Auxiliary is scheduled for next Sunday night. The program consists of a play rendered by the High Point College players. We desire a full house at this time, feeling that a real treat is in store for all. We desire, also, a good offering.

On the first Sunday, at 11 o'clock, Dr. Taylor is going to preach on the subject, "Why I Oppose Liquor." May we have a large audience again on this occasion, because of the importance of this special message.

Our people have been talking about erecting a hut on the church lot. A committee has been appointed to do some canvassing for the purpose of finding how hopeful conditions may be for immediate action in this matter.

Bellemont, Mt. Hermon Charge.—On Sunday morning, October 12, our pastor, Rev. L. E. Mabry, preached an excellent sermon on the subject, "The Man With an Alibi." As the basis for his discussion he chose the Scripture, Luke 14:18: "And they all with one consent began to make excuse." In this scriptural passage three men were invited to a public gathering. No doubt they would have enjoyed going, but because of something in their lives they began to make excuses. Today we make innumerable excuses. The fundamental basis for this is to conceal facts from ourselves and others. We even give untruthful alibis about things in our business affairs, social, and otherwise. We also give numerous alibis for our moral failures. It is always the vices which we would conceal and not the virtues. We never want to conceal pleasant things. We give excuses to conceal our lives of sin. In many instances we wish to blame others for our commission of sins. We say that we sin because we can't help it. "Sin is never a necessity," says our pastor. We let into our lives whatever enters them. It isn't necessary that we hold the close connection with that person who is dragging our lives into sin. God pity us if we follow the wrong crowd. In conclusion, we who use alibis cannot turn the searchlight of God into our own lives. When we rob ourselves of this privilege, we rob ourselves of repentance and also of salvation.

A solo, "O Jesus, I have promised," by Mrs. Harlan McPherson, added much to the impressiveness of the service. At the close of the sermon communion was held in commemoration of the Lord's Supper.

Also, at a short business session of the church the following officers were elected for the coming year: Trustees, G. A. Nicholson, Dr. J. A. Pickett, L. H. Coble, W. A. J. Sharpe, and V. B. Webster; stewards, Mrs. Marie Holt, Paul Lowder, Nannie Coble, and Ramah Shoffner; class leaders, Mrs. Carrie Sharpe and Mrs. Mary Shoffner; Sunday school superintendent, Royzell Coble; assistant superintendent, Reed Brown; pianist, Mrs. Marie Holt; assistant pianist, Nannie Coble; ushers, Homer Hargis, Howard Pickett, and Coy Rich; church treasurer, Carrie Nicholson; church reporter, Myrtle Holt and Flossie Holt, assistant; board of education, Margaret Pickett, Flossie Holt, Reed Brown, and Ed York; choir leader, John Randolph.

The patrons of the church responded favorably to the Harvest Home offering for the benefit of the Children's Home at High Point.

The mid-week prayer service will be held on Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the church. A study of the book of Luke will be made at this service.

We were sorry to hear of the death of the baby girl of Mr. and Mrs. James Stanfield. The infant was born on Sunday morning October 22. The burial was in the Mount Hermon cemetery in the afternoon.

Class No. 5 will hold its regular monthly class meeting at the home of Misses Margaret and Mattie Pickett on Thursday evening, October 26. This meeting is being planned with the Hallowe'en spirit in mind. Everyone is urged to be present. REPORTER.

Spring Church Charge.—The writer and family spent a day recently with Rev. H. S. B. Thompson and family. Bro. Thompson is a hard worker. He produces peas, peanuts, cotton, etc. On leaving, he and his good wife shared with us various items for our own home use. We appreciate their kindness.

The sixth and last thank-offering service for this year was held at Pleasant Hill last Sunday night. The attendance was good, the program fine and the offering was the largest received from any of the three held this fall.

Dr. and Mrs. Dixon were present and each one was given a place on the program. We were delighted to have them with us.

Our fourth quarterly conference will meet at Spring Church Friday of this week at 4 p. m.

A Rally Day program will be given next Sunday at Spring church at 11 a. m.

Mrs. Neese organized a C. E. Society at Lebanon church recently with 21 young people uniting. Mr. Burnette was chosen president.

Aside from the finances the charge seems to be in fair condition. I hope, however, that we will rate fair as to finances.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—We were delighted to have a large crowd attend church service Sunday p. m., October 22, to greet our pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, who delivered a very able sermon on "Be still and know that I am God." Our pastor always seems to know just what we need and enjoy.

A business meeting of the church was held the second Sunday in October. The church register was revised and the officers for the coming year were all re-elected, with the exception of two or three, including class leaders, trustees, stewards, Sunday school superintendent, church secretary and treasurer, reporter, and pianist. Mr. J. T. Hobbs was elected as Sunday school superintendent.

The church officers were installed the fourth Sunday in October.

The fourth quarterly conference was held at Hebron Saturday p. m., October 21, with a unanimous vote for the return of our present pastor. We are hoping that Conference will see fit to send him back. He and his good wife have worked with an untiring effort, and have woven themselves into our hearts so much that we would regret very much to part with them. Their paths seem filled with noble aims.

Our delegate-elect is Mr. B. F. Wilson, of Hebron church.

Under the excellent leadership of Mrs. D. M. Pender the women of the Auxiliary and community have sent in a very good collection of home-canned goods and other eats to the Children's Home at High Point. Some of the good farmers also helped by donating field products. We still have more produce to be sent in that couldn't be collected beforehand. We give our fourth Sunday collection from Sunday school and preaching service each month to our Children's Home.

Our Auxiliary meets every fourth Sunday p. m. at the church, under the splendid leadership of our president, Miss Terresa Sykes; vice-president, Mrs. C. H. Jones; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. C. A. Sykes. We also have our monthly Circle meetings. We also have a young people's society under the leadership of Mrs. A. V. Jones.

We were glad indeed to have Dr. Andrews speak to us a few Sundays back.

MRS. DAVID M. SYKES, Reporter.

Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Charge.—It has been a long, long time since we have had a report from Orange Chapel. I am not sure we have had a reporter. And now that we have one we are not much better off. They said I had better not report that our Ladies' Auxiliary was just about dead, and that we never had a Christian Endeavor Society. All right; I'll not.. However, very few of the Chapel people will read what I write, for they don't take the Herald. I believe it is customary to praise our pastor, but I am not going to do that. It is too near Conference, and somebody else might take him.

We elected our officers last third Sunday, but will mention only one. Mrs. Clem Crawford was elected Sunday school superintendent. She is one of our best workers. She joined our church by letter last August. If all our boys would bring in such willing workers we might have a better report. We have some capable young men who should be filling this office. They are all right when running loose, but just try to put the harness on them if you want to see them kick! We need a C. E. S. to train them in. We will have our installation service next first Sunday afternoon, and if you don't hear anything more from Orange Chapel, you may know they have impeached the reporter.

I did not start in so much to make a report as to say a few words in regard to the Minnis Fund. I was just going to write to Mrs. Bates when I saw her letter in the Herald. If the people of the North Carolina Conference will not support one of own boys on the mission field any better than that I think we had better throw away all pretenses and join the Hard Shell Baptists. However, it is so easy to forget and neglect and get careless when we don't intend to. I do myself. But we must not neglect this, and Mrs. Bates must just keep after us and keep us informed of how things are going. I never dreamed we were that far short of what I think we are under moral obligations to do. We have time yet to make good before Conference if we will get busy—but no time to lose. I don't think our Auxiliary is so dead but what we will send in a contribution. But don't put everything on the women, even if they are willing. A good many of our men pay scarcely anything on the budgets, so give them a chance. I don't think it would be anything amiss to let one general collection go to the Minnis Fund. I know there is a financial rush just before Conference, but I believe our conscience will feel better if we put forth a little extra effort and make a good payment on Minnis' salary.

Perhaps I will be able to make a better report in the future.

MRS. J. J. CRANFORD, Reporter.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—The revival which began at our church the third Sunday morning came to a close on the following Friday night. Our pastor, Rev. C. B. Way, did most of the preaching. He was assisted by Rev. Wayne Curtis, of Burlington, who directed the singing and delivered two sermons during these services. He also sang a number of solos. The attendance was good at all the services. Three services were held on Sunday and two services each day following. We had special music each night from different nearby churches. Invitations were sent to the various churches preceding the meeting and every church responded. We enjoyed their singing very much. Mr. Way delivered some of the best and most inspiring sermons we have heard since he has been on this charge. Mr. Curtis gave a splendid message on Sunday night as our pastor had to fill his regular appointment at Tabernacle church. Mr. Curtis also talked to the children on Friday afternoon. Although there were no conversions, we feel that much good was done and that everybody was benefited by attending these services.

The young people's missionary society met at the home of Frances Whitman Saturday afternoon to hold the regular monthly meeting. The attendance was very good and we held a very interesting meeting.

The Woman's Auxiliary meets with Mrs. C. E. Sprinkle on Tuesday night of this week. We are hoping to have a large number of our members present as this will be a very important meeting.

The attendance in our Sunday school is not so good at the present. We are keeping after the absentees and we think a number of them will soon start back.

LOLA LONG, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—The revival meeting at Pleasant Hill church closed last Friday night. Rev. Wayne Curtis, of Burlington, assisted the writer in the services, directing the song services, rendering solos and preaching at two of the services. The pastor did the preaching at nine of the services. There was splendid attendance throughout the meeting. Special music was rendered by groups of singers from the five other churches in and near the community, which was enjoyed very much. While there werne no additions to the church, we believe much good was accomplished.

The fourth quarterly conference was held at Stony Knoll church last Saturday. Rev. W. L. Harkey, pastor of the Yadkin charge of the Methodist Episcopal church, had been invited to be present and deliver the sermon, which he did to the edification of all present. A sumptuous dinner was provided by the members of Stony Knoll church and enjoyed by all present. The business of the conference was transacted at the afternoon session. Harmony prevailed, and the discussions were in a spirit of unity. Reports by the pastor and others revealed that good work was done during the year. The finances were reported considerably behind, but hope was expressed that much of the amounts due could be raised by the time the Annual Conference meets. Bro. B. A. Long, of Tabernacle church, was elected alternate delegate to the Annual Conference. Rev. W. L. Harkey made a brief talk to the conference, emphasizing the importance of church members assuming a responsibility in the matter of supporting the church and its program. The first quarterly conference will meet at Tabernacle church.

It was the pleasure of the writer to be present at a birthday dinner at the home of Bro. David Todd, 92-year-old member of Harmony Grove church, last Sunday. The last service of this Conference year was held at Harmony Grove church last Sunday night. The election of officers and revision of the church register were attended to in compliance with the church law. After the service was closed the pastor was about to leave, but was called to the front of the church and given a pleasant surprise when shown a nice pounding awaiting him behind the curtains used for a Sunday school class. Various gifts of groceries, vegetables and other useful articles were in the list of donations. We deeply appreciate these tokens of love from members of Harmony Grove church. We were remembered by the families of Bro. C. G. Hunter and Bro. Ellis Long with useful gifts at the close of the revival meeting there last week, for which we are grateful.

We have only two more Sundays on which to hold three services before the Annual Conference meets. The first Sunday we will be at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches, and on the second Sunday at Union Hill church. We are hopeful of closing the year with a fairly good report to make to the Annual Conference. The writer is finishing the fifth year on West Forsyth charge. May we have a most successful and harmonious annual conference.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Fairview, Anderson Charge.—Since the end of the year is drawing near we are looking back over the past months and taking an inventory of what has been accomplished for the Lord. In a financial way we have not reached the goal, but we are trusting that it will be done before Conference convenes. Of course it is impossible to measure our spiritual growth, but if we have failed to do our best it has not been our pastor's fault. He has endeavored to give the true word of God, "the sincere milk of the word," I Peter 2:2.

The church officials for the ensuing year have been elected and will be installed the first Sunday morning in November. They are as follows: Stewards, E. S. Pepper, Marshal Watson, J. M. Carpenter, Rex Henderson, J. W. Smith; treasurer, T. B. Malley; trustees of church property, J. W. Smith, W. B. Freeman, L. H. White; pianist, Miss Anne Henderson; choir leader, Marshal Nalley.

The October meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society met at the home of Mrs. Grady Foster with Mrs. Enoch Pepper and Mrs. W. B. Freeman, joint hostesses. A large per cent of the members were present and reported that they had done the Bible study asked of them by the leader. This group of workers has raised over $69.00 this year. This amount has been used largely toward helping cover the church, janitor's salary and repairs on the parsonage furniture.

The Christian Endeavor is continuing to grow in number.

A ten-day singing school is being conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Harmon. This is the second one held this year and much interest and enthusiasm is being manifested by a number of our members. May our singing of God's hymns improve. REPORTER.

Glen Raven Charge.—The churches on this circuit are working in a splendid manner to close the Conference year in good condition. A fine spirit of co-operation exists among the churches. They work with and for each other. Fairview and Haw River are meeting all budget items, local and general. Glen Raven, through the generosity of Bro. J. G. Pritchett, has added three new Sunday school rooms, and the building to be re-covered and repainted, the yard set to grass and shrubbery. The Christian Endeavor is taking the responsibility for the improvement of the grounds.

Bro. Wayne Curtis, of Belmont, helped with the singing in the revival at Haw River. Everyone enjoyed his services in the meeting.

Bro. P. E. Troxler is delegate to the coming Thomasville Conference.

Rev. N. G. Bethea was the help in the meeting recently held at Glen Raven. The results were most gratifying, and all enjoyed his fine sermons. J. P. PEGG, Pastor.

Hope, Siler City Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Isley, has met each of his appointments for this month, bringing us his usual good messages.

On the third Sunday evening a very interesting C. E. meeting was held. The subject used was "How to Improve Our Church Services." The following topics were discussed: "How to Improve Our Music," by Mrs. McDowell; "More Stress on Worship," by Miss Kara Andrew, and "Friendliness," by Miss Elizabeth Hanner. Many interesting and helpful points were brought out, and we all enjoyed Miss Hanner's talk so much. We are indeed fortunate to have her work with us. She is teaching in the Bonlee school. At the present time we hold only one Christian Endeavor meeting a month, but we feel that these meetings are very much worth while, and interest is increasing. Following the sermon, the church was called into a church conference and officers for the coming year were elected. The following constitute our official board: Stewards, J. L. Fields, W. H. Andrew, D. T. Vestal, J. R. Tally, A. A. Johnson, Mrs. C. C. Routh; Mrs. D. T. Vestal, church treasurer; trustees, J. J. Andrew, C. C. Routh, R. R. Brewer, J. D. Jones, A. A. Johnson; class leaders, Mrs. A. A. Johnson, Mrs. R. R. Brewer and Miss Kara Andrew. Miss Kara Andrew was elected to succeed herself as Sunday school superintendent.

Bro. Isley will preach for us on the fifth Sunday at 11 o'clock. That will give us two more appointments before Conference. We are hopeful of coming out with most of our financial obligations. We have some of our claim paid and expect to pay pastor's salary in full. We are all hoping that our pastor will be returned to this charge for next year. He has worked faithfully for us, and he and his wife have made friends with all with whom they have come in contact.

May we all work for a successful close of this year's work. A MEMBER.

Shiloh C. E. Society, Shiloh Charge.—Our lessons during this quarter have been both interesting and inspiring. The lessons have dealt largely with the church and our obligations to it as church members. These lessons have made more plain to us just where we stand as Christians.

The lessons during this quarter have been led by the following: Mrs. Raymond Fritts, Miss Arlene Berrier, Miss Ruth Shoaf, and Miss Florence Berrier.

Following the lesson for October 8, Rev. E. C. Roach, pastor of Reeds Baptist church, gave a very interesting talk in which he summed up our lesson explaining more thoroughly some of the points that were brought up. We were truly glad to have Rev. Mr. Roach and family with us and extend to them a hearty welcome to come again when time permits.

In the beginning of the year our society was divided into six different groups for the purpose of raising our allotment for the Conference. Each of these groups had one of their members as a captain to look after the finances of that particular group. A prize was offered for the ones who raised the most. Last night, October 22, following the program the groups were asked to assemble and make a report, which was as follows:

No. 1, led by Mr. Ray Leatherman,	$40.65.
No. 2, led by Mr. Ventry Koonts,	$10.05.
No. 3, led by Miss Louise Swicegood,	$46.00.
No. 4, by Mr. Frank Shoaf,	$15.90.
No. 5, by Miss Stamey Leonard,	$12.70.
No. 6, by Miss Mabel Berrier,	$45.00.

These amounts total $170.30. We congratulate these young people on their splendid effort. We also congratulate Miss Louise Swicegood and her group on their record.

C. E. REPORTER.

Welch Memorial.—Our meeting, which began the third Sunday in September, ran 12 days. It was very, very successful, and we were much pleased with it. There were several converts and the whole church was revived. We enjoyed Brother Troxler very much and hope to have him with us again. This is the second successful revival we have had in our church this year. This, we believe, is rather unusual for any church. On Sunday following our last meeting we had ten additions to the church, have had some since and are expecting others soon.

Our S. S. and C. E. Society are still doing good work, and we see new faces at the preaching services often. People who hear Dr. Williams once usually want to come back and hear him again.

Our fourth quarterly conference was held last Wednesday night. All departments of the church reported good work. We are behind with finances, though not so far as last year.

We are very anxious for Dr. Williams to come back next year and have voted for that.

Several of the older members expressed themselves very strongly for him. They said our church is in the best spiritual condition it has experienced in years and they felt that if he didn't come back we would be ruined. We feel that Dr. Williams gives the fundamental truths upon which all churches must build to stand or grow, and, too, his clean life behind his preaching makes him loved by his whole flock.

We are to have an adjourned session of the quarterly conference three weeks from the first session and expect to have everything up by that time.

* * *

First Church, Concord.—Our people are all trying to co-operate and get everything ready for the Conference. We are hoping our pastor can go to Conference and report everything paid in full. Our pastor is proud to see his church co-operate so well. Mr. Morgan told us Sunday that he would let the church vote next Sunday as to whether we want to change pastors or not. We never know until after Conference whether we will change or not, but if we do change or do not change, we hope to co-operate and make next year the best year for our church.

Our missionary society is doing fine and all the ladies are anxious to raise our part of the money this year. We hope and pray that God will prosper us folks at home in such a way that we can help keep the work going on in the foreign fields. It makes our hearts ache when we read some of the letters in the Missionary Record and think that some of our missionaries may be sent home for the lack of money.

The joint meeting of our missionary society was postponed last Monday night on account of the serious illness of Mrs. P. J. Mann. Mrs. Mann has been real sick for five months and many prayers have gone up for her. We all prayed that if it was God's will that she might be spared and enjoy good health again. She wanted to get well so much and especially did she want to get well that she might help raise her baby girl. Mrs. Mann just had three children, two girls and one boy. Mrs. Maggie Mann Sides, Mr. Oscar and little Grace Mann. Mrs. Maggie had planned to start keeping house on Monday after her mother became so ill. She gave up her plans and went to her father's home and stayed with him and the children while their mother was in the hospital and she went to the hospital most every day to see her mother. Since Mrs. Mann came home from the hospital Maggie has constantly been by her side. Our hearts go out in sympathy to Mr. Mann and the children and all the relatives. Mrs. Mann told her family many times that she was ready to go. And we are sure that they have the comfort of knowing that they did everything for her that human hands could do. And may they realize that it was God's will to call her home. Mrs. Mann will be missed in the church, also in her Sunday school class, as well as in the Missionary Society. She was always willing and ready to do work for her church; when she was sick she was ever interested in the church. All the time she was sick her room looked like a flower garden, and when she died so many flowers were brought in that there were several cars and a truck full. She enjoyed her flowers so much and also the beautiful cards she received from her friends and Sunday school classmates. The members of her Sunday school class acted as flower girls. Mrs. Mann was just in the prime of life, only 43 year old. She died last Wednesday evening at 5:30 o'clock and the funeral was conducted from the church Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mr. Morgan conducted the funeral, assisted by Rev. Waldo Robinson and Rev. Mr. Kennedy. The church was filled with sympathizing friends and relatives.

Last night at about 10:30 death came in our midst again and claimed another sister, Mrs. Robert Furr. Mrs. Furr had been in bad health for a number of yeas, and last week she had a stroke and contracted pneumonia. Mrs. Furr had not been able to attend church in several years, but she was interested in the church work and enjoyed folks meeting with her in the home, holding prayer meetings and the Missionary Circle has met with her and she was interested in the mission work. Our prayers and sympathy go out to these bereaved families.

Mr. Robert Grey, who has been on the sick list for some time, is still improving.

Mr. William Newton and Miss Ruth West have married since our last report. They are making their home with Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Newton.

First Church, High Point.—It is with a heavy heart that the reporter chronicles the passing of her aged father, Wyatt Jackson Armfield, who peacefully and without a struggle fell asleep on Thursday, October 12, at 2 o'clock, p. m., at his home, 704 W. Broad street, this city. He would have been 90 years of age had he lived until November 25, since he was born in 1843. The only son of Richard Beeson Armfield and his wife, Anne Chipman Armfield, he grew up on his father's farm four miles from High Point on Deep River on land, some of which has belonged to his family since 1795, and which he owned at the time of his death. He was a student at Oak Ridge Institute at the outbreak of the Civil War, and was thus deprived of higher educational advantages which he greatly craved. This loss caused him to see that his own children enjoyed good opportunities in this line. He built his late residence in 1905 and he and his wife moved into it in April, 1906. Nine years later Mrs. Armfield died, and since that time the writer has kept house and taken care of him. Since May 18 of this year he had been confined to his room. Of a remarkably strong constitution and vitality, he had fought an incurable disease for nearly 20 years. Surviving sons and daughters are William J. Armfield, Sr., of Asheboro, W. Frank Armfield, High Point, Mrs. R. T. Pickens, Sr., High Point, Mrs. Frank Armfield, Concord, N. C., and Jesse L. Armfield, Evansville, Ind. Funeral services were conducted Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home by Rev. J. M. Hilliard and Dr. Geo. H. Crowell, long-time friends of the deceased. Another will give the story of his life in detail and appraise his character, but the writer wishes to take this opportunity to thank many First Church people for their kind expressions of sympathy during his long illness and at the close, and especially to Circle No. 4 of the Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. C. C. Robbins, chairman, for the basket of lovely bowers, her grateful appreciation is extended.

In the wake of this great loss and sorrow came the shocking announcement of the death of a close and loved friends, Miss Ruth Welch, at Guilford General Hospital on Thursday, October 19, at 1:30 o'clock as the result of an operation for goiter, which caused serious complications. Following, as it did, by only five weeks the passing of her mother, Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., Ruth's death seems tragic and hard to realize. From infancy Ruth was always a good, sweet-spirited girl, devoted to her mother and sisters, kind and loyal to her friends, who were legion. As a member of the writer's Sunday school class, she was sincere and attentive in a remarkable degree, and gave earnest co-operation and interest to every lesson and plan of the teacher. First Church is indeed sorely bereaved in the loss of Ruth and her mother, who was a charter member, and to this devoted and loyal family the church is indebted in a large measure for its existence today. Funeral services were conducted at the home Saturday afternoon, October 21, by her pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, assisted by a former pastor, Dr. Geo. R. Brown, of Reidsville. A more fitting obituary will appear later.

At the worship hour last Sunday morning the pastor delivered a beautiful and comforting sermon from the lovely 13th chapter of I Corinthians on the theme of Love, which Henry Drummond rightly called "the greatest thing in the world." Fifteen wonderful virtues or attributes are ascribed to charity or love: it suffereth long, is kind, envieth not, vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, or in other words, is unselfish, is sweet-tempered or not easily provoked, is charitable to others or thinketh no evil, rejoiceth in the truth, is brave and courageous, bearing all things, is full of faith and hope, and endureth all the changes and vicissitudes of life like good soldiers of Christ. Is not that a vivid word picture of the beautiful Christian life? We often pray for strength and courage, but instead we should pray for love. Paul said that the final solution of all differences is the expression of love. War might have always been averted if the different nations, sections, and peoples let love rule their hearts. All church dissensions would be peacefully settled if love were allowed right of way. Count Zinzendorf, the great founder of Unitas Fratrum, or the Moravian church, once said to a church torn by dissensions, "Let us meet and study the chapters of John," and from that prayer and study together the church was united, because they let love rule. Our friends come and go, but love abides forever. In London there is an imposing monument to Lord Nelson on which is inscribed his memorable words, "England expects every man to do his duty," but back of it stands a more effective and impressive memorial to Nurse Edith Cavel, who through love laid down her life in the World War. Mrs. J. H. Allred then very sweetly sang George Matthewson's superb hymn, "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go," which was written under the stress of anguish and sorrow, when his sweetheart wrote and accepted his offer of release from their engagement on account of his threatened blindness.

The evening service was merged with the Prohibition Rally at the Junior High School at 7:30 o'clock, which was addressed by Hon. Jake F. Newell and Cale Burgess.

Monday evening the Senior C. E. Society met at the church, and Miss Helen Johnson was leader.

Wednesday evening the usual prayer and praise service will be held, sponsored by Miss Blanche Burgess' Circle of the Auxiliary and the Men's Brotherhood. Attendance at this mid-week service has been very encouraging during recent weeks.

The annual bazaar will be conducted Thursday by the Woman's Auxiliary, and beginning at 5:30 o'clock the turkey supper will be served at 75 cents per plate.

The minister made a point of urging everybody to register next Saturday, October 28, and vote on November 7 against repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Gibsonville-Fountain Place.—Nearing the time of winding up the year's work, I am reminded of the fact that many favors have been passed on to this pastor and his family that should be mentioned in appreciation. This has been a year of many good things to us. In fact, my wife says it is the best since we came to this work. I am sure that there has been a greater variety of gifts from a greater number of people and of much more value from a money standpoint than of any other of the four years.

These gifts have varied all the way from a load of coal from my near neighbor, P. L. Kivett, to things of less value but with just as good spirit. Also from Mrs. Carl Allen, Hazel Woodward, Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. Shelton, J. T. Roundtree, G. L. Amick, Florence Kivett, G. J. Yow, Mrs. G. L. Amick, Mrs. Kenneth Williams, R. A. Hornaday, Mrs. Bun Greeson, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Stewart, Miss Lessie Wagner, Mrs. C. L. Jones, Mrs. Thomas Sutton, Mrs. Sam Beckom, Camille Kivett, Glenn Coble, Mrs. Henry Gibbs, W. B. Qualls, Orpha Burgess, Mrs. J. W. Wright, J. G. Meachum, Mrs. D. D. Glenn. Many of these have remembered us two and three times each week with things good to eat and that helped to lighten the burden.

Our finances are somewhat behind at this writing, but we were assured by the chairman of the board of stewards of the Gibsonville church that all claims would be paid by Conference, and of course Fountain Place always expects to pay up. In fact, the manager of the loan department of the Jefferson Standard told the building fund treasurer, G. L. Amick, this his church had made the best record of any church that had borrowed money to build. That is saying a great deal, because many churches have borrowed money there, and some with more wealth than Fountain Place and a larger membership. We are exceedingly proud of that record. In fact, if the Conference could take care of this debt, as was originally planned through the Board of Church Extension that church would support a pastor and be glad to do it. Whoever serves them next year will find one of the most agreeable congregations to be found anywhere. One of the kind that a pastor feels like he would like to sign up with for life.

Our congregations have been very encouraging this year. The average at Fountain Place has been the best average of the four. All departments there are doing good work.

The congregations at Gibsonville have increased steadily. The night congregation is the most noticeable. Four years ago some of the membership were in favor of doing away with night appointments. It was discouraging, but at a regular appointment recently there were 125 present. It has taken hard work to build it up, but the results have been gratifying. With not making much numerical gain, had it not been for the pick-up in attendance it would have been discouraging indeed. All departments here are doing well. A closer fellowship is the greatest need of this church. So many there are who "let George do it."

Thursday night, the 19th, was an enjoyable occasion. Misses Lena, Eva, and Lessie Faucett, and Miss Dewey Sutton, came to the parsonage with a good supply of oysters with all accessories, and to say we had an enjoyable time is putting it mildly. All the oysters that they and the three members of our family could eat. We always enjoy visitors, whether they bring anything to eat or not; but when they come with your favorite dish that makes it doubly enjoyable. Come again, girls, whether you bring your meal or not.

Conference is nearly here and soon we will be giving an account of our stewardship. May all our people do their best in this time of stress and bring up the deficiencies financially. N. G. BETHEA.

Rockingham.—Fourth quarterly conference was held Saturday evening, October 21. Scripture reading by C. W. Saunders. The church register was read and revised.

Pastor's Report: This four quarterly conference bring us almost to the close of the Conference year. All that the church and pastor have done is in the past. No doubt much more could have been done; however, there is no calling the past back, and this only means that we should try to do better the coming year. May God's richest blessings abide and ever be with the Rockingham charge. I have received $105.09 on pastor's salary; nothing on Conference budget; nothing on World Service. I recommend that the church look after the new converts which were taken into the church this year; that the church grounds be looked after at once; tat each member pray much before November 7 and cast his or her vote against Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Licensed Minister's Report: I have held prayer meetings in village. Have not had opportunity to be in church. Have tried to do to the best of my ability.

Sunday School Superintendent's Report: Have tried to get larger attendance here, although we did not quite reach the set number, 125. The Sunday school is a good one, though the attendance could be better. The collections are fine.

Trustee's Report: The grounds have not been repaired. Some doubts about methods of repairing. The conference agree on one week extension on wall.

No report from Ladies' Auxiliary.

No report from stewards.

Promises to pay $500 next year by God's help.

Sunday School Secretary's Report: Amount taken in since last conference year, $109.66; paid out since last conference year, $89.84; amount in treasury at present, $9.71; paid to M. P. Children's Home, $9.26.

Treasurer's Report for Quarter: Pastor's sayary, $27.45; piano, $7.35; lights $3.00; total, $37.80.

Paid to pastor, $105.49; miscellaneous, $162.44; total, $267.93.

Voted unanimously to have Rev. C. W. Sanders here next year.

Graham.—The election of church officers took place last Sunday morning. The following were elected for the ensuing year. Class leader, John L. Amick; trustees, N. E. Sykes, R. R. Bain, J. H. McPherson, W. R. Goley, W. C. Goley, H. L. Linens, Z. E. Noah; stewards, P. B. Core, Mrs. Lawrene Cheek, J A. Webster, Mrs. Adell Linens, Miss Gladys Amick and P. H. Amick; Sunday school superintendent, Don S. Holt; assistant Sunday school superintendent, Junius Neese; second assistant superitendent, H. M. Rogers; church organist, Mrs. C. C. Burke; first assistant, Miss Ruth Bain; second assistant, Miss Lizabelle Foust; Sunday school organist, Miss Ruth Bain; first assistant Miss Laura Jane Neese; second assistant, Miss Ruth Hunt; Sunday school secretary, Price Dixon; assistant, John Anglin, Jr.; ushers, Percy H. Amick, Charles L. Reavis, Harper Quakenbush, James F. Fuller. The installation service is to take place at the first Sunday morning service.

Sunday evening the Christian Endeavor elected the following officers for the coming year: James S. Cook, Jr., president; Miss Myrtle Foushee, vice-president; Miss Emma Foushee, secretary; Walter Smith, treasurer.

Mount Zion, Randolph Charge.—As you have not heard from us in a long time, we decided to let you know that we are still living and going along very nicely.

We have recently painted our church on inside and out. There has also been much done on the church grounds, which adds very much to its appearance.

Mr. Suits, our pastor, preached a wonderful sermon on his last appointment before Conference. His subject was "Repeal." We all enjoyed his sermon. I wish everyone believed and would do just like Bro. Suits is going to do on November 7. If they would, we would have a better country to live in. We have greatly enjoyed Bro. Suits' fine sermons during the past year. We are hoping that he will be with us again next year.

We were glad indeed to receive a new member into our church last Sunday, Mrs. C. C. Barker.

We were also glad to have some of our High Point members worship with us. Hope they will be back again soon.

We held our church election last Sunday, and the following officers were elected for the coming year: Trustees, Mr. P. H. Snyder, Mr. W. C. Briles, Mr. L. E. Hoover and Mr. H. W. Ferree; stewards, Miss Ethel Gaddis, Mr. Howard Hoover and Mr. Charlie Hunt; class leader, Mrs. Martha Smith; Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Charlie Hunt.

With these in office we hope to do bigger and better things during the coming year.

First Church, Thomasville.—The usual schedule of services was carried out last Sunday. Rev. Mr. Madison used as his subject for the morning service, "The Call of the Church." For the evening service he chose "The Converted Tax-Collector." Both sermons were very effective. We were glad to have Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Powell worship with us in the evening service.

The members of our Minnis Circle are working hard this week, preparing the thank-offering program which will be given Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

The hour of our evening services has been changed to half an hour earlier. Christian Endeavor begins now at 6:15, preaching at 7:00. Please note this change.

We are glad to note that Little Robert Joe Ragan is recovering nicely and has been brought home from a Charlotte hospital where he underwent a serious operation.

Mrs. J. J. Watts is visiting her sister this week, Mrs. George Harris, near Denton.

Norma Lanier, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Lanier, has been confined to her home for several days.

Whitaker's Church.—I have not reported in some time, but we are still in existence as a church. On the 29th of September some of our number attended our District Rally at Spring Church, just over the line in Virginia. We had an ideal day and a fine meeting. Some of our Branch officers were there and made splendid talks. The reports were very good and encouraging. It makes us who sometimes feel we do so little in our individual groups glad of the fact that we are a part in such a great movement in the work of the Kingdom.

We are expecting to observe Rally Day soon; it is being worked up by the committee.

On the night of the 16th of October we held our fourth quarterly conference in our church, with Enfield and Whitaker's Chapel churches represented, a union conference. Our church had the best representation we have had in a long time, due perhaps to our pastor insisting so much we have a good attendance. Our budgets were not all paid, but we hope they will be by the time he has to make his final report.

Asking God's blessings on the editor, our Annual Conference, and all readers of the Herald, I am, very sincerely,

Gibsonville Church.—The news of our church does not get into print so often, yet there are a number of faithful members who see that the work goes on.

Our revival meeting began the last Sunday in September and continued through until the first Sunday morning in October. Rev. N. G. Bethea did the preaching and Prof. T. E. Stough, of the Gibsonville High School, directed the singing. Because of my school work I was unable to attend all of the services; however, those which I did attend were splendid. I think that Bro. Bethea preached some of as good sermons as I have ever heard. On Thursday night during the meeting, Hon. Oliver M. Stewart, president of the Flying Squadron Foundation, came to us and spoke on the Prohibition question.

The week preceding the meeting a house to house canvass was made by the pastor, giving a personal invitation to the services. On the following Sunday afternoon the members of the Young Ladies' Auxiliary followed up the pastor's visits; they, too, gave invitations to the services. The meetings were well attended throughout the week. We regret that Bro. Bethea became ill, finding it necessary to close the meeting earlier than he intended and without realizing the results which he looked forward to.

On the third Sunday morning in this month Mrs. Grace Harris united with our church on profession of faith. For some time Mrs. Harris has been an active worked in both the Young Ladies' Auxiliary and the Senior Christian Endeavor organizations. We are glad to welcome her into full fellowship with the church.

Miss Nancy Roundtree, who was reclaimed during the meeting, has asked that her letter be transferred to the Gibsonville church.

Mrs. F. R. Owen, who has also been a faithful worker in our church for a long time, has asked that her membership be transferred to the church here. We extend a hearty welcome to the new members and trust that they may remain faithful in His service.

The Woman's Auxiliary held the October meeting at the parsonage. There was fairly good attendance. At this meeting plans were laid for a thank-offering program which will be given some time in November.

Used clothing is being collected and prepared by the missionary societies for the mission field at Pine Ridge, Kentucky.

The Young Ladies' Auxiliary held the October meeting at the home of the president, Miss Lessie Faucett. "Triumphant Christian Living" was the theme for the evening devotional, which was presented by Mrs. W. J. Jennings. Two readings were also given, "Carry On," by Mrs. Walter Petty, and "The Way to Helpfulness," by Miss Douglas Yow. "A Trip Around the World" was completed at this meeting. From the travel receipts the society received the amount of ten dollars.

At the September meeting the young ladies finished a study of the book, "America, As It Looks to Young China." This study was conducted by Bro. Bethea, who occasionally mentioned some actual experiences in the Orient which added a great deal to the interest.

A number of our young people from the Christian Endeavor Society attended the Central District Christian Endeavor Convention which was held on the first Sunday night in October at the Asheboro Street Friends Church in Greensboro. An excellent program was put on. "Worship Through Song," by Rev. E. L. Ballard; "Echoes From the Milwaukee Convention," and committee conferences were interesting features of the program.

A picnic feast was served in the basement of the church, after which there was a short intermission before re-assembling. At this time we renewed old acquaintances and met new friends, which was an enjoyable occasion. Dr. L. E. Smith, of Elon College, gave the principal address of the evening. Those who heard him speak reported a splendid message. I regret that I could not remain for the entire program.

Our Christian Endeavor Society has added a number of new members to their group. A number of them are Intermediate age; this condition seems to suggest another organization. I hope that we may soon have an Intermediate Society in which these young folk will feel more free to take part, and to speak in the prayer meeting program.

There has been considerable increase in church attendance during the last year. Attendance has been decidedly noticeable in the night congregations. We have seen them grow from about one dozen to approximately one hundred or more.

During my high school career I have heard students say, upon learning that a visitor was to appear on the program: "I wish we didn't have to go to chapel this morning. I won't get anything out of the talk, anyhow," but when these same students learned that Bro. Bethea was the visitor I have known some of them to change their attitude toward the chapel program. We were glad to have him for our worship program.

After having Bro. Bethea at the College (Elon) for our chapel last year, I remember heaing several of the students say that they enjoyed the short sermon.

Since Rev. and Mrs. Bethea came to this work they have been welcomed in the young people's work of our church. From time to time they have assured us of their interest by attending the programs and taking a part.

We hope that they will see fit to remain with us for another year's work.

Mrs. W. J. Jennings, who underwent a tonsorial operation recently, was able to be at church last Sunday.

We regret to report that Mrs. I. N. Woodard remains ill at her home here.

Bro. Bethea is able to be out again after being confined to his bed for a few days with la grippe.

New Hope.—I sent in a report two weeks ago, and you did not publish it. I don't know why you didn't. I try to do the best I can. The pastor has been getting on me about the reports and said he would love to see our report. I know I don't do my duty in reporting the news, but when I do send in one if it is at all fit I would be glad for you to print it. Several people have told me they enjoyed reading New Hope news..

I made a mistake in telling before Dr. Andrews did not spend Sunday week ago, but I misunderstood and thought he was to speak then. We had with us Sunday Dr. Andrews and his sermon was well enjoyed. We were glad to have him with us and we would be thankful to have lots of men today of his kind. I feel that we need more of his kind today than ever before. Dr. Andrews subject was "Indifference." He told how people are indifferent today. We also had with us our pastor, Bro. Henderson. We are always glad to have our pastor with us. We are all learning to love him more each time he is with us. I believe Rev. Henderson preached one of the best sermons the third Sunday morning than ever before. He was well filled with the Holy Spirit. We are hoping to have him with us another year.

We hardly ever send in reports, but our church is still alive and we have good Sunday school work every Sunday and prayer meeting each Sunday night. We have several old souls about 60 to 80 who attend our prayer meetings besides our young people. We have 15 or more who lead in prayer. We hope people will be drawn nearer to the Lord.

The second Sunday in this month Mr. Audrey Broom was with us to explain the 18th amendment, that we may vote to keep it.

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

THE COMMITTEE.

Wanted

The printers of The Herald can use several pounds of soft cotton rags. Must be clean and of good size, as small scraps are not acceptable. Bring us your surplus rags and convert them into cash. McCulloch & Swain, Asheboro Street at Trinity, Greensboro, N. C.

Methodist Protestant Herald

J. F. McCULLOCH, Editor and Publisher

Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

Price—$2.00 a year, payable in advance.

Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. However, subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers to be continued and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before.

We cannot often supply back numbers.

We acknowledge receipt of money on subscription account by changing the date on the label. If this is not changed within two weeks after your money is forwarded, write us.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Greensboro, N. C.

MAGAZINES

Dear Readers:

No doubt everyone who takes the M. P. Herald read Dr. Dixon's report last week, and what he said about sending your magazine subscriptions to me. Let's make a good thing of this for our Children's Home. I have been working for one of our best magazine companies for several years and can give you the best prices on all American and foreign periodicals. If you do not have your pricelist, a post card stating your wants will bring one to you promptly.

Your orders will go in promptly and the commissions will be turned in to Dr. Dixon.

Please state whether your subscriptions are new or renewals.

MRS. MABEL WILLIAMS RUSSELL.

Our Great Tragedy

Editor, The Methodist Protestant Herald:

There is a dangerous, damaging, deadly spirit of mob psychology abroad in our state. It says to North Carolinians, "Because everybody (?) and every state is voting for repeal, let us do it." But the mob is so often wrong. And while votes of those who went to the polls have been majoring for repeal, not everybody thinks thus. In no state yet has a majority of voters gone to the polls.

Reading wet daily newspapers from many big cities, and, incidentally, from some small ones, the impression is given that all writers are in the repeal camp. Not so with the writing profession by any means. Let them speak for themselves in two instances.

First—In his book, "Money Writes," the brilliant Upton Sinclair has this virile word: "All my life I have lived in the presence of fine and beautiful men going to their death because of alcohol. I call it the greatest trap that life has set for the feet of genius; and I record my opinion that the Prohibition amendment is the greatest step in progress taken by America since the freeing of the slaves."

None but those whose eyes are closed by ignorance or prejudice can fail to see some fine High Point men slowly or swiftly committing alcoholic suicide. My memory is fresh with the names of some who rather recently have been buried by drink.

Second—The veteran newspaper man, Mr. Marlen Pew, as editor of the news profession's organ, The Editor and Publisher, and whose high standing made his word strong, thus penned his conviction: "Whatever has been the contributing cause, such as disappointment, ill-fated love, inherited appetite, environment, booze was the actual instrument that struck down my friend. Booze has ruined dozens of the best men I have ever known. . . . .

"However, I hope that my hand will be palsied if I ever write a word favorable to alcohol as a desirable beverage. While men can earn a living cleaning sewers I shall not be found taking a dollar as the author of traitorous ridicule of prohibition, encouraging contempt of law and covering all the rotten graft that now surrounds bootlegging and keeps the cork out of the vicious bottle. I shall write no ponderous academic essays about 'personal liberty' (to commit suicide and drag all your loved ones into the gutter behind you), nor do anything to bring back a legalized liquor traffic, with all its familiar corruption of government and spread of poverty, disease, neglect, crime, insanity, confusion and failure."

Here is challenging conviction. These lines represent an ideal, which is a standard plus an emotion. They are submitted with the hope of publication that they may help us all to think clearly before we vote with the mob on November seventh.

Change Pastors Gracefully

It becomes necessary sometimes to change pastors. No pastor and no church would like to think of the pastoral relation as an interminable one. Pastors are perhaps moved more frequently than is necessary, but still there are occasions demanding a change in the interest of the service. Both preachers and people discover in each other serious limitations. None can do all things equally well. Preachers are specialists in doctrine and in training. There are different classes of church workers as there are different classes of builders. Some build in wood, some in brick, and some in metal. Each class comes and does its work and moves on to serve in another place. Going is coupled with preaching. This is necessary that every creature may hear the Gospel preached. No preacher should consider it an unusual hardship to have to move on to his next appointment. No church should feel itself aggrieved when it must lose its pastor to his next charge. The great affairs of the Church of Christ cannot be administered solely with a view to one pastor or one church. The church is all one body. A pastor is the servant of all according to call and opportunity. You would minify your pastor and his office if you insisted that he stay at one place all his days. But the matter has two extremes. You may hustle your pastor off too soon—before the work demands it, either the work from which he goes or that to which he goes. Thus two pastors and two pastoral charges are relatively injured.

But assuming that the time has come when a pastoral change ought to be made, a very important question is how to make it.

The change should be made in kindness on the part of both pastor and people. It is no occasion for bitter or cutting speeches. The pastor is still a man of God and is still your friend. Don't make of him an enemy or an alien. Feel grateful to him for the years of service he has given you. Look forward with hope to the time when he may properly become your pastor again. Regret the necessity of separation of friends, but accept it in the order of providence and be loyal to the plans of God. Let both parties be faithful to God and all will work out well. Be frank and honest with each other and retain each other's respect and love through all the years.

MEETING OF THE NORTH CAROLINA ANNUAL CONFERENCE

It seems hardly necessary to make any formal official announcement of the meeting of the Annual Conference. But, just as a matter of form, this is to notify all ministers, preachers and delegates that the 106th session of the North Carolina Annual Conference will convene in the Community church, Thomasville, beginning on Wednesday, November 15, 1933, at 10:00 A. M.

There has not been in our generation a more critical period for the church than the one through which we are passing. No man knows the way out. We ought, therefore, to come in the spirit of prayer, seeking for Divine guidance in our affairs. And we urge upon our people throughout the Conference the same spirit of prayer, that the will of God may be done.

Rev. C. W. Bates, D.D., Secretary.

CHRISTIANITY AND NON-CHRISTIAN RELIGIONS

The world grows smaller. Widely separated peoples become acquainted. Commerce, the printing press, travel, education, the World War, the depression—these are some of the things contributing to mutual acquaintance, understanding, and sympathy.

Such contacts tend to modify ideas and ways of living. European and American foods, styles of dress, text-books, tools, amusements, vices, go to Africa and Asia in exchange for some of their desirable—or undesirable—products.

What is to become of the religious differences between the Occident and the Orient? Are we to give them some of our rligion, and receive from them some of theirs—making a more or less even exchange? Or are we both to yield our faiths—on the theory that religion separates and antagonizes peoples—and build a world society without religion? Or what shall we do?

The old attitude of Christianity and its missionaries has been that of opposition to non-Christian religions. They were to be destroyed and the people converted to Christianity. Dr. Robert E. Speer, long-time Secretary of the Board of Missions of the Presbyterian Church, has said that there are no religions, that Christianity is the only religion. But we have the Bible sayings: "In every nation, he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted of Him," and "Other sheep have I that are not of this fold." He would be a strange God indeed who had no relations with the unnumbered millions who have never heard of Jesus.

Jesus said in the course of His Sermon on the Mount—in which He states some of the fundamental things concerning His Kingdom: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets: I came not to destroy, but to fulfill." He fulfills—fills out, completes—the law and the prophets as the great oak fulfills the acorn; as the blossom fulfills the bud, and the ripened peach fulfills the blossom.

It is in much the same way that Christianity fulfills other religions. Jesus and His followers are to breathe the warm spirit of the gospel of the grace of God upon the undeveloped spirits of the folowers of Confucius and Gautauma and cause them to blossom out into higher and finer religious life.

An outstadning article of the Christian faith is this: God is our Father. Dr. J. W. Buckham writes: "The dawn of the belief in a Divine Father was world-wide before Christianity. His face appears in crude, anthropomorphic delineaments among the myths of savage races, and shines dimly, but with increasing clearness, through the loftier teachings of the great religious faiths. It could hardly be otherwise if religion is contact with a spiritual Reality which is personal. If we failed to find the conception of a Divine Father, however indistinct, appearing and reappearing throughout the religious experience of the race, we should be led to question its legitimacy in Christianity. And yet, the fact remains that th Fatherhood of God is the distinctive teaching of but one religion. Nowhere, save in Christianity, does it stand out with clear, calm, unfaltering assurance."

Now, if at the beginning of the modern missionary movement—say 125 years ago—our representatives in China and India and Turkey had said to the people whom they sought to evangelize: "We are glad that you believe in God, the Supreme Being, and that you sometimes think of Him as a Father. We believe in God, too, and have come to talk with you about His Fatherhood. We like to think of Him in that way because that is the way in which Jesus spoke of Him. Jesus taught His disciples much about the Heavenly Father—the Father of all mankind." Isn't that a good method of approach? Wouldn't that open the way for friendly and helpful teaching?

It is in some such way that the tactful minister begins the pastorate of a church to which he has been called. The community contains quite a mixture of people. Some are on a high spiritual level, others are on a low level, and most of them realize that they are not living as they should, and all of them have aspirations for better things. Does the new minister begin by vigorously attacking and condemning their personal and family and community wrong-doings? Or does he seek a common ground of goodness, of faith, of concern for the well-being of families and lonely individuals, and does he show an interest in the welfare of the community? Which of these attitudes is most Christian, and which is most likely to bring desirable results?

The fact that the so-called Christian nations of Europe and America have been un-Christian in their treatment of the Orient has long been a scandal, and stands in the way of a better religious understanding. Dr. Buckham well asks: "Are these, then, the fruits of Christian civilization: race discrimination, commercial greed, secret diplomacy, armaments, patronage, hypocrisies? If so, the case is indeed a forlorn one. But these are not the products of Christianity but of unsubdued human nature betraying Christianity. The sacrificial ministries of Christian teachers and pastors and physicians—schools and hospitals and services to the destitute and suffering—these are the true and conclusive witnesses that Christians have had something at least of the spirit of Christ in their relations with other peoples. If the peoples of the Orient could trace the gifts for missions to the homes from which they come and know something of the sacrifice and prayer and good will which prompt them, they would see somethting of the true soul of Christianity.''

Christian missionaries are embarrassed because business men, traveler, exploiters, and representative of European and American armies and navies so badly misrepresent, in their personal habits and in the dealings, the religion of Jesus. Non-Christian peoples should not be too much disturbed by this. Their own religionists do not always manifest in their lives and dealings the finest spirit of Confucius and Gautauma. But they do have—as does Christianity—some outstanding individuals of whom they have no occasion to be ashamed. Confucianism has not made every Chinese into a high-grade Confucianist, nor every Hindu into a thoroughly good Buddhist, any more than Christionity has made every American into a consistent Christian.

The claim is made by the advocates of the religion of Jesus that it has a vitality such as no other religion can claim. That it has an inner power that destines it to triumph over every other faith and to bring the world into subjection to it. Why, then, has it not made Europe and America Christian? Dr. Buckham humbly and clearly answers that question: ''Human nature is torpid, apathetic, reluctant to follow the best light that is given to it, slow to fulfill the ideals that it has accepted. That is why Europe and America are not more Christian. The fault, dear Orient, is not in our religion, but in ourselves, that we are still but selfish, half-Christian underlings.''

''We ought to make America Christian before sending missionaries to India and China,'' is a familiar cry. ''We should see to it that the broken fragments of the church of Christ in America are brought together in a united body before contemplating closer relations with the faiths of the Orient.'' This also is becoming a popular proposition. But we should not be too much abashed by it. It is the policy of competent educators to carry on instruction in several branches of learning at the same time—even with very young children. So do we in spreading the gospel and developing the Christian spirit. David Livingstone left Scotland and gave his life toward healing the ''open sore'' of Africa while his native land was still imperfectly Christian—thus adding to the zeal of the church in the home-land. To our missionaries serving in the foreign field has been given the honor of contributing largely to the feeling for church union—not only in their own fields, but in the home-land as well. I quote again in conclusion from Dr. Buckham:

''It is coming to be realized as never before that Christian unity is not a matter of creed or form of worship. Those who imagine that there can be no United Church until all think alike and worship alike are making a fatuous mistake. Christianity has proved in the past, more than once, the power of conscience to break away from organized corruption. The time has come for it to show the power of a great spiritual passion to weld divergent factions into one.

''There is but one thing the Church can do and be true to herself, and that is—not to call all other religions to her banner, but—to do her utmost to give to them Christ, confident that if he be lifted up He will draw all men unto Himself. This is not a relationship of lordship but of service, not a claim of superiority but a fulfillment of duty, not a summons to the adherents of other faiths to give up anything that is really true and good, but a challenge to find the truth, in fuller meaning and worth, in Him in Whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.''

Luther K. Long.

THE LITTLE SANCTUARY

Most of the readers recall that department of mathematics known as cancellation. Frequently, most baffling problems can be cancelled to zero over zero; or what the mathematicians call the ghost of departing quantities. A more troublesome problem, nowadays, is how to keep the high cost of living from over-cancelling the income. The writer's purpose is not to discuss problems in either mathematics or economics, but the law of cancellation that operates in the mental, moral, and spiritual realms. Most of us know too well how mistrust can cancel the peace of mind, heart and soul.

Some may fail to see the relation between the title and the law of cancellation. The title is borrowed from the imagery of Ezekiel, and the law is illustrated in the conduct of the Children of Israel in Babylon. The sight of God's chosen people, with their harps on the willows and refusing to sing the Lord's song in a strange land, would cause the saints to mourn and the angels to weep. To change from freedom to slavery, from Jerusalem to heathen Babylon, was chilling and depressing . What they had given up, and what they had come to, at first caused them to weep and to hang their harps upon the willows. Many myriads over, in all ages, have done the very same thing when forced to change sanctuaries.

Young people leaving Christian homes, and the old home church, to make their way in the wide, cold, unfriendly world, often feel as the Children of Israel must have felt when they sat down by the rivers of Babylon and wept. The writer is inclined to take a charitable view of Israel's conduct there in Babylon. He, too, left his Mount Moriah. It was there at old Mount Moriah church on Cleveland circuit that I was converted, joined the only local church that I ever joined, and felt the call to the Gospel ministry, and went out to proclaim salvation through Immanuel's name. It was hard to realize that God was just as real in other places as in the church of my childhood. God said to Israel, ''Although I have cast you far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered you among the countries; yet I will be to you a little sanctuary in the countries where you shall come.'' It was hard for them to learn that God made the big sanctuary on Mount Moriah, and the little sanctuary in Babylon. The true worshiper worships in spirit and in truth, rather than in certain places and in certain buildings.

The late Dr. George Clarke Peck wrote of his mother's death about as follows: the morning afterwards my father, who was a Methodist preacher, called the remaining members of the family into the old, familiar dining-room. It had the same pictures on the walls, the same furniture, the same table linen, the same silver and china ware. My father bowed his head to return thanks, as was his custom to do. He broke down, bowed his forehead in his hands and remained silent. Then it dawned on me that mother made the home. It would never be the same, now that she was gone. Yes, God Almighty, our Heavenly Father, makes the large sanctuary on Mount Moriah and the little sanctuary in Babylon.

Christians may be cast among the heathen and scattered arong the countries of the world; but they are assured that they cannot be banished beyond the Heavenly Father's love and care. Jesus is speaking to all troubled hearts, broken over separations that appear disastrous, "I will not leave you desolate (orphans), I will come to you." It was a great experience when Jacob discovered that the God of his fathers was in Bethel. Whether we spend all our days in the sanctuary of our childhood, or take our courses to the uttermost parts of the earth, God promises never to leave, nor forsake us. "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

W. A. LEDFORD.

THE EVIL OF THE DAY

From the pen of Rev. R. I. Farmer, pastor of First M. P. church, High Point, recently came this article which was published locally:

Editor, The Enterprise:

The right is right and the wrong is wrong. No compromise can ever make "the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots." Recently a friend said to me, "You might as well as reconciled to the inevitable—liquor is coming back." My reply was, "Reconciled? Never! I may have to accept the inevitable but I do not have to be reconciled to it."

Some items keep coming to my attention which never appear in the general press. They might help the public to know that the paramount issue before North Carolina now is not one-sided. The only place where I have seen an item carried which recently appeared in the Christian Science Monitor was in The Hell Box. It referred to the action of N. W. Ayer & Son, a nationally known advertising agency of Philadelphia, which cancelled a profitable advertising account with the Canada Dry Company.

Mr. Wilfred W. Fry, president of the advertising company, is quoted as saying: "The return of liquor will divert an important share of America's mass purchasing power from essential commodities. In case of a client who manufactures or distributes alcoholic beverages, this would create for us an impossible situation, since we would then be in the position of making alcohol attractive to the youth of this country.

"Furthermore, we do not wish to classify our clients with the liquor business. This has been our policy since the last century. We believe in it so completely that we have cancelled a ten-year-old agreement with Canada Dry Ginger Ale following that client's decision to engage in the manufacture and distribution of beer and whiskey after repeal.

"We regret the condition which necessitated this step, but on a strictly business basis we are certain that we are right. . . . The moral questions in repeal can be left out entirely but from a business standpoint, we still cannot see a very happy result in the return of liquor. The liquor business has not changed. When the thirty-sixth state has been lined up, it will be run by the same old crowd in the same old way."

And that from business men! And, Mr. Editor, did you see the item in a recent copy of the Literary Digest entitled "Ready Abroad for Repeal"? I quote: "England's ten-million-pound whiskey combine, the Distiller's Company, Ltd., is booking enormous American orders, and the other day an initial contract for 100,000 cases was signed, with arrangements for shipping 50,000 subsequent cases each month.

"The Laborite London Daily Herald tells us that more than 120,000,000 gallons of whiskey are stored in Scotland, and it is estimated that the bulk of this will be sent to the United States. France, this newspaper adds, has been preparing for 'the great wine rush.' Thousands of liters of different vintages are already held at disposal of American firms." Personally I think that such an item may open the eyes of some of my too-liberal friends who believe the old bunk that there will be less liquor sold than under prohibition.

And, Mr. Editor, your own paper carried this paid "ad": "Wanted—Moulder man for furniture factory. Must be steady AND SOBER." The capitals are mine for the purpose of emphasizing the inconsistency of legalizing alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes—for making men drunk and then demanding sober workingmen. Without consistency where is there hope of moral strength? North Carolina must vote, "No repeal."

R. I. FARMER.

WHEN SHOULD THE CHILD BE PUNISHED?

"Very well, young man," says Mother to her small son who has exhibited a fine sample of impudence, or disobedience, or bad conduct towards another child, "You just wait until Father comes home; he will attend to you."

Near the close of the day, Father returns. He notices the domestic atmosphere is bad. One child is shy, does not run to him with endearing welcome. At the evening meal, Mother tells Father what has happened. He is tired and hungry, and does not feel like doing anything about it at the time. So he says to the boy, "Wait until after supper, I will see about you then."

Is the supper a joyous meal? Are funny stories and incidents of the day related? Do members of the family laugh into each others eyes? Harold eats but little, he swallows his food with no adequate flow of saliva, and digestion makes little if any start. The interview in the wood-shed is not pleasant for any member of the family, and bed-time comes without depression's dark shadow having been lifted. Sometimes there is a hang-over of clouds left the next morning.

Wouldn't it have been much better had Mother administered at once the measure of punishment that seemed fair—though her hand is not as heavy as Father's? There should be no threat that the account would be further settled after Father came home—even though she felt that what she had administered was not sufficient. Mother might well tell Father what had occurred, and they might well consider whether the matter should be further taken up with the boy. It might appear best to have Father discuss the whole situation with Harold later. In quietness—as man to man—the relation of the boy to himself, his own responsibility for his conduct, and suggestions as to how he might gain necessary self-control and self-discipline, might be entered into.

As a rule, all punishment and arguments concerning penalties for misdemeanors should be banished from the dining-table. Meal time should be good cheer time. This is good for the family's social development, and as a preparation for the larger outside social contacts and enjoyments. Furthermore, such good times at table are absolutely essential for digestion and health in the family.

Dr. Cannon of Yale some years ago conducted experiments on animals to determine the effect of mental influences on digestion. He gave to his pet cat some barium and then gently placed her on a glass platform and with the X-ray examined the movements of her stomach. The record says: "He found so long as he stroked the cat the right way and was friendly the cat purred and the stomach functioned normally. The peristaltic waves passed over it in a rhythmical and normal manner, manipulating the food and mixing the gastric juice with it. When he pinched the cat's tail, or irritated the cat by stroking the hair in the opposite direction, the peristalsis ceased. The stomach went on a strike. When he again stroked the hair in the right way, the cat began to purr again and the peristaltic waves were observed. Digestion began again."

Cats and children—and older people as well—are much alike in their nervous and digestive reactions to kindness and irritation. Fathers and mothers should learn to keep matters of a depressing nature away from the dining-table. Avoid, if possible, the necessity of sending a child from the table to finish its food in the kitchen. Develop a family spirit in the direction of cheerful meal times. Usually punish the child at the time of its disobedience—and, on occasion, do it thoroughly enough that the child knows he is punished and gets a change of mind. Use plenty of time and patience in conferring with the child. Help him to understand the situation. He may not understand the importance of this and that—teach him. Govern yourself rationally. He will gradually grow into that sort of government for himself. When he gets the right mind and spirit in him it will be pleasanter and easier for the entire family. L. K. L.

A VOICE FROM THE GRAVE

Years ago I had the pleasure of hearing John G. Woolley, one of the greatest and most eloquent prohibitionists this country has ever produced, deliver one of his impassioned pleas for the abolition of the legalized liquor traffic before the Pittsburgh conference in session in the People's Temple in Fairmount, W. Va. John G. Woolley has been dead many years, but the echoes of that eloquent, fiery address ring through my mind to this day. Listen to him as he speaks in an endeavor to arouse an indifferent people to save themselves and their country from the toils of the legalized saloon:

"You say you are not concerned about the matter. Well, it concerns you whether you believe it or not. It concerns society at large; for like the fox beneath the Spartan soldier's doublet, it tears her very heart out as she carries it.

"It concerns government; for it fouls the wells from which it draws its very breath of life, denies its title to itself, violates the dead, plunders the living and breeds prenatal paupers and criminals to perplex and defeat it.

"It concerns capital, for it is the mainspring of arson, embezzlement, mobs, riots, murder.

"It concerns labor, for it saps its strength, its honor and its hope until industry becomes a galley slave, willing to take its pay in blows and sweaty rags and squalor.

"It concerns the church, for by so much as it enjoys she suffers loss.

"It concerns the school, for by so much as it outruns it in the race for power, it converts culture into crime, and makes the educated the dangeous classes to the common weal.

"It concerns every home, for it is a denial of its every sanctity and an insult to its best ideals.

"It concerns love:—and how hany a love story is going through its first chapter in this convention—it leeches its very blood and leaves behind the ashes of inexpressible desolation.

"It concerns the land not only, but the sea as well, for every stately ocean liner that clears our ports and sails down over the edge of the world with the 'union' at her flagstaff, carries on board a bar of uncharted shoals and sunken reefs for some of the voyagers, and many a gallant life goes down at sea inside the ship and while the watch is calling at every bell, 'All's well! all's well! all's well!'

"The liquor traffic is not economics, but treason, overt, insolent, bloody as the shambles, and black as the lees of midnight. I hate it, and when I think of it, all the voices of memory, the words of the Book, and every fibre of my soul and body becomes a seething, unreasoning mob, and cry, 'Kill it!' I would not ask you to accept this red hot lashing fever of my blood as any argument. I have eaten hell-ashes until my mind is alkaline and cuts up the unctuous lubricants of calm and decorous debate, and spoils the play of thought. Perhaps there may be something to be said in favor of the drink, for all my hatred of it, but I do not know what it is."

We do well to heed the voice of this valiant saint of God, issuing from across the years, at this time when the damnable liquor business is rising up out of the hell to which it had been consigned to spew misery, wretchedness, woe and death over this fair land of ours. We do well to cry out: It shall not come back with our consent.

Geo. R. Brown.

MERCY

Brother Bethea's recent article on "Mercy" was timely and to the point. Preachers, pastors, and delegates should be very careful with their statements about others at our Annual Conferences. Sometimes words spoken carelessly or unthoughtedly wound the feelings of others and hurt them in their work. Jesus said, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," and "Judge not that ye be not judged." May our next Annual Conference be characterized by a spirit of love and brotherly kindness.

A Pastor.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Conference Calendar

November 15, Annual Conference meets at Thomasville Community church.

It Is Now Time for Us to Act

While the 18th Amendment will unquestionably be repealed in a very short time, in so far as the votes of the states go, our duty as believers in temperance and as enemies of the great liquor traffic to vote against the repeal on the seventh of November was never plainer nor more imperative. As citizens of North Carolina we have a heritage secured in the Convention of 1908 which we cannot afford to lose. With the Turlington Act we can still have prohibition by state enactment and thus keep the corrupting liquor dealer from flaunting his wares publicly in our state. We drove him to cover before we had national prohibition, and he knows it; we can keep him there if you and all our citizens who believe in temperance and clean politics will cast your ballots against repeal on next Tuesday. No loyal member of our church in the state should remain from the polls or refrain from voting, if he can vote, on that day. Let's show our colors on that day and make these vacillating politicians who have brought all this trouble and expense upon us quake in their fear of losing their jobs. Let only those who want to be controlled by the conscienceless, bloated corrupter of youth vote "wet."

Spare No Effort

Make every possible effort to carry to Conference November 15th the best possible report you can make. While your best may not compare favorably with the best you did a few years ago, or even last year, you should not despise it, if you have really put into it your best thought, prayer and effort.

I have been greatly encouraged by the response received during the past few weeks when appealing to our people to pay their church budgets in full. I have come away convinced that we still have many loyal members in our church. Those who love her and are ready to make every possible sacrifice to carry on the program of the church. It is no time for discouragement, certainly none for despair. But it is the time when we should make full proof of our faith; when we should reveal the highest courage, that by both word and deed we may prove to the idle, thoughtless man of the world that our loyalty and faithfulness shall not be gauged by the indifferent members of our church.

No church can send up a report worthy of its best members, and no pastor should be satisfied with the record of his labors for the year, who has not put into it the most efficient, tireless and sacrificial labors. I forecast failure only for those who have regarded their vocation as an avocation, and their calling as from men instead of from God. There may still be some among us who, because of fear, hid away their little talent in the garments of indolence; but most of those who shall fail will do it because they were never seriously enough engaged in their work as a divine task.

October 17—West Thomasville, Rev. H. W. Bell, Pastor

We were with this working group in their fourth quarterly conference. There was a flood of reports from classes, committees, etc., which reveal to some extent their activity. The congregation has greatly increased under Pastor Bell's ministry. Although he has worked in a furniture plant and thereby made most of his support, he has rendered his church splendid service.

October 18—Guilford Charge, Rev. D. D. Broome, Pastor

This was a fourth quarterly conference session held at Hickory Grove. The attendance was large and interest was good. The financial reports were not flattering, but there was an earnestness in the minds of the members that made one feel that much more would yet be accomplished before the year was closed. Brother Broome has done good work, although the salary has been inadequate; so much so that he has found part-time employment in another field. Salary for next year was fixed at same for present.

October 20—Kannapolis, Rev. C. P. Morris, Pastor

This was also a well attended quarterly conference; and to say that the people are enthusiastic about their work and their pastor expresses it mildly. The church had paid the A. C. B., and while not out with pastor's salary expressed a determination to pay out before Conference, and also to pay up the G. C. B. Salary fixed for coming year was $800.00. Want pastor back.

October 21-22—Mecklenburg Circuit, Rev. M. C. Henderson, Pastor

Our first appointment on this work was at Antioch in fourth quarterly conference. There was a large attendance. All churches were fully represented. The business was rapidly transacted and there was an unanimous request for the return of the present pastor. Finances were behind with some of the churches, but New Hope reported as being out on all claims, and Antioch out on A. C. B.

Sunday appointments ran as follows: New Hope, Beulah and Stallings. The people were out in their usual size congregations and gave good attention to the messages. Stallings finished paying its A. C. B. assessment.

Personal Word

We regret that here our work has been seriously interrupted. Bitten by a most poisonous spider, I have not yet sufficiently recovered to renew my schedule of appointments. In fact, this letter has required many attempts and rests. While I have not yet remained up all day, I do hope to be ready for duty next week.

R. M. ANDREWS.

CHRISTIAN ARITHMETIC

Some one has compiled the following rules for Christian arithmetic from God's Word. The best part of these rules is that we can begin with them when very young and will never grow too old for them:

Notation—"I will put My Law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts."

Numeration—"So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."

Addition—"Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience Godliness; and to Godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity."

Subtraction—"Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light."

Multiplication—"Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied."

Division—"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the Law of Christ."—Publisher Unknown.

POVERTY AND SMILES

Speaking at a dinner of the United States Military Telegraph Corps of the Civil War a while before his death, Mr. Carnegie opened his heart and said certain things that ought to be read and pondered today. Every industrious and ambitous boy ought to be made to realize that "the blessing lies in the struggle, not the prize." Mr. Carnegie said to his old friends:

"Comrades, I was born in poverty, and would not exchange its sacred memoriees with the richest millionaire's son who ever breathed. What does he know about mother or father? These are mere names to him. Give me the life of the boy whose mother is nurse, seamstress, washerwoman, cook, teacher, angel, and saint, all in one, and whose father is guide, exemplar, and friend. No servants to come between. These are the boys who are born to the best fortune. Some men think that poverty is a dreadful burden, and that wealth leads to happiness. What do they know about it? They know only one side; they imagine the other. I have lived both, and I know there is very little in wealth that can add to human happiness beyond the small comforts of life. Millionaires who laugh are rare. My expreience is that wealth is apt to take the smiles away."—The Watchman-Examiner.

CHRISTIAN BROTHERHOOD

In Christ there is no East nor West,
  In Him no South nor North,
But one great fellowship of love
  Throughout the whole wide earth.

In Him shall true hearts everywhere
  Their true communion find,
His service is the golden cord
  Close-binding all mankind.

Join hands then, Brothers of the Faith,
  Whate'er your race may be;
Who serves my Father as a son
  Is surely kin to me.

In Christ now meet both East and West
  In Him meet South and North,
All Christly souls are one in Him,
  Throughout the whole wide earth.

—If the problem be one of fear, indecision, or lack,—indeed, whatever it be—we can turn our thoughts to God knowing that if we are willing to put aside all self-will and human planning, and trust Him to guide us and care for us, He will show us how to go and, in fact, will lead the way. We can also know that we do not have to feel any burden in making a decision if we realize that we are governed by the one divine Mind, God, and are faithfully following His directing. By thus clearing our consciousness of human will and all desire to outline human ways and means, we are able to reflect the divine Mind and allow it to operate in our lives. Such a mental attitude brings with it confidence, joy, and peace. "God gives you His spiritual ideas, and in turn, they give you daily supplies. Never ask for tomorrow."—Selected.

BETTY JO OF THE MOUNTAINS

The Real Story of a Real Girl

Betty Joe started to school when she was only three years old, but before that she knew how to make all the letters of the alphabet on her hands. Her father had taught her while she played in the one room of the little log cabin home. In this room Betty Jo and her father and mother ate and slept, worked and played, and visited with their friends. The room held a big chair and a small one, a table, a trunk, a stove and a wash-table.

This one-room home did not seem strange to Betty Jo, for it was the usual home of the people living in that part of the Kentucky mountains. The cabin stood at the head of the creek, which was the only road through the big hills around the little settlement. In summer the creek was dry and any one could walk or ride a mule along the road, but in winter when heavy rains came and the snows melted and rushed down the mountains, the creek was deep and dangerous. Sometimes it was several days before any one could get through the swirling waters to his neighbors or to the world outside.

The schoolhouse, which had only one bare dark room, stood right in front of Betty Jo's home, and the teacher was her own father. Betty Jo was never kept away from school, though some of the mountain children had to work in the cornfields or in the vegetable patch. Sometimes they had to stay at home to take care of a baby brother or sister while their mother hoed in the fields. Because Betty Jo liked to read and go to school and draw better than to romp and play, she was called a ''quare youngen.''

''That gal would cry all day if her pappy kept her from school,'' said a neighbor.

''They do say that she takes to her books like a squirrel to nuts,'' said another mountaineer.

As Betty grew older her home grew bigger. Two front rooms were added to the cabin and the back porch was made into a kitchen. It seemed a large house to the mountaineers, and people from up and down the creek came to look at the cabin that had four rooms.

One day a team of oxen came plodding into the hills, over a rough road ten miles long right up through the creek. They stopped at Betty Jo's house. On the big sled behind the oxen was an organ. It was the first organ ever seen in that region, and the whole settlement was excited over it. Betty Jo's father taught her all the pieces he knew, and soon she was able to play all the songs she heard. The neighbors from miles around came to see the organ and hear it played.

The oxen had also brought a new post office. Betty Jo's father put it behind the chimney in one of the rooms, for he was going to be postmaster as well as teacher and organist. The new post office was very important to the people around the creek, for the only other one was a long trip away and in stormy weather no one could get any mail. Now a mule would bring in the mail and take it out as often as three times a week.

When Betty Jo was a little older two more rooms were added to the cabin.

''Her pappy is crazy,'' said one of her neighbors when he heard the news. ''What does he want with so many rooms?''

''He'll be blowed up with that new gas in his kitchen if he don't watch out,'' said another neighbor.

'' Afire in the fireplace gives good enough heat and light,'' said the first man. ''No use fussing with dangerous things like gas.''

When the new rooms were finished, the house was painted. This caused some more talk, for the mountaineers seldom painted anything. Then the gas was turned on and its bright and cheerful light amazed the neighbors.

''Betty Jo's house sure be purty and mighty handy,'' they all agreed.

''There be running water coming right into her kitchen,'' one friend told another some time later. ''It's piped down from the spring above the house and Betty Jo she don't have to bring in pails of water because the water is right there.''

When Betty Jo finished high school she went to college. The neighbors shook their heads at such foolishness. The ''quare youngen'' and her father were still doing queer things. He had planted real grass and rose-bushes around the house. There was a pretty path from the front door down to the gate. The house had new porches on both front and back. The mountain people looked at their own uncomfortable and crowded cabins, at their bare, dirty yards, and they began to think. Then they began to do some of the things that made Betty Jo's house so prety and convenient. Some of them went so far as to have gas put into their houses, and no one was ''blowed up.''

One day Betty Jo came home from college. Then the schoolhouse began to grow. It grew a whole new row of windows and another room. It had better desks and good bookcases and real books to put on the shelves. Betty Jo and her father kept thinking of things to make the schoolhouse brighter and more attractive for the boys and girls who came walking down the creek road or running down the hills every day to school.

Betty Jo became a school teacher. She taught 50 boys and girls in one room and her father taught 60 boys and girls in the other room. As Betty Jo looked at all the wiggling, eager little boys and girls in her big room she thought back to the time when she had gone to this same school. Sometimes she had been the only pupil there when the weather was bad or the other children had to work in the fields. And now there were more than a hundred children in the little schoolhouse, and there were books in the rooms, green grass and bushes in the yard, and flowers in the gardens. Betty Jo knew she had found her work in the world. She was going to help other boys and girls of the mountains to have pretty, comfortable homes, sunny, clean schoolhouses, and a better chance for an education. —Lydia Lion Roberts, in Zion's Herald.

There are two more donations ready as soon as we can send for them, and others getting ready.

Special for Boys' Clothing

The above report shows $15.00 this week on the special for boys' clothing; $7.50 per boy takes care of the needed clothing and shoes for our boys this fall. What man, or men's class, will supply one boy? We thank you for an early response.

Your Magazine Subscriptions

In last week's Herald Mrs. Mabel Williams Russell, 804 Lindsay street, High Point, N. C., says: "I have been working for one of the best magazine companies for several years and can give you the best prices on all American and foreign periodicals." Your magazines will cost you no more to order through Mrs. Russell than they will to order direct, or to pay some agent at your door. Order through Mrs. Russell and a part of the price of each magazine will come to your Children's Home.

Conference Meets Soon

Many of our churches and Sunday schools make their monthly offerings to the Home on the first and second Sundays in each month. Conference meets Wednesday, November 15. Please get your offerings to us promptly. And please keep the coupons coming. They help. Thank you and God bless you.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

HAIL THE HONEST BANKER!

To an extent which would have been unimaginable and unbelievable a few years ago, banking in the United States has sunk today to a point where it is functioning in a way that is not satisfactory to anybody. Repeated efforts have been made to get banking back on its feet, but these efforts have met with only partial success as yet.

We have come to talk in big figures with such nonchalance that it hardly raises an eyebrow when we are told that there are a number of billions of dollars still remaining "frozen" in our banks. In normal times it would have caused general consternation and panic if only a few banks had closed their doors. The people believed that at least any bank which had Uncle Sam's backing—the banks of the great national banking system —was as good as gold.

Millions of people who would not even trust themselves placed their trust in the banks. They saved up their money, instead of spending it, and deposited it in the bank with not the remotest idea that it was unsafe.

It is no time now to rake over ancient history and try to see how the money that was lost in the banks and kindred institutions could have been saved. In too many cases that money is gone forever. In many other cases it is not hopelessly lost but is only "frozen." Give it time and it will thaw out naturally.

But who is there who is in a position to underwrite the banks and put them on their feet again so that they can do the work they were intended to do? Nobody but Uncle Sam. The bankers are largely helpless, and hence when they are called up to do more than they are now doing they naturally hesitate. They are warned in one breath that they should loosen up and give the public more credit, and in the next breath they are told to keep their resources "liquid"—which means that they must hang onto all the cash they can get hold of.

Uncle Sam is the man who can and should step into the breach. His credit is unimpaired. His shoulders are broad. He can say once more to the people that American banks are good and are going to be kept good. There will always be some bank failures, but the losses can be spread out and made unimportant by the principle of insurance.

It is infinitely better that all the people should each suffer a small percentage of loss than to have the losses fall on the shoulders of individuals who will be bankrupted and ruined by them. But Uncle Sam must take the initiative. If some bankers are not honest, he can put them out of business—but if they are honest, then he should give them the full benefit of his O. K.

And now let us say just one little word of praise for the honest banker—and there are a lot more of them than many people think. The honest banker refused to be misled by all the allurements of speculation during the feverish period before the great crash. He did not take the money which his depositors had placed in his charge and send that money to Wall Street to be gambled with. He did all he could to serve his patrons with credit and other accommodations. In many cases even he found, when it was too late, that he was caught between the upper and nether millstones.

Banking is absolutely necessary; credit is the life blood of business. It is physically impossible to print enough currency to carry the load of commerce. It is for this reason that dollars continue to be so scarce in the hands of the people, in spite of the multiplied efforts to get money into circulation.

We hope to see banking restored again very soon to its rightful position of honor and confidence. Popular faith in banks must be built up again just as fast as possible. The people must feel that their money is safe in the banks—safer than it is when put in the chimney or under the mattress or hoarded in fruit jars. Speed the day when the bankers and the public once more will have faith in one another, for until that day comes money will continue "tight."—The Pathfinder.

A WELCOME

We, the pastor and people of Community Church, Thomasville, are delighted to have the North Carolina Annual Conference meet with us. The Annual session will begin November 15, and we are looking forward to that date. We want the ministers and delegates to know that they are welcome in our midst. Preparations are being made for your comfort during the Conference here. Our people are opening up their hearts and homes to you. First and West End churches, besides friends from other churches, are joining us in your entertainment. So, Thomasville is extending you a hearty welcome.

As you know, Thomasville is situated very near the center of our church constituency of this state. This fact should make it easy for many of our friends to attend the Conference. We want any and all who can to attend as much as possible. Any favors we may be able to extend will be cheerfully granted. H. FREO SURRATT.

"MEN AND MISSIONS" SUNDAY

Dear Pastor:

Will you co-operate with the pastors of other denominations and those of our own church in making Sunday, November 19, 1933, a memorable day for both "Men and Missions?"

Plan an educational and inspirational program on the subject of Missions for all services that day. Four-minute talks by different men in Bible school, in Men's Bible classes, in church services. Preach a short sermon on Missions or other appropriate subjects. Use extra men for ushers, men's choir, men's committees on attendance, transportation, etc.

Make it a second Rally Day for your community.

The object is to WIN THE MAN THROUGH SERVICE and INTEREST HIM BY ENLIGHTENMENT in church matters. If you attain these two objectives HE WILL PAY.

Sincerely yours,
W. C. MILLIGAN,
Pres. Layman's Fellowship,
G. W. HADDAWAY,
Exec. Sec'y Bd. of Missions.
516 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mount Hermon Church.—Sunday, October 29, service was opened with the choir and congregation singing together the hymn "Onward, Chritsian Soldiers." Invocation by the pastor. Responsive reading 307. Special singing by a local quartet, "Jesus the Light of the World." The Scripture lesson was read by the pastor, part of the fifth chapter of Isaiah. The quartet sang two numbers, "Oh, Calvary," and "Under His Wings." The offering was then taken.

The service was based upon Temperance. In a few days from now we will have the opportunity to show on which side we stand in regard to the 18th Amendment. Will you be with the few to stand for the right and walk in the straight and narrow way, or will you be with the many who who walk in the broad way that leadeth to destruction? Now is the opportune time. Will you do your part?

The lesson was very interesting.

There will be services next Sunday evening, November 5th, at 3 p. m. We hope the house will be filled. REPORTER.

Orange Charge, Hebron Church.—The Hebron Christian Endeavor Society met Sunday night at seven o'clock. The purpose of this meeting was for the election of officers for the next term are as follows: Miss Colleen Thompson, president; Miss Sue Mebane, secretary; Mr. C. P. Jones and Mr. Ballard Woods, program committee; Charles McAdams, Grady Kenley, Wodrow Jones and Everette Sykes, membership committee; Mrs. A. K. McAdams, pianist, with Mr. A. K. McAdams as choir leader. Things look bad for these new officers as the winter months are coming on, but we are trying in every way to keep our society going through the winter months.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Circuit.—Our camp meeting has come and gone. We had good preaching. Rev. Mr. Isley from Lexington for the pulpit help. We had a good meeting. Ten people joined the church. We had good singing and many good prayers were sent to God for the unsaved. May people see the need of living for the Lord.

Our Sunday school does very well. We have our Sunday school under the arbor. They made made a good start on the new church. Hope they will work at it now till they get it so we can have preaching and Sunday school in it.

We are looking for Mr. Bingham to come back another year, and will be disappointed if he does not return.

With best wishes to all Herald readers.

LIZZIE CRANFORD.

Winston, First.—The attendance was very good last Sunday morning, a considerable increase over the previous Sunday.

At the morning worship a new member, Mr. C. H. Sheffield, was received, coming to us from the Centenary M. E. Church, of Winston-Salem.

The fourth quarterly conference was held Thursday night, October 26th, over which Rev. C. H. Whitaker presided. Dr. Andrews was ill and couldn't be with us; we are sorry. The vote was unanimous for the return of Dr. J. E. Pritchard.

The death of little Davy Lee Ziglar, three and one-half year old son of Mrs. Hortense Fulk Ziglar and Mr. Ziglar, brought much sadness to relatives and friends of the family. Mrs. Ziglar is a member of our church. The funeral was held last Tuesday with Dr. Pritchard conducting the services.

Miss Pearl Sapp is well on the road to recovery. She was sitting up, crocheting, the other afternoon, and was feeling stronger.

Sadie Hauser, member of our Primary Department, has been ill with diphtheria for several days. She is getting along very nicely at present.

Louise Kirk, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kirk, has scarlet fever. She is doing very well.

Mrs. J. E. Pritchard has had a dreadful time for several weeks with a sprained ankle. It is much better but even at that it still hurts badly enough.

PAULINE BRANSON, Reporter.

First Church, High Point.—The annual bazaar and turkey supper, given under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary, was held last Thursday afternoon and evening, October 26, and proved a decided success, net proceeds from which amounted to approximately $75.00. Circle No. 1, Mrs. C. C. Robbins, chairman, made Brunswick stew and sold it two weeks ago, thereby adding $20.00 to their treasury.

An interesting feature of last Sunday morning's service was the baptism by the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, of the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Riggins. This lovely little lady, who is almost three months of age, bears the name of Eleanor Dare Riggins. Present to witness this sweet and impressive ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay, of Burlington, the latter being a sister of Mrs. Riggins.

The 11 o'clock worship hour on Sunday was full of a number of interesting details; the choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "Hear My Prayer, O Lord," solo parts having been sweetly sung by Miss Anne Robbins, with organ accompaniment by Miss Beulah Moton. This being World Temperance Sunday, the minister made an earnest and impassioned plea for Prohibition and votes against Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. He then delivered a practical and timely sermon on the theme, "The Ideal Church for These Times" from the text in Ephesians 5: "I speak concerning Christ and the church." He said that those who are church members at such times as the present must be calm and self-possessed in doubt, distress and perplexity, and not lose their heads. The church was born out of the fruitage of the coming of Christ. If any man or woman thinks he can do without the church, he says that he can get along without Christ. Through the five years that I have served as your pastor I have been trying to tell you that the church must take its problems to Christ. We must have less formalism and more spiritual power through communion with Christ. The church must live up to the ideals of Jesus and not compromise with the world.

The annual installation of church officials, trustees, stewards, ushers, treasurer, reporter, house committee, grounds committee, music committee, Sabbath school superintendent, etc., who had been duly elected for the coming year followed the sermon and was a solemn and impressive service. A brief business session followed, when the names of Messrs. Arnold J. Koonce and L. F. Ferree were voted on for delegate to Annual Conference at Thomasville in place of Mr. John H. Everhart, resigned. The result will be announced next Sunday.

A service that was unique and different was held at 7:30 p. m., the general theme being "Hymns of the Church Universal." Hymns that have been used by different denominations, Jewish, Roman Catholic, Baptist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, and Methodist, were sung by the choir, in which the congregation at times united.

A supper meeting of the stewards will be held Tuesday evening when reports from all organizations are asked for. The minister urges the different officers to make these reports in writing in order that he may complete his report to Annual Conference in due time.

Dr. Cheslzzli, Negro bishop, and who was Oxford's first colored graduate, will speak Wednesday evening at the mid-week prayer service. He holds a D.D. degree from Cambridge, England.

Next Sunday Holy Communion will be observed at 11 a. m. and at the evening service the choir will render a special program, and a silver offering will be taken to buy vestments for the choir. Some local artists, such as Clarence Schultheiss, popular singer, will appear on the program; Miss Anne Robbins will sing; also Mesdames Whitesell and Allred will render a duet. This program will be unusually attractive and enjoyable.

Mr. L. F. Ferree, Herald subscription agent, announces that he has received 51½ paid up subscriptions, and if the renewals due are sent in, First Church will make the honor roll with its quota of 71.

An interesting announcement of the engagement of Miss Willie Davis, popular young daughter of ex-Mayor W. A. Davis and Mrs. Davis, to Rev. Donald W. Conrad, pastor of the First Moravian church of Greensboro, has been made. The wedding will occur in November. The bride-to-be is a graduate of Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, and is attractive and very lovable. Mr. Conrad is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Conrad, of Winston-Salem, and received his education at George Washington University, and Moravian Theological Seminary, Bethlehem, Penn. The young couple will reside in Greensboro. Mr. Conrad is author of "The Golden Censer," a book recently issued from the press of a New York publishing house.

A host of friends rejoice to learn that Dr. R. M. Andrews, who had the misfortune to be bitten by a poisonous spider in Charlotte, and was made very ill, is able to be out again after spending several days in Burrus Memorial Hospital, this city.

Miss Lucille Pickens and the other members of the staff of the Public Library will go to Greensboro Wednesday to attend a district meeting of librarians. The library will be closed for the day. A number of the trustees will also attend.

Mrs. B. F. Montgomery has gone to Chapel Hill to visit her daughter, Mrs. R. T. Rosemand, and was accompanied by another daughter, Miss Jewel.

Liberty.—Our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, brought to us a good gospel message the fourth Sunday morning. His messages are indeed for the soul. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered; also the installation service was held. His message for the evening service was appreciated by well filled pews of attentive people.

Our fourth quarterly conference convened Saturday night and unanimously voted for the return of Mr. Love. He loves the sheep of his fold. We think he has a very appropriate name.

One of our members, Mr. John Holt, has been critically ill with pneumonia, though he is improving now, we are very grateful to note. Mr. Love and the members prayed much for his recovery.

Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Auxiliary met with Mrs. F. A. Shepard at her home on Fayetteville street. Mrs. Clarence Highfill is chairman. The topic for the evening was: "The Romance of the Church."

Circle No. 2 met in the church Thursday afternoon. The mission study program was used. Mrs. Fred N. Love, chairman, was very interesting.

The Philathea class will meet with Mrs. R. W. Ward Monday evening, November 6.

The Sunday school officers elected Sunday are as follows: R. L. Elkins, superintendent; Grier Lineberry, secretary; Miss Helen Isley, treasurer; Miss Marjorie Allred and Miss Mozelle Smith, pianists for Sunday school; Mrs. R. L. Elkins, church pianist; Philathea class, Mrs. Mamie Smith; Mrs. J. O. Overman, assistant; teacher Baraca class, Dr. A. D. Gregg; Junior Baraca, Mr. Floyd Deaton, teacher; Junior Philathea, Mrs. W. H. Wiley; Bible class, Miss Bertine Shepard; Mountain Boys, Mr. Will Smith; Class No. 1, Mrs. V. H. Dameron; Class No. 2, Miss Edna Amick; Class No. 3, Mrs. Cecil Frazier; Mrs. Joe Swaim, president of the Cradle Roll Department; Mrs. J. A. Clapp, president of the Home Department. Miss Margaret King Shepard wa selected president of the Christian Endeavor.

Dr. H. Thomas Stevens and Mrs. W. C. Hammer delivered addresses on "Prohibition and Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment." They spoke with power and our people feel highly favored in having heard them. Let's work together to save our fair land from the bondage of strong drink and its results.

We were delighted to have Mrs. F. S. Whiteside, of Richmond, worship with us Sunday.

Miss Nettie Stewart attended the Northwestern District Teachers' Meeting in High Point on October 20th.

Miss Alta Hudson, teacher, of Salisbury, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Hudson, recently.

Mrs. Wade Hardin is teaching art at Siler City. She is also teaching art to a number of the members of the school faculty of Liberty.

Our Father, bless our country. Bless thy church everywdhere, and bless all Christian workers. Bless the young and the aged, the sick and the troubled, and set the star of hope in the overhanging clouds.

St. Paul Charge.—The pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, submitted the following report to the fourth quarterly conference:

Greetings:

May the blessings, mercy and goodness of God our Father and His Holy Spirit be upon us and in our work of transacting the business of this quarterly conference.

The outlook for the church, as your pastor sees it, is the best it has been under the present pastor. The people of the community speak in more confident and favorable terms of the church and its future advancement as your pastor talks with them in their homes. They seem to have had their faith reinforced and their convictions deepened as to the need and work of St. Paul Crurch. This should be an inspiration to this quarterly conference and the members of this church, and it should cause them to take on new life and interest in the cause and work that the church represents.

Organization: The Sunday school has done good and efficient work, although the average attendance may not have been quite as good as in the past year. But let me hasten to say that the amount of good accomplished can not be measured by numbers but by the quality and spirit of the work done. And when we take this into consideration, I believe, we will find this one of the Sunday school's best years. Our superintendent has just put into operation a new addition to the Sunday school which should mean much to its future development, namely, the Cradle Roll Department. I want to take this opportunity as pastor to express my appreciation for the faithful and splendid work done by our Sunday school superintendent.

The Missionary Society, under the leadershi of Miss Flossie Jones, has done the best year's work in its history. They have raised more money, have collected a number of aprons to send to Pine Ridge Mission School, and have also collected a number of handkerchiefs for our Children's Home at High Point. This work and training of the children in Missionary activities is a great help to the children.

The Ladies' Aid Society is one of the best organizations of our church. The society works to raise money for the up-keep and furnishing of the parsonage and church. She is also ready to respond to any financial need of the church. One of the noblest acts of this Conference year was the paying off in the early part of the year the superannuate assessment.

The Stewards are to be commended for their work. As I view the work of other churches and see those who have many more and abler members who do not do as well as St. Paul financially, there comes some gratification and appreciation for the good work of our Board of Stewards and people, who are willing to do their part. I feel quite sure that we will be on the Honor Roll for three things this year.

The Children's Bible Class was organized in July and is under the direction of the pastor's wife. The organization is to make an appeal to the young to make them better church members of the future. With proper leadership and co-operation much and lasting good will can come to the church as a result of its work. The number now enrolled is 28.

Pastor's Activities: He has attended all meetings of every organization of the church in so far as possible for him to do so. I have preached 90 pastoral sermons and conducted two funerals; held ten other services in the community. Have made 900 pastoral visits; have held two revivals, one in the spring, the other this fall. Have had 48 professions and 32 united with our church by letter and profession. Have done many other things too numerous to mention.

Summary and Comparison: We just want to compare one phase of our work since coming to this charge. The first year I received 10 new members. The second year I received 21. This would be an increase of 110 per cent over the first year. This year I have received and reinstated 32 new members. This would be an increase of 220 per cent over the first year and 120 per cent over the previous year. Over one-third of the members of this church have been received in the past three years.

As we close our third year, I wish to say that I have done my best for the church without fear or favor. The work has been hard, yet I have been happy in it. The aid and co-operation which I have had from the official members of the quarterly conference and members of the church have been a great help in the work committed to our care.

And I wish to express my appreciation and thanks to each who has made any effort to help forward the work. Pray that the Great Shepherd of the sheep will ever guide you and your under sepherd throughout all our activities and responsibilities. And for all accomplishments to Him be praise, world without end.

Respectfully submitted,
D. I. GARNER, Pastor.

Kannapolis.—Our fourth quarterly conference convened at the church on Friday evening, October 20, with 15 official members present. We were indeed glad to have Dr. Andrews with us and to preside over the conference. The pastor's report was as follows:

"New members received by letter, 13; on profession of faith, 43; total of 56, 33 adults and 23 children; number on roll at last Annual Conference, 98; removed, 2, by letter; present roll, 152; infants baptized, 3; baptized by immersion, 2; adults baptized, 30; Ihave made approximately 300 pastoral calls. Have visited the sick frequently and have had prayer in most of these homes: I have administered the Lord's Supper three times. I have filled most all appointments, and when absent have secured someone else to preach in my stead. Have conducted two revival meetings, being assisted by Rev. J. D. Morris, my father, beginning April 16th to 24th, and second revival beginning the fourth Sunday in August and continuing 10 days, assisted by Rev. G. W. Vick, pastor of Calvary M. E. Church, South, Charlotte, N. C., there being approximtely 135 conversions. I have attended Sunday school Christian Endeavor Society regularly, and since moving to Kannapolis have attended the mid-week prayer meetings regularly. I have conducted one funeral. I have filled all duties peculiar to my profession to the best of my ability. I have enjoyed the year, and wish to commend the people on their loyal co-operation. Several things I wish to especially commend you on: The support given to the Loyalty League; the subscribing to the M. P. Herald; the Tithers' League, which has been organized; also the Christian Workers' Band. Have raised $62.00 for new hymnals. Have bulletin service, which was made possible by some of the business firms of the town. Special days observed: Christmas, Decision Sunday, Children's Day, Easter, Home-Coming, Rally Day. Held a 10-day Daily Vacation Bible School beginning the second Monday in August with an enrollment of 96 there being 76 to receive certificates, being assisted in this school by Rev. J. T. Bowman and Rev. W. M. Howard.

"C. P. Morris, Pastor."

There will be an adjourned session of the fourth quarterly conference on November 10 at 7 o'clock.

We were happy to have Rev. J. D. and Mrs. Morris spend the day Sunday, October 29, and the church had the privilege of hearing Mr. Morris preach. I was unable to attend this service but of all report every one enjoyed it. We would that each one who cast their vote as Daddy Morris, I am sure that there would be several more homes that would have bread for their little ones and plenty of clothing, too. The churches have fallen short of their duties in the past and it is time for them to awake and get about their Father's business, for time is flying and we need to study and make the study serious as to where our eternity will be spent. I don't believe that God would let a man or woman, boy or girl, into the pearly white gates of the New Jerusalem with a whiskey or a beer bottle or a deck of cards or a pair of dice, for He wants and will accept those only who are pure in heart and clean in body.

On Sunday, October 29, at the evening worship our pastor delivered a soul-stirring message, taking "Life's Choice" as his subject. He brought out some wonderful thoughts. The quartet sang "Stepping in the Light," and Mrs. W. T. Kiser impressively sang as a closing prayer, "Jesus, I Come."

Our Sunday school is increasing so rapidly we are greatly in need of Sunday school rooms, and we are trusting that each one will keep pushing the load so we will be able to build the needed space some time in the near future.

We seem to have too many "can'ts" and not enough "I'll trys." Let's be more full-blooded Americans and more whole-souled Christians, and when we are called upon for a certain duty let's just "try."

We are looking forward by the Lord's help and the pledges that were made Sunday to go over the top, so to speak, with our finance. And we trust to see many more do the same. We are hoping to get Mr. Morris back with us another year, and will be greatly disappointed if he doesn't come back, but if by chance he doesn't, we all bid him Godspeed in the ministry.

The Ladies' Aid Circle No. 1 will meet on Monday evening, November 6 at 7 o'clock with Mrs. J. V. Dwiggins, 916 North Juniper street. No. 2 Circle meets the same evening and same hour with Mrs. N. F. Harris on North Tenth street. All members are urged to be present, as new officers will be elected. Visitors are always welcome.

MRS. X. E. G., Reporter.

Draper.—Our church is doing well. The attendance is good and steadily increasing. Our mid-week prayer meetings are well attended and the church is making progress in every way. Our Sunday school is going nicely. Bro. W. T. Howell has made us a good superintendent. We held our annual church meeting last Sunday, October 29, and elected officers for the ensuing year, except the teacher for the Bible class. They are as follows: Sunday school superintendent, W. T. Howell; secretary, Ralph Keaton; treasurer, A. L. McGee; teachers, Miss Dixie Boyles, Mrs. Edna Burnette, Mrs. Leona Wyatt; church treasurer, Mr. N. H. Stuart; trustees, O. R. Boyles, W. T. Howell, N. H. Stuart. I do not remember the other officers. We are sorry to report that our pastor, Rev. R. L. Vickery, is leaving us this year. But we pray God's blessings upon him. He has labored faithfully with us for the last three years, and we hope and pray that he may get a good work.

We are proud indeed to report that we have had a good year spiritually. We have had 33 additions on profession of faith. We are also glad that we can report all of our claims paid in full. Our pastor's salary in full, our G. C. B., A. C. B., Special Superannuate, and College. All these claims paid in full. We also have paid $2.50 Herald subsidy. We received our full quota in church Herald. We have contributed monthly to the Children's Home.

May I close by asking all the Christian people to pray for us? REPORTER.

First Church, Burlington—The regular services were held Sunday. The Sunday school was in charge of the Golden Rule Sunday school class. Miss Crutchfield, president, presided.

Our pastor delivered a most helpful message Sunday morning. This message was a continuance of the messages of the two previous Sundays on the subjects "The Type of Program the Present-Day Church Should Carry Forward," and "The Type of Person the Present-Day Church Member Should Be. At the close of the sermon a short but very impressive installation service was held. Dr. Paschall made a brief talk, stressing the great responsibility of church members, and especially church officers. I am sure that every church member left with better intentions for the coming year.

Miss Tula Paul presided over the C. E. meeting Sunday evening. The topic was "The Six P's." They were as follows: Purpose, Preparation, Pep, Participation, Prayer, and Progress. Very interesting talks were given on these.

The evening service was in charge of the pastor. He delivered a most interesting message on "Ye Are Not Your Own, For Ye Are Bought With a Price."

The first adjourned session of the fourth quarterly conference was held Thursday evening, October 26, with a splendid attendance. This meeting was more or less a membership meeting to discuss financial matters.

Dr. Paschall conducted the meeting. Two hymns were sung, followed by Scripture and prayer, after which Dr. Paschall commented upon the Scripture. In his talk, he advocated that every church member should examine his or herself and see if they could say that "I have done my best this Conference year." He stated that we should bring ourselves in relationship with God so that we might be examined of Him; find out our faults and weaknesses so that God might help us to remedy them.

Concluding this short period of worship, the meeting was then declared open for official business. An important item of unfinished business was that of our delegate to Annual Conference. Mr. W. E. Smith, delegate elected, tendered his resignation since it was impossible for him to attend. His resignation was accepted. Several names were presented, but it seemed to be a hard matter to get anyone to accept this duty. Finally, Mr. Henry Cole was nominated, who kindly and willingly consented to act as delegate, which was greatly appreciated. He was elected unanimously with Mr. Anderson Thomas to serve as his alternate.

In regard to who shall be our next pastor, Mr. M. A. Coble, presided. Through courtesy of the church members, Dr. Paschall was asked to remain during the voting. There was no debating, no discussion whatsoever upon this question, for it had already been decided in their minds, however, to put it in a business form, Mr. Coble asked what was the desire of the congregation. Everybody shouted "Dr. Paschall!" He was re-elected unanimously and the delegate was instructed to bring Dr. Paschall back with him at the same salary received previously.

The church appreciates the wonderful work that Dr. and Mrs. Paschall have done since his pastorate here and it is a pleasure to have them in our midst. They are so willing and whole-hearted, sincere and Christian in everything they go about and that is the kind of people we need. REPORTER.

Friendship Station.—We are very busy these days finishing our third year's work at Friendship Station. We held our fourth quarterly conference last Saturday night with the largest attendance we have seen here. The business of the conference was transacted in the spirit of harmony; the alternate delegate, Bro. John Mason, was elected; at the pastor's request his name was not run for re-election; the conference duly instructed the delegate. Finances are behind; however, we are expeting the salary to be paid in full, and more to be paid on the Annual Conference claim. The folks here have a habit of waiting until late fall to pay their church debts. I wish this habit could be overcome, and we predict that unless this situation is changed we shall see but little progress made in financing this church. During our stay of three years here we have had a part in some projects that have proved that church and parsonage properties can be imroved, even when money seems to be scarce. The church has been underpinned with brick; new brick steps have been added; shrubbery has been set on three sides of the church and 100 new hymn books have been added, and other minor improvements. Two sets of brick steps have been built at the parsonage; shrubbery has been planted around the house; new screens added , and over $100 worth of furniture has been added to the parsonage. A young people's Christian Endeavor Society has been organized with 40 members; they are doing a great work; they are in training and some day Friendship church will have a trained leadership. Some of them are already on the official board.

Our Ladies' Aid Society has been very active and has proven worthy of honorable mention; in their recent effort they raised about $25.00 to be paid on the church insurance.

We have had some fine experiences here among these good people. We have many here who have provn themselves to be the best friends we have; and they have co-operated with us in all our good undertakings, and to them should go the credit for all the many and varied improvements that have been made. Of course to Him the great Head of the church, we are grateful for all things. "If God is for us, who can be against us?"

We are praying with you that the Lord may give all the pastors good success during the remaining weeks before our Annual Conference, and may His good will be done in our every effort.

O. B. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—The fourth quarterly conference was held at this church Saturday, October 21, with a goodly number present. We all enjoyed the picnic supper afterwards.

We were all sorry our pastor, Brother Love, was sick Sunday, but he delivered two soul-stirring sermons. We earnestly hope he will be sent back to us for another year. At the morning hour he installed the church and Sunday school officials.

Our Christian Endeavor is still progressing, and we are hoping to still improve in the ways of the Master. Sunday night the Juniors had a wonderful program on "How Jesus Shows His Love," led by Elaine Harrison. Mr. Love's four little children sang in their sweet, childish voices the wonderful old hymn, "Jesus Loves Me." After the program the president called all of the society officers and the pastor installed them.

Last Saturday night the Girls' Senior Sunday school class, under the sponsorship of their teacher, Mrs. Cecil McClimon, entertained the Boys' Senior class at a Hallowe'en party at the home of Miss Lucille Davis. All present enjoyed the occasion.

We will have one more preaching Sunday before Conference, since it has been postponed; this is the second Sunday.

Remember us in your prayers.

REPORTER.

Maple Springs Church.—Although our reporter has been asleep on the job this year, we would like for you all to know that we have been moving forward and a great deal of interest has been manifested among our church members this year.

I suppose we stand about in line with the other churches in regard to finances, somewhat behind. Of course we will raise the pastor's salary, as usual, for we have a record for doing that. Wish it were possible to raise all other claims. Think we will about raise our A. C. B.

Perhaps it would be of interest to our former pastors to know that we have almost wiped out our church debt and with prosperity just around the corner we hope to soon be able to make other improvements.

The township Sunday school institute was held at our church Sunday afternoon and although five denominations were represented, a great spirit of co-operation prevailed.

Just a word to the stationing committee: Rev. R. A. Hunter and family have been with us two years, and we hope they will be with us many more. We love them all and have been greatly benefited by having them in our midst. Bro. Hunter is a fine preacher of the Gospel. Please send them back to Forsyth Charge.

I sincerely hope that every Methodist Protestant in North Carolina will go to the polls November 7 and cast a ballot in favor of the 18th Amendment.

REPORTER.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—The fourth quarterly conference was held at Antioch church Saturday night, October 21, 1933. The president, Dr. R. M. Andrews, had charge of the conference. All five of the church were represented and gave a good report. All the churches except one had paid their Conference claims, and this church was expecting to raise the money before Conference. We lack some of having our pastor's salary paid up, but we are hoping that before he goes to Conference we can pay out in full. We all like Mr. Henderson and all five of the churches voted for him to come back. He has done a lot for our church this year. The amount of work that has been done on the church would amount to around $350. We feel that Bro. Henderson's work here has been a great success. He always brings very helpful messages.

Our Sunday school is growing in interest and attendance.

Our Christian Endeavor is doing fine and I am well pleased with our young people. They are taking much interest in the programs.

We are proud of our church and we are always glad to have visitors worship with us.

Dr. Andrews preached for us Sunday night, October 22. He brought us such an inspiring message. We are always so glad to have him with us.

May we forever be what the Lord would have us be.

MRS. M. L. STALLINGS.

Bethesda.—This being the fifth Sunday, our pastor was with us and preached a wonderful sermon from II Samuel 24:24: "Neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which doth cost me nothing." So many of us want God to have what we don't need. But He showed us how we need to pay the price for what we give unto God.

The fourth Sunday was our regular preaching time. The pastor and his wife were with us. The church officers were elected for the next year. Holy communion was observed at this time and today the new officers were installed, which was a very impressive service. It was good to see so many take the vow to do what they could for the advancement of Christ's kingdom.

We will have one more service with our pastor before Conference. It doesn't seem possible that another year is so nearly gone. But that is another reminder of how fast time does fly, and that we are one year nearer eternity. We should be very careful how we spend our time, for our lives are fast passing by.

Of course we want our pastor back, and we are almost afraid to tell what he and his good wife have done for us this year for fear others will want them also. They have been with us the second and fourth Sundays in every month except one fourth Sunday, and either Mr. or Mrs. Maier has been with us every fifth Sunday. They have met with the church as a whole about every 1st Thursday night and with the young people the last Thursday night in each month. They held pre-Easter services and one week revival services. They have been a great help to us in many ways. We hope the Conference will see fit to send them back to us.

On the third Sunday in September we elected our Sunday school officers and teachers. Our good superintendent, Mr. C. L. Wagner, who has served us so faithfully for several years, drives about 15 miles every Sunday to be with us. He was elected for another year. He is also our delegate to Annual Conference. We have a faithful set of teachers who are hardly ever absent.

The fourth quarterly conference met with our church a few weeks ago. We served supper about 6 o'clock, after which we had a talk from our conference president and then had the business session conducted by Dr. Andrews. There was a large crowd present, many coming from State Street Church. We were glad to have them meet with us.

We are facing a very serious problem now, the repeal of the 18th Amendment. God forbid that liquor should ever be turned loose again. We hear it said it will not be any worse than it is now, that they will have it anyway. We have a law against stealing and killing. Of course that does not mean there is no stealing or killing. But if not for the law it would be worse. The same is true of the prohibition law. May we all be at our post of duty November 7.

God bless us all for Christ's sake.

MRS. D. D. BRINKLEY, Reporter.

Midland.—We are ending our second year on this work with a better showing financially than last. Higher prices for farm products makes money easier.

By secret ballot delegate has been instructed to bring back the present pastor.

In the main we have had two pleasant years on our old home charge. However, we have had many sad experiences, having conducted 33 funerals since we have been here, and still we are not trying to hold competition with Bro. Ashburn.

Love's Grove will pay salary in full, so will Pageland. Other churches are doubtful.

I find that the vigilance of stewards has much to do with the financial status of the church. If stewards would become interested in the finances of the church as much as in their own business affairs I am sure there would not be such large deficits at the close of the year.

Bro. Michael Love and family, one of Love Grove's valuable assets, have moved to Texas. Best wishes of the entire church follow them.

W. D. REED.

First Church, Lexington.—Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, filled his regular appointment Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, bringing us an edifying message, the theme of which was "A Day of Glad Tidings." He preached again at 7:30 o'clock to a congregation which completely filled the auditorium of the church. Although our services have been well attended, the attendance seems to be growing with each service. Our church has paid its Annual Conference claims in full, also the superannuate fund. We hope to pay the World Service budget in full before the Annual Conference convenes.

Our Christian Endeavor Society met Sunday evening at the regular hour with a good attendance. The subject, "Commerce and Missions—Allies or Enemies," was discussed in a very interesting manner by different members of the society. After the program the following officers were elected: Ernest Hamilton, president; Ray Hedrick, vice-president; Jessie Everidge, secretary and treasurer; Margaret Lea Sink, reporter; Lola Mae McCulloch, pianist; James L. Mallard, chairman of social committee; and Mary Belle Talbert, chairman of visiting and flower committee.

Mount Pleasant, North Davidson.—The fourth Sunday being the usual time to elect officers of the church for another Conference year, the following were elected: Class leader: P. C. Reid, assisted by Harrell Payne and Ruth Green; superintendent, Mr. L. H. Hilton; stewards, C. F. Green, treasurer and chairman, J. R. Stone, W. D. Payne, L. H. Hilton, J. Ruffin Stone, Mrs. P. C. Reid, and Mrs. Ray Ball; Junior stewards, Thomas Hilton, Paul Green, Harrell Payne, Treva Reid, and Ruth Green; trustees, G. W. Hayworth, E. S. Welborn, Roy Hilton, H. M. Perryman and Ernest Ball; organist, Joseph Payne; assistant, Treva Reid; ushers, Thomas Hilton, Paul Green, Lester Leonard; reporter, Mildred Green. We hope that there will be great work done the following year by these officers.

Rev. O. C. Loy brought us an uplifting message, taken from Luke 23:18. Just as the people of Jesus' day said "Away with this man," the people of today are crying, "Away with Him." The trouble of the would today is caused by the people not seeking Jesus and not doing what is right, and the world will get no better until this is done.

There will be one more preaching service before Conference, the second Sunday night at 7 o'clock.

A surprise birthday dinner was given for Mr. and Mrs. Hayworth the fourth Sunday. Many were there and enjoyed the day together.

Fallston Circuit.—The fourth quarterly conference for this charge was held last Saturday, October 28, at Friendship church, with a large number of the officials and visitors present. Bro. Clarence Morris delighted the audience with a good, practical sermon on "Co-operation in Church Work." After partaking of a sumptuous dinner, we re-assembled for the quarterly conference, which was presided over by Bro. Ridge, of the Cleveland Circuit. We regretted the absence of our president, but we understand why he was not present.

The reports on different phases of the work were very encouraging, and I am very sure that the final reports will be better than last year. Laurel Hill reported pastor's salary and A. C. B. paid, and about $30.00 paid on deficit on pastor's salary for last year. The pastor's salary for next year was set at $1,250.00, an increase of $250.00. The conference voted for the return of the present pastor, and of cousre he appreciates this expression of confidence.

In many respects this was the best quarterly conference we have held in the two years I have been here.

I pray that all charges may be able to send reports to Annual Conference that shall encourage our hearts and strengthen the work of the church.

Spring Church Charge.—Our fourth quarterly conference was held Friday, the 27th, at Spring Church, with all three churches represented. The usual business was transacted. The salary for the ensuing year was fixed at $1,100. Mr. Clifton Cook was elected delegate, Mr. Ellis Crew, delegate-elect, having resigned. Since his election, Mr. Crew has accepted a position with the government. Mr. Mr. J. W. Crew was elected alternate. The conference voted unanimously for the return of the present pastor for the third year.

During the year we have held the following special services, two Easter, two Christmas, two Children's Day, three young people's, six thank-offering, and one rally service. In each of the 16 special days observed creditable offerings were received.

We have held there revival meetings with 55 professions, two infants and 18 adults baptized; 20 were received into the church.

On last Friday night, 45 young people from the Pleasant Hill and Lebanon C. E. Societies met on the parsonage lawn. A weiner feast and games made up the program.

Mrs. R. M. Robinson, chairman of the Woman's work of the First District, is planning a thank-offering program to be given on Greensville charge the second Sunday in November. The ladies of Spring Church charge Auxiliary will give the program.

Haw River Church, Glen Raven Charge.—Mr. Pegg filled his regular appointment at the 11 o'clock service to a good size congregation. After the sermon communion was observed by many. This will be our last appointment before the Annual Conference. We have paid all claims in full and think the other churches will do the same.

After the service we had a church conference and elected our church officers for next year. The church voted unanimously for Mr. Pegg to remain another year, and we hope the Conference will see fit to assign him to this charge for another year. We are sorry to report at this writing that Mrs. Suits is ill at home. She underwent an operation at Rainey Hospital for appendicitis, from which she has not fully recovered.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

THE MINNIS SALARY CALENDAR

Two weeks ago in this column I suggested the assembling of calendars as an aid to raising the Minnis salary. I also asked that contributions of a dollar or more be sent to Mrs. Taylor. I do not know what has been sent to her, if anything. I do know that I have received only a dollar and ten cents.

Perhaps the plan was not thoroughly understood, although I asked that if more information was desired to write me. I have received no requests for information.

Here again is the plan: Take a 1933 calendar. In place of "January," (and the other months), substitute the name of a person who will make a contribution of 50 cents. You will notice there are five Sundays in January, four or five Sundays in each other month. In place of the Sunday, substitute the name of a person who will make a contribution of 25 cents. In place of each week day, substitute the name of a person who will contribute 10 cents. When the year, (that is, all the months) is thus completed, you will have a little more than fifty dollars for Mr. Minnis' salary. If you cannot complete a year, fill up as many months as you can.

It is only two weeks until Conference. Collect as much money as possible, and bring or send it to Conference. I will be there to receive it, and give credit where it belongs. Let's make our offering at Conference at least $800. We have raised less than $200 since last April, and the Board of Missions is depending on us for the full amount of his salary. HE IS OUR MISSIONARY and has sacrificed to the very limit to carry on the work. Mr. Minnis says: "We are planning just as if there were no hindrances in our way." Our failure to support him is hindering his work.

MRS. C. W. BATES.

AUXILIARY TREASURERS, PLEASE OBSERVE

Your pastor has to make a report to Dr. Brown before Conference, and so do I, so please observe the following rules that our reports may agree:

First, all money sent in for Mr. Minnis counts on the World Service budget of your church, but does not count on your Auxiliary budget.

Second, the money raised by your Auxiliary for High Point College counts on the College allotment of your church.

Third, your North Carolina budget, important as it is, does not count on any church budget.

Less than half of our World Service budget for the Branch ($8,000) is apportioned to the Auxiliaries, so let's plan now during these next six months to pay all of our budgets in full and just as much more as possible. Let's have the best report ever at our next Branch Meeting.

Yours in the work.
Mrs. S. W. TAYLOR, Br. Treas.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Armfield

Wyatt J. Armfield, father of Mrs. R. T. Pickens, capable reporter of the First Methodist Protestant Church, High Point, was born November 25, 1843, and departed this life October 12, 1933. Had this venerable scion of a pioneer family lived until November 25th he would have passed his 90th milestone.

His ancestors came to North Carolina from Pennsylvania in 1765. He was born on the farm near High Point the deed for which was dated in 1795 and was in his possession. An early education in the public schools was followed by attendance at the Mendenhall Academy, in Florence, and the Oak Ridge Institute. Here he was a student at the outbreak of the War Between the States. His service was in the quartermaster's corps of the Confederate Army.

Engaging in the nursery business in the West, Mr. Armfield met and on December 20, 1868, married Miss Jennie Britt, of Britt's Landing, Tennessee. To the old homestead he brought her as his bride. In 1906 the stately residence in High Point was erected, where he resided until his decease. Mrs. Armfield completed her earthly life March 10, 1915.

Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. R. T. Pickens, who resided with him; Mrs. Frank Armfield, of Concord; three sons, William J. Armfield, Jr., of Asheboro; W. Frank Armfield, of High Point; Jesse L. Armfield, of Evansville, Indiana; a sister, Mrs. Mary A. White, of the Deep River community; 23 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

A fitting memorial service for which he had made plans was conducted in the home Saturday, October 14th. He was laid to rest in the family mausoleum in Oakwood cemetery. These grandsons were active pallbearers: William J. Armfield, Jr., Henry and Edward Armfield, of Asheboro; Frank Armfield, Jr., and Wyatt Armfield, of Concord; Richard B. and Frank Armfield, Jr., and Rupert Pickens, of High Point.

In 1907 Mr. Armfield retired from extensive banking business. Native ability led him successfully to found and operate ten banks which became vital factors in the state banking structure during that period of Piedmont industrial development.

In his prime his artistic taste was seen in love for books, music and flowers. During his illness since last May his room was furnished almost daily with flowers from friends. His pride was to be honest to the core. In the memorial service conducted by the Rev. J. M. Hilliard, of the Baptist church, and Dr. George Crowell, long-time friends, the veteran Baptist minister used appropriately for his text Romans 8:17—"Provide things honest in the sight of all men."

Many were the objects of his gifts. Upon the erection of the Methodist Protestant Children's Home he furnished the infirmary room. To High Point College he gave the first $100 for beautifying the grounds with shrubbery. The first check for the High Point Public Library came from him. Devoted to his children, little was ever spent upon himself. He contributed to the Baptist church, of which Mrs. Armfield was a devoted member.

During a severe illness in 1915, this quiet, reserved man penned a brochure which seems a fitting close to this tribute. It was entitled "My Swan Song," and reads:

"At the age of seventy one, I can truly say, the world has been good to me. The days are very beautiful and life still has its charm. I hear the music of the winds, read poems in the sunny landscapes and see pictures in the story clouds. God rules and is merciful.

"Sincerely yours,
"W. J. ARMFIELD."

Both pastor and people of First Church extend loving sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Pickens and children who are loyal members of the church.

ROY IRWIN FARMER, Pastor.

Grubb

Samuel A. Grubb, born April 5, 1869, died October 9, 1933, aged 64 years, 6 months and 4 days. On January 21, 1908, he was married to Mary Elizabeth Darr, whom he leaves to mourn her loss; also six brothers, Andrew, Levi, David, Dan, Henry, and John Grubb; and two sisters, Misses Martha and Frances Grubb; also many other relatives and friends.

About 20 years ago he joined Mount Pleasant M. E. church, later transferring his membership to the Methodist Protestant Church, in which faith he continued until death. He was a faithful member, having attended services when his health permitted. He bore his suffering patiently and cheerfully, having been an intense sufferer for the past six years. His home life was a happy one. He will be missed in the home, in the community and in his church.

Funeral services were conducted in Mount Pleasant M. P. church, North Davidson Charge, by the writer, assisted by Rev. H. L. Powell, a former pastor. The body was laid to rest in the local cemetery.

O. C. LOY.

Wall

Sarah E. Briles Wall departed this life October 22, 1933, at the age of 76 years, 3 months and 9 days. She had been a patient sufferer for the last several months, but her death came rather unexpectedly, as she had been apparently better for the last few weeks. She leaves to mourn her departure her devoted husband, "Uncle Bunk," as we call him, with whom she had walked lovingly for 53 years; two sons, S. B. Wall, of High Point, N. C., and R. C. Wall, of Denton; two daughters, Mrs. J. J. Atkins, of Charlotte, and Mrs. Ernest Turner, of Denton; ten grandchildren and one brother, William Briles, of the Mt. Zion section near Thomasville.

Mrs. Wall professed religion and joined Mount Zion M. P. church in early life. Later she, with her husband, removed their membership and became charter members of Denton church, where she remained a loyal and devoted member until death claimed her. When her seat was empty at church, it was the turn of her pastor to find out what was the matter, for so long as she was able, she was there to make a contribution to the worship of the God she loved and served.

She hungrily read her Bible, and the Herald was ever near her side. She, through her sickness, had read the New Testament through, then beginning at Genesis had left off at the third or fourth chapter of Ezekiel. After her last attack of severe illness, in a delirium she would hold the bed covers and read verse after verse, thinking she held the Book.

Her funeral was directed by her pastor in Denton church, Brother Reynolds preaching the funeral by her special request of several years' standing. Bro. R. I. Farmer, her son's pastor, and Dr. Martin, also assisted in the service. The body was tenderly laid to rest in the Denton cemetery beneath a bank of flowers, attended by a large concourse of weeping friends and loved ones.

Welch

It is with deep regret that we, the members of the A. M. Idol Philathea class, must record that God in His infinite wisdom has seen best to call our dear friend and faithful worker, Ruth Welch, from our midst. Her quiet, unassuming manner, her faithfulness to duty, and her friendliness will linger long in our memory. She was a loyal member of her class and church and will be greatly missed in almost every department of the church work.

Whereas, her death has brought sorrow to the family, the class and the church, Be it Resolved:

First, that we bow in humble submission to our Heavenly Father's will, and let her life inspire us to higher and nobler living.

Second, that we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her sisters and brother.

Be it also resolved that we send a copy of these resolutions to the family; record a copy on the minutes of our class, and send a copy to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
MARY E. YOUNG,
NAOMI M. YARBOROUGH,
JOHNSIE OAKES JACKSON,
IRENE REYNOLDS,
Committee.

LITTLE AMERICA POST OFFICE

As a part of the Byrd Second Antarctic Expedition the Post Office Department is to establish a post office at the world's southernmost "settlement," Little America, Antartica, where the first Byrd expedition lived for two years. The Little America postmaster will be Dr. John Oliver La Gorce, of Washington, D. C., vice-president of the National Geographic Society. His assistant is Leroy Clark, a staff member of the Byrd expedition. Thousands of letters were received to be postmarked at Little America. To meet the expense of transporting these letters to and from the United States a charge of 53 cents for each letter was made. The three cents goes to the Post Office Department and the 50 cents to the expedition. Provision has been made to have letters received in Washington up to November 10 forwarded to Dunedin, New Zealand, in time to be transferred to the expedition ship at that point.—The Pathfinder.

—Mr. Hoey suggests to the liquor men a name for the institution which they are working to put in place of the old saloon or bar-room. His suggestion is that they call it a Personal Liberty Filling Station.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

Going! Going! Gone!

No, not a piece of land, or some furniture at an auction sale. But an opportunity to help the HERALD by raising the subscription quota and the Subsidy. It will soon be "Gone" for this Conference year. So also will be "Gone" the chance to have the name of your church or charge on the HERALD Honor Roll. "Buy up the opportunity." An Installation Service for Sunday School Officers

After the officers have been elected, let the pastor, or some one appointed to take charge of the service, call them to the chancel and deliver the following charge:

Dear fellow-workers: The various activities of the church call for a variety of gifts among its members, but all are directed toward the common end for which the church was established, even as the Apostle Paul has written: "There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit; there are differences of administration, but the same Lord; there are diversities of operation, but one and the same God worketh all in all." "He giveth some, apostles; and some, preachers and teachers . . . for the edifying of the body of Christ." You, the officers of this Sunday school, have been called to direct the teaching ministry of this church. "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, and my servants whom I have chosen." I ask you, as you assume your respective offices, to assent to the following pledge.

God being my helper, I will earnestly strive to be faithful to this my religious opportunity, as well as my personal responsibility. "I will delight to do thy will, O God, for thy law is written in my heart." If this is your purpose, will you please say, "I will."

Will the teachers please rise:

A great responsibility rests upon you as teachers of the Word. I urge you to accept that responsibility seriously, and to be diligent in the discharge of your duty. And I ask that you pledge your determination to be regular in attendance, faithful in preparation, and loyal to the purposes for which this school is established and maintained. If you so pledge, will you answer, "I will."

Will the parents please rise:

You, the parents of the children in our school, have heard the officers and teachers pledge themselves to be faithful in word and work. But upon you more than upon them rests the responsibility of implanting in the hearts of your children the commandments of the Lord, and of imparting to them the truths of His word. Remember the exhortation of Moses to the fathers in Israel: "Thou shalt lay up these my words in thy heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children; and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest in the way, and when thou liest down and when thou risest up." Will you assent to the following pledge:

God being our helper, we will by precept and example diligently teach the Word to our children, so that the truths of the Bible may be known and reverenced and followed in our homes. We will heartily co-operate with the officers and teachers of this school in helping our children in the preparation of their lessons; and we will ourselves strive to lead our children in the true and right way, setting them an example of godly living. If you so pledge, will you answer, "We will."

Will all others please rise:

We, the members of this school, pledge to the officers and teachers our loyal support, and invoke upon them the blessing of God as they enter upon their work.

Let us pray: Eternal God, our heavenly Father, who committest to us the solemn trust of life; bless us as we enter upon our duties, and make us faithful to our responsibilties. Help us to grasp the opportunities for service as thou shalt show them to us in this Sunday school. May we be workmen who need not to be ashamed, always conscious that we are workers together with Thee. May we rightly divide the word of truth. Make us kindly in thought, gentle in word, helpful in deed. Lead us to know that it is better to give than to receive; better to serve than to be served. And in all things give us the mind and spirit of Jesus, our Teacher and Lord, with Whom and for Whom we work. Amen.

How Jesus Solved a Difficult Problem

John 6:5-14

The problem of bread is ever with us. It is true that man shall not live by bread alone, but he must have bread. And we use the term bread here meaning something to eat. These bodies of ours cannot continue to function without something to eat. Here in our country we produce so much that we do not ofte think in terms of a famine but even here where there is so much produced there are thousands of people that are not properly fed. Nature has not failed us, but somehow the system under which we labor has broken down and we have the problem of bread.

There was also a problem of bread in the days of our Lord. Now we want to see how Jesus solved the problem of bread. Humanly speaking it was impossible to solve it. But the human has the privilege of using the Divine in the solution of its problems. Here was a great company of people, five thousand of them or more. The day was far spent and they had neither bread nor money. One of the disciples said to Jesus, Why, Master, two hundred pennysworth of bread is not sufficient that every one might have a small share. But another disciple said, There is a lad here who has five barley loaves and two small fish. Here was a starting point in the solution of their problem. When people are really anxious to find a solution of their problem they usually find a starting point, at least and that is a good beginning. The problem is not always solved instantaneously, but human endeavor plus Divine help can accomplish great things. So here, they used what they had and had more. They might have mourned until midnight over the smallness of the lad's lunch, but that would not have helped the situation very much.

The work of the church and even our own personal affairs have always been carried on with limited resources, so far as human eyes could see. Even the Church of Christ had very poor prospects at the first. In more than three years our Lord was not able to gather unto himself more people than we think we must have to call it a church. And even then its leader was crucified and his followers fled and it seemed the whole thing had gone to ruin, but it hadn't and that is the thing for us to remember.

Now in feeding the multitude I am sure that our Lord had more in mind than just to satisfy the hunger of mankind, even though the man who gives physical bread is doing a good thing. I think he wanted to teach a very important lesson and one that we ought never to forget, namely, that we must not despite a thing because it is small, and that by using wisely what we have we can usually solve our problems.

The question comes to us, would we, in this matter of fact age, even consider the lad's lunch. To the most of us it would seem entirely too small. We think in terms of great intellects, great industries, great fortunes, great family names, great churches, great armies, great navies, and great everything. In fact, we have thought so much about great things that we have forgotten that even these great things were ever small things. A church that is small these days is handicapped and some people seem to think it cannot do anything. But as I suggested a moment ago, there was a time when all of these things were small. This great network of churches that we have in our day sprang up from the small beginnings of other days. The church grew large because the people were not ashamed of it when it was small. If the people in the days of the early church had said, Well, the number of disciples is small and they are going to have a hard time getting along, and there are no people in it of large means, and if we were to join it we could not improve our social standing very much, so perhaps we had just as well stay out, there never would have been a great church; but they didn't. But those people that followed Jesus saw the miracles which he performed and caught the lessons which he meant to teach and mustered up courage and tackled the job of making the church bigger and better, even though in many cases it meant the loss of their property and even the loss of their lives.

Moreover, there are some people who, because they do not have great intellects and great talents, decide they will not do anything. Some say if they could preach like some preacher they have heard, they would preach, but I doubt it. Others say if they could sing like some singers they have heard they would just give their time and talents to the Lord and to the church. But I do not think so. The person who does not have faith and love enough to use just what the Lord has given them would not be very different if they had larger abilities conferred upon them. It seems to us it would be easy if we were in the other fellow's place, but if we were there we would find it different. "The heights by great men reached and kept were not attained by sudden flight, but they, while their companions slept, were toiling upward through the night." I am fully aware of the fact that natural ability in life counts for a good deal; a good family name is worth much, and many other things help us along; but the things that count for most are faith ni God, faith in God's plan of using the small things to confound the mighty, and a determination to do your best, whether you are engaged in what the world calls a great enterprise or in something that seems small.

Coming back to our original problem, we are still saying, Whence shall we buy bread? This problem is typical of all other problems. Churches are saying, Where shall we get the money for this and that, and how shall we continue to carry on? The state and the nation, in fact the world is face to face with the problem of getting money. Sunday school superintendents are wondering where they are to get teachers. A director of religious education told me some time ago he never in all his lifetime had such a hard time getting teachers. Choir directors are wondering where they are to find singers, and every department of church and state is wrestling with the problem of carrying on. Colleges and orphanages are hard pressed and those at the head of these institutions are spending sleepless nights. In our homes there is anxiety for tomorrow, whether we shall be able to do this or that. This problem is so great I cannot solve it, but I do know this: There has never been a time when there were no problems. And if the people who have done the best work for the church and for the state had not been people with great faith in God and had not had great determination, much of the best work would not have been done.

This is no time for weaklings. This is a time for stout hearts, for men and women of courage and determination. Like the Master of old, let us use what we have, let us give thanks for it, let us lay what we have upon the altar and in His own good way, God will give us more. And while we are struggling along with what little we have our souls will grow larger so when the days of plenty and prosperity shall again come we shall be in a better position to enjoy them. In every way and in every thing, God expects us to do our best. We may not ever live on easy street and we may never have our problems all removed. The Apostle Paul did not have his thorn in the flesh removed but he did have grace to help him endure it. Trust in the Lord and do good, so shalt thou dwell in the land and verily thou shalt be fed.

J. E. Pritchard.

—Old age has nothing to support itself with, but the remembrance of a life innocently passed, and the hope of a better one to come; these are the two crutches upon which old age is borne up.—Erasmus.

AGAINST WHAT MUST THE CHRISTIAN STRUGGLE?

I suppose the old answer usually was, "We must war against the world, the flesh, and the devil"—with special emphasis on the devil.

The devil formerly occupied an important place in the thinking of the average Christian. He was blamed for every evil thing we did. Some victims seemed to think that they were entitled to special consideration because they were smart enough to shift responsibility for what they did onto the head of his Satanic Majesty.

A child sometimes displays an honesty and discernment beyond that of its elders. Susie had been in a scrap with Florence. Her mother was shocked at the bodily harm her small daughter had done, and said to her: "Susie dear, you never should do such things. It was Satan that put it into your heart to so mistreat Florence." Susie replied with frankness: "Maybe Satan put it in my heart to pull Florence's hair and scratch her face; but I certainly thought of kicking her shins myself."

There may be a personal, dart-tailed, cloven-hoofed Satan, second in power only to God Himself—going about seeking whom he may devour. There are those who find comfort in such a belief. But an increasing number find assurance in these lines:

> "This is my Father's world,
> O, let me ne'er forget
> That though the wrong seems oft so strong,
> God is the Ruler yet.
>
> "This is my Father's world,
> Why should my heart be sad?
> The Lord is King—let the heavens ring:
> God reigns; let the earth be glad."

For practical purposes we may confine our present thought to three things against which we find it necessary to contend as we endeavor to achieve Christian manhood and womanhood.

First—We struggle against our animal inheritance. This inheritance is not all bad. We have much of good in common with our animal friends. We have no call to be ashamed of the sacrificial loyalty of the dog, the intense friendliness of the horse, the neighborliness and industry of the house wren, the trustfulness of the young deer and the lamb, the patient service of the ox and the ass, and the tuneful joy-in-life of the robin and the mocking-bird.

Close observation of beasts and men shows that we are in other ways like them. We share in the hoggishness of the swine, the snarling disposition of the wolf, the sliminess of the serpent, the grouchiness of the bear, the cunning thievery of the rat, and the roaring lordly ways of the lion.

The sooner the child becomes aware that he is up against these good and bad dispositions in himself—and sets himself to co-operate with the one group and to overcome the other—the better it will be for him, and for all with whom he is concerned.

Second—We struggle against our mixed human inheritanc. We have one pair of parents, two pairs of grandparents, four pairs of great-grandparents, and eight of great-great-grandparents. The number of our direct ancestors is large, counted by the millions and billions. They are of exceedingly mixed character, and no one knows when the blood of any particular ancestor will become hot and demand wrong action.

It is not sufficient to say—as we sometimes should: "I utterly repudiate my family. These are not my parents—God is my Father. These are not my brothers and sisters—all good people are my brothers and sisters." We must go further and learn to recognize the qualities of the spirits struggling within us for expression—co-operating with the spirits that are ambitious for good, and resisting those that are unworthy and degrading. The Spirit of Life, the Spirit of God, the Spirit of Jesus, the Spirit of a Sound Mind—the Spirit that has worked for good in our ancestors—that is the Spirit that will lead us aright.

One of the joys of living in intimate relations with a variety of people through the years is the delight of seeing the fine improvements that have been made in the characters and lives of many individuals. The world is enriched by the characters and lives of those who have been faithful in this long fight.

Did you ever see in the expression of the eyes and mouth, and in the attitude of your disobedient and disrespectful child a reproduction of yourself? What did you do about it? Did you angrily scold, and perhaps strike the child? Or did you take him closely to your heart and wisely discipline him? But—above all—did you explain him to himself, and join him understandingly in helping him to master himself for his own good?

Third—We struggle against our environment. Our environment is not all bad. God is constantly and persistently around and about us. There is much of light and warmth, beauty and fragrance, and bright song and joyous motion everywhere. These should more largely fill our minds and occupy our time. In so giving ourselves to them we shall be able more richly to live above the vile and degrading.

That there are evil things and evil people appealing to us, we cannot deny. Throughout our whole life there are persons ready to take advantage of our weaknesses and wrong tendencies, and offering to lead us or minister to us in wrongful ways. Terrific storms, lack of proper food and drink, fear of unemployment, dread of old-age poverty, the thorns and weeds and sweat in the midst of which we toil for our daily bread, unfaithfulness of friends, and disloyalty of some whom we had trusted—these are some of the things in our environment against which we struggle.

We are accustomed to think of human nature as imperfect, incomplete, unfinished. And it certainly is. We hope that as time goes on, and the grace of God more and more accomplishes its perfect work in us, our inner life will become better adjusted and living will become more satisfactory. But our physical surroundings also are incomplete, unfinished. God is not thtrough with this material world. Earthquakes still occur. New islands occasionally come up in the midst of the sea, and others sink beneath its surface.

Man has been given dominion. But not yet do we see all things subject unto him. Possibly the farmer and fruit-grower will never succeed in destroying all enemy insects and animals that prey on his crops. But investigators know more about these pests than ever before, and are increasingly effective in defense against their ravages. Perhaps it would not be desirable to level all hills and make straight every crooked highway. But rapid progress is being made in cutting through hills, filling holes, easing curves, and making rough places smooth, so that now men travel on and under, above and through both sea and earth in comparative comfort and safety. We may think of God as declaring: "The heavens are mine. The earth and the sea, the atmosphere and a portion of the stratasphere have I given to men—along with light and heat from the heavenly bodies. These are for man. Let him subdue them and use them."

I have seen a young couple take possession of an area of virgin prarie land in Illinois or Kansas—or an area of virgin timber land in Michigan. They have subdued their holdings, making a good home and beautiful fertile fields. When I go into a country home well warmed, lighted by electricity, hot and cold water flowing through kitchen, laundry, and bath room, telephone and radio at the service of the family, automobile and truck ready for both pleasure and heavy duty on improved roads, an abundance of grain, fruit and vegetables in fields and storehouses, I see what may be—and by skillful planning of the folks shall be—the comfortable material environment of an increasing proportion of our people in the years ahead of us.

Progress, improvement, conquest of self and surroundings. This seems to be God's plan. Let us co-operate with Him in bringing things to pass.

LUTHER K. LONG.

STARTING LIFE WITH A HANDICAP

One of the tragedies of this earth is a malnourished, diseased, or handicapped child. We have many of this type of children in our state. They start life, at a disadvantage from the beginning. During the past twenty years much has been done for these children, but much more remains to be done. With the exception of inherited mental incompetence, nearly all the handicaps are preventable and removable.

We have an immense amount of malnutrition in North Carolina. We have always had it. A few counties report an increase, but the average for the state as a whole is about the same for the past ten years. Most of it is due to the total ignorance of parents concerning food values. Good, wholesome food is frequently ruined in preparation. There is a deficiency in milk. Parents and children indulge the whims of appetite, and a deficiency diet results. It is unthinkable that any child in North Carolina should go without essential food. Climate and soil are perfect for the production of food crops. But children are helpless and they must depend upon the efforts of their parents and the social-minded leaders of the state for protection from preventable diseases and for the provision of adequate food.—Health Bulletin, N. C. State Board of Health.

PREACHERS' RIGHTS

Laymen's Rights was the big word that caused the conception and birth of the Methodist Protestant Church. All through the history of this great church of ours Laymen's Rights has been one of our rock bottom principles which have been greatly emphasized and urged. For a number of years the writer has thought that something should be said about Preachers' Rights. There are many things that might be said in this connection, but it is the purpose of this paper to touch on just a few of these important matters at this time. These are of special importance to us just now, as at conference times we must see these matters and deal with them after the usual manner.

I wonder if it is going too far to say that it is no more than right for a preacher to have a reasonable salary and that the paying of this salary should be looked upon as an obligation as is the paying of any other salary. So many preachers are paid in such a haphazard way that the people to whom he has preached all the year have no feeling of responsibility for the obligation, and at the end of the year if he is paid all right, and if not the matter is passed up lightly, and the conference is asked to return this faithful brother to do the best he can or send another and they forget all unpaid salaries. The cheapest laborer in the land would not be thus treated.

Then preachers are so many times moved from place to place on such little provocation. If reasons are assigned at all they are oftimes silly. Many a preacher has been compelled to move by those who have the least church loyalty or the least interest in the church. Regardless of what it may mean to the preacher or his family, if a people decide a preacher must move he must go. Many a preacher's children have been woefully disturbed in their school work, and even funerals have been necessary because preachers have been moved to try to please some one who did not care. Some people seem to be void of mercy and seem to have gizzards instead of hearts when it means for the preacher to move. As long as we are an itinerant people there will be a necessity for some moving, but it is the right of the preacher and his family that this be done with care and Christian consideration.

The conference will doubtless be asked that certain consolidations be made of churches and charges. This will be done in many instances to make it easier for the people, and it will mean hardship on the preacher. In other words, it will mean the preacher to do what some one else should do. Then it will mean some preacher left out of work. Now, this will not mean some boy left out but it will mean some man who has labored long and faithfully. There will be those who will perhaps advocate giving the President a charge. But to do this it will mean a preacher being left without work. In this case we will save a little money but some preacher will pay the bill. It is to be hoped that Preachers' Rights in this case will be protected by our coming conference.

There are many other places where Preachers' Rights should be emphasized, but these are some of the things that are right before us in a particular way just at this time, and it is hoped that these thoughts may help in some instances.

Be it understood that not a single word in this paper is meant to reflect on the people I am serving. The salary, while not all paid to date, has been assured, it has been fixed for another year without reduction, and the pastor has been asked to return for another year. And moreover, this pastor is not expecting to move.

In the outset of this paper it was stated that Laymen's Rights has always been one of our outstanding principles, and that it is time the order is being reversed and that Preachers' Rights should be emphasized. Now, it will be called to mind that the preachers have done most of the advocating of Laymen's Rights. Now it seems fair that our good laymen should come to the rescue of the preachers by advocating the doctrine of Preachers' Rights. It would be so fine to have a number of our good laymen to come forward preaching for the preachers along this line.

MY EXPERIENCE WITH TOADS

If insects are ravishing your garden, go out on a toad-hunting trip. Bring home two or three; encourage them to remain with you and your insect troubles will be ended.

The toad, it is true, is a type of ugliness. He certainly is decidedly repulsive, but for all that he is capable of a direct and distinct service to man by destroying insects that kill or partialy destroy plants.

In our garden we had hundreds of small plants—flowers and vegetables. Among them the choicest of carnations, small plants. Every morning we found several of these, as well as other plants, cut down. It was a most discouraging situation. One evening we discovered a large toad near our bog pond; evidently on a prospecting tour. One couldn't brag of his beauty; he was square as a brick with warts that could be best described as bumps. As a toad specimen he was the larget fellow we had ever seen.

After taking a seat on a rustic bridge we watched his movements. There was just enough daylight to observe his actions. He lumbered into our carnation bed and for five minutes he was motionless as a stone. We observed a cut-worm working at a carnation at the ground line. Suddenly, out shot the tongue of the toad with lightning rapidity and the juicy cut-worm bade good-bye to earthly scenes. The toad moved along slowly until he came to another plant. Here, after patiently waiting until his victim worked into sight, he snapped up another pest.

We had tried in every possible way to learn what had been destroying our carnations. Almost as fast as we had transferred the small plants from the propagating boxes the pests cut them down. Mr. Toad had found the destroyers and before darkness had covered his movements, four cut-worms had passed the toad's throat. We did not lose a single carnation that night. Mr. Toad was snoozing contentedly, after a good night's work, next to a bit of rock-work. We placed two slabs of rock firmly against his resting-place which prevented the sun from reaching him. This was a cool, shady nook, which we have learned toads seek.

Next evening we looked long and hard before we located him. He was under a cucumber vine. For two years we had been unsuccessful with cucumbers. We had made up our minds to try raising them again this season. It was with great satisfaction we saw the old fellow on the job.

Coming over a swampy place a few evenings later we found another good-sized toad, which we brought home to keep our big fellow company. In order to encourage them to remain we built a small cement basin, two feet wide by three feet long. At the sides we transferred a few shady plants, set up a couple of slabs of rock, filled the basin, and a toads' rendezvous was completed. Before many days we had nine toads in this retreat. Where they came from has always been a mystery to us.

Our garden, which had been overrun with insects for two years, now became healthy and a source of satisfaction. Slug and bug exterminators were no longer purchased. The toads had attended to that part of the work.

One evening a neighbor accidentally killed one with his lawn mower. Here was our chance to prove how great a service the toad is. He had a ravenous appetite; that much we could judge by his bulging pouch. We soon had the contents of his stomach spread out on a board. There were cut-worms by the dozen, caterpillars, thousand-legged worms, beetles, cockroaches, sow-bugs, cabbage worms, cucumber beetles and moths; a snail and a slug an inch and a half long. All told, we counted 103 noxious insects besides flies and smaller bugs. That settled the question as to whether the toad is a friend to mankind. He certainly deserves our protection.

Talking to a professor, who was bugs on bugs, we learned that he had counted in the laboratory under the microscope, more than one thousand bugs and insects in the stomach of a toad. In one toad he found four hard-shelled snails, and from the condition of the shells it was evident that the acid stomach juices of the toad were quite sufficient to dissolve the shell.

We urge all readers to protect the toad. Encourage it to live in your garden by building a small bog pond. Arrange a few rocks or slabs and shady plants in such a manner as to have a shady and cool rendezvous on hot summer days. With such encouragement one can soon bid good-bye to insect troubles. Toads have a strong homing instinct. A gardener tells me of having had two in his garden for more than eight years.

A heavy tax has always been levied by pests, but the toad is now proving itself an efficient check to insect multiplication and ravage. By his good works may he be better known. In a government pamphlet we read that one toad consumes in the summer time 3,360 insects within 30 days. We have our game laws and our bird laws. Hasten the day when we shall have protection for our friend—the toad.—Frederick M. White, in Our Dumb Animals.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Shiloh Church, Shiloh Ct., Rev. R. S. Troxler, pastor.

Asheboro (First Church), Rev. R. C. Stubbins, Pastor

I visited this church at the 11 o'clock hour last Sunday; dropped in as the Sunday school was closing; fine crowd—house full and good interest manifested.

There was a very good congregation at the morning worship period who gave good attention to the message. Here is a congregation that, while it never made spurt gains, has moved along steadily into the ranks of our best churches. During the present pastorate a new parsonage has been built and is being paid for by B. & O.; some of the stock is already paid up, I understand. This parsonage would make any pastor in the conference envious of the present occupants. It is a brick veneer building, well built, two baths, six rooms, with an unfinished upstairs. The house is tastefully arranged and comfortably heated. We congratulate the congregation on the splendid building. Pastor Stubbins is closing his third year and has done good work, and I think there is no change expected at conference. This church has in it some of the best people of our entire denomination, such as the Rosses, Hammers, Reddings, Lewises, Wards, etc., who have been leaders in our denominational life. We made a brief visit to Brother R. R. Ross, who still has a strong interest in his church and welcomes its ministers to his home. The weather was inclement and he was not able to attend church, but appeared to be in his usual health.

Not Yet Understood

I have frequent reminders that although the present plan of stationing our preachers has been in operation for many decades, it is not generally understood by our people. Frequently within the past few weeks I have been asked to make appointments; i. e., I have been requested to tell a delegation what preacher they might expect to get at conference. Even a few preachers have quietly wanted to know if he could not go to such and such a place.

Difficult of Operation

I think I know the difficulty of operating this dual plan of supplying churches with pastors and finding pastorates for preachers. It is even more difficult than it is supposed to be. This difficulty is often accentuated by the failure of the church to know just what type of worker it needs most and by the pastor who does not know the type of work he can best do. No Stationing Committee is wise enough to know all these things; but it may know quite a good deal about it. The committee may know the men much better than the delegates and could if allowed to do it, supply the churches better than the delegates could do it; but the delegates do not often think this is true, so they clamor for some one, the cut of whose coat or whose debonair manner or whose diaphramic expansions appear to be all he thinks a preacher needs to have in order to qualify for the work; and so the tug of war begins.

In Addition

Sometimes the charge tears itself up into strips or bits by factions over the preacher, so that the new preacher has to spend a year or more in reconciling these factions and in trying to get those who once led in the activities of the church even to listen to the new preacher. This is the work of the devil and he is surely well pleased with the success some people make of this work of destruction. It is like an area recently visited by a cyclone with its wrecked buildings and desolation where there once was happiness and industry. This thing ought to be stopped. It is a shame for members of the church who claim to have religion for many years to be caught up in this tornado of prejudice, bitterness and hatred and thereby help to destroy that which they built with so great labor. These contentions usually come from little things. A misunderstanding of some word or act; a failure to grasp the real meaning of the mission of the pastor, or some selfish whim which if entirely gratified would help no one nor even bring respect to the name of its proponent. I have earnestly prayed that we might be delivered from this evil.

When You Come to Conference

Please remember that you are coming to YOUR Conference—to the house of your friends and that the Stationing Committee of all people there wants to help both pastor and delegate to find a field and a worker which fit together perfectly and work with great concord. No sane man on the Stationing Committee would attempt to hurt either preacher or pastorate by a misfit, if they could avoid it. They can get no glory out of failure, nor peace of mind out of making both pastor and people unhappy by an appointment which was obviously unwise and might with ease be avoided.

But—

The charges are to be supplied with men and the men in so far as possible are to be given work. This always calls for great patience, for mutual understanding, for faith and a willingness "to give and take" in order that the entire conference shall be supplied. No preacher should bind himself by pledges he has no right to make about returning for another year, and no delegate should demand that his charge shall have a certain pastor or no pastor. Such practices have never helped the cause—they have ruined the pastor as well as the pastorate in certain cases. Let us all go to conference with an attitude formed by a prayerful consideration of the ENTIRE conference and then let us pray that we shall permit nothing to change this attitude of friendliness and helpfulness. Don't station the preachers in the meetings of your curb cabinets with too great certainty; remember that agitation often means irritation and friction. Unhealable hurts have been made by the too frank discussion of the foibles of a preacher or the failures of some pastoral charge. I know ministers who carried with them to their graves scars made in such a manner by some preacher friend who only meant to have some fun, but it went like a dart into the memory of some delegate who broadcast the story with too great effectiveness, and thus limited the area of service of a very good man. Since none are without faults, let's cast no stones.

The Honor Roll of Churches and Charges

We refer you to the Journal of last year to page 75 where you can determine whether your charge, if all churches on it paid certain amounts, are entitled to be listed as on Honor Roll A or B or C or D. And if you have several churches or more than one on your charge which has met the requirement list it as being on Honor Roll A for A. C. B., D for W. S., or however it shall be.

Those Report Blanks

Every pastor should have in his hand certain blanks for his report to Conference, sent out by the Secretary. Please make our report accurate. Some are approximations so that the report is often worthless after it is printed.

Journals for Next Year

Every pastor should carry with him to conference the number of Journals his charge or that charge wants for next year; these having been subscribed for by certain individuals are to be delivered to them when printed, and thus it may be known how many Journals should be printed for 1934.

R. M. Andrews.

TO REBUILD NERVES

1. Rest, rest, rest. Lie down when possible and completely relax. Try to obtain at night eight hours sleep or more, in a well-ventilated room.
2. Reduce all exercise to a minimum. Rest is the vital thing.
3. Omit as much as possible all avocations, activities, entertainments, and sustained talking. Seek quiet and peace.
4. Keep the body scrupulously clean.
5. Banish distressing thoughts, such as worry, fear, anger and resentment. Cultivate calmness.
6. Eat only plain food and masticate it to a cream.
7. In earnest daily prayer ask the Great Physician to help you.

Grenville Kleiser.

Come to Conference Prepared . . . . .

To renew your subscription to the Herald.

To pay up any arrearages in your subscription to the Herald.

With a bunch of subscriptions for the Herald.

To finish out what is due from your charge for Herald Subsidy.

I shall be glad to take charge of any funds or subscriptions you may have for the Herald.

OUR STORY PAGE

"HE DIDN'T LAUGH AT ME"

"Mamma," said Edith the other day, "I don't like boys. I'm glad I haven't a little brother."

"Why, Edith?"

"Because they always tease little girls so, and make them cry, and then they laugh at them."

"Do all the little boys laugh at you when you cry?"

"Yes, all but Robbie Shriver. I fell down at school the other day and hurt my head, and they just laughed at me—all but Robbie, and he came and helped me up, and said he was very sorry I was hurt; and he didn't laugh a bit."

"That certainly was very nice of Robbie," said mamma, as she gave Edith's cheek a kiss.

"Yes, Mamma, Robbie Shriver is the only boy that I really like, because he never laughs at me."

That was a great compliment to Robbie. It shows that he is a gentle boy, and when he grows up he will be a gentle man, or gentleman. Little boys who are rude to their sisters or to other girls, and who love to tease them and laugh at them ought to think of this; and if they want to be gentlemen when they grow up, they ought to begin now by being gentle boys.—Unknown.

WHAT AM I GOOD FOR?

A gentleman, while speaking to some children, took out his watch and asked what it was for.

"To tell the time," the children answered.

"Well, suppose it won't keep time, what is it good for?"

"It is good for nothing," they replied.

He then took out a lead pencil, and asked what it was for.

"It is to mark with," was the answer.

"But supposing the lead is out, and it won't mark, what is it good for?"

"It's good for nothing."

He took out a pocket-knife, and asked what was its use.

"To sharpen pencils with," said some. "To cut with," said others.

"Suppose it has no blade, then what is it good for?"

"Good for nothing."

"Then a watch, or pencil, or knife is good for nothing unless each can do the thing for which it is made?"

"Yes, sir," the children all answered.

"Well, what is a boy or girl made for?"

The children hesitated.

"The chief end of man is to glorify God and to enjoy Him forever," said the gentleman.

"Now, then, if a boy or girl does not do what he or she is made for, and glorify God, what is he or she good for?"

And the children all answered, without seeming to think how it would sound, "Good for nothing."

Now, boys and girls, God made you and gave you the powers you possess, and so He has the first claim upon you. If you construct a machine, you expect to get the benefit of your work; and if, after making it, you spend money in keeping it in order, you expect it to be useful to you.

Well, if children are made to glorify God, and they don't do it, are they good for anything? It is so much more important that they should glorify God, and be prepared to enjoy Him forever, than anything else, that if they fail to do this, it is as though they failed in everything. How can you glorify God, seeing that you are a sinner and therefore unfit for His holy presence? You must be converted, seeing the Lord Jesus said, "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 18:3). Then, having entered the Kingdom, your sins will be forgiven. "I write unto you, little children, because your sins are forgiven you for His Name's sake" (I John 2:12). Then you will begin to love God, for we read, "We love Him, because He first loved us" (I John 4:19). Without love to God, all other things are as nothing.

Are you answering the end for which you were made? If not, what are you good for? Think of the children's answer, "Good for nothing."—Apples of Gold.

WILL CHINA GO MILITARY?

A letter from Manila, Philippine Islands, to the Christian Century tells of an international Y. M. C. A. conference held in Baguio. There were present fifty delegates from India, China, Korea, Japan, Siam, the Dutch East Indies, the Hawaian Islands, the work among the Russian emigres, and the Philippine Islands.

There was agreement on most matters discussed. The advocates of non-violence had their way in formulating the declaration as to war, with the exception of China. One delegate from that country said he could not return to Chinese youth with such a declaration against the use of military force. He is reported to have said: "We must teach the Chinese how to fight if our nation is to endure. This declaration of non-violence may be all right for Japan and America. But our people will say: 'The United States is building 21 warships and Japan is spending millions on armaments. What value has such a statement from a conference where Japanese and Americans predominate?' "

Many of us have figured that China—a non-militaristic people throughout their long history—might continue as such. Japan might subdue some of the fringes of that country. But the interior of China would not be touched, and, eventually, those subdued fringes and the Japanese inhabitants would be reabsorbed into the Celestial Empire, or Republic.

But who shall say her nay, if China decides to awaken and grasp the sword and gun, and rises in the air with tons of death-dealing explosives? I am for peace. But if there is to be war, the Chinese should be allowed to defend themselves. After they have demonstrated their right and power in their own land, perhaps they will lead the decimated populations that have attacked them in the work of establishing the universal reign of peace throughout the world.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

WOMEN'S WORK AT CONFERENCE

The women of our churches are invited to attend the Annual Conference any day, but especially on Thursday. Mrs. William C. Hammer, Branch President, and President of the Missionary Convention, will make a report on the general condition and needs of our various departments of work as well as a comprehensive report of the work in North Carolina during the past year.

A program of great interest to both men and women will be presented on Thursday night. This will portray some phases of the work of our own Mr. Minnis and wife. A plan for raising his salary will be outlined by Mrs. C. W. Bates, and efforts will be made to secure funds to keep him in India and prevent the closing of his department of our mission work there. His work is most vital, as it deals with the evangelistic, agricultural and health problems of the working people.

We must stand by Mr. Minnis. He represents us. If his work ceases, we alone will be to blame. Come to the help of the Board against the mighty forces of evil. Women, it seems to be "up to" us.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN,
Corresponding Sec'y.

SPRING CHURCH CIRCUIT AUXILIARY

On Wednesday, November 1, at 2:30 p. m., the Spring Church Circuit Auxiliary met in the home of Mrs. J. Clifton Cook, with the biggest attendance we have had this year. There were 15 active members present, one honorary, six adult visitors and seven children. Rev. Wm. H. Neese conducted the devotionals. The dress committee reported 12 dresses made and sold since last meeting. The society authorized the treasurer, Mrs. H. E. Vassar, to send Mrs. Taylor a check for $8 on our World Service budget.

The third and last thank-offering service for the fall was reported by the thank-offering secretary. It was found that the three services had added $23.75 to the budget. Right here I wish to mention something that our Auxiliary did that others might find helpful. I'm passing it on to you. A number of our members are mothers with children too small to go to school who attend the meetings every time their mothers do, so it was suggested by one of the members that these children be organized into a Precious Jewel Band in connection with the Circuit Auxiliary. The following are names of our Precious Jewels: Little Miss Phronsa March Mitchell, Barbara Anne Cooke and Masters John Milliard Glover, Thomas Milton Crew and James Neilson Mitchell. We hope all these will grow up to be strong leaders in our church, and, who knows, maybe we have a future missionary in one of them. Each mother is asked to pay 15 cents a year for their Precious Jewel.

Mrs. M. L. Crew was program leader. Two helpful and interesting papers were read. Miss Mary David read "Answered Prayer in Home Missionary Work," and Mrs. H. E. Vassar read "Answered Prayer in Foreign Missionary Work." Since the Question Box leader was absent, the President asked the writer to conduct the Question Box.

Mrs. Cook served delicious refreshments to those present.

I want to add another feature that we are finding helpful in our Auxiliary, and that is we are meeting in the homes of members who have not been able to attend the meetings. We find that this increases our attendance.

MRS. Wm. H. NEESE.

THE MINNIS' SALARY TO DATE

You are probably interested in knowing what progress is being made on raising Mr. Minnis' salary. At the last report we had raised $209.95 on the $1,000 pledged. The following amounts have come in since:

Chestnut Ridge	$ 1.00
Grace	10.00
Siler City	10.00
Efland	2.00
Haw River	7.00
Spring Church Circuit Auxiliary	1.43
Burlington, First	10.00

On Minnis Calendar

Asheboro	$ 5.00
Grace	2.10
Calvary	1.45
State Street, Lexington	1.00
Reidsville	1.00
High Point, First	1.00
Gibsonville	1.00
Community Church, Thomasville	.50
First Church, Thomasville	.50

Remember, this calendar will be posted at Conference. Please collect your dimes, quarters and halves as rapidly as possible; and do not neglect your larger amounts, for we need a little more than $700 to complete our pledge. WE MUST NOT FAIL MR. MINNIS. He is carrying on for us.

MRS. C. W. BATES.

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE SESSION

The Executive Committee of the North Carolina Branch of Women's Work of the Methodist Protestant Church met November 1 at 10 a. m. at the home of Mrs. C. L. Whitaker in High Point. Mrs. W. C. Hammer, president, called the meeting to order. Mrs. H. W. Maier conducted a beautiful devotional service, using Leonard de Vinci's matchless painting, "The Last Supper." Mrs. Maier gave a vivid interpretation of the picture, after which the devotional period closed with silent prayer.

The roll call showed six officers, nine departmental secretaries and district chairmen, and three visitors present. The report of the corresponding secretary was given by Mrs. George R. Brown. Her report, she stated, was incomplete because only 39 of the 80 report blanks sent out were returned. One new Auxiliary was organized at Lebanon, Spring Church Circuit. Burlington has the largest number of members and most new ones. Maple Springs has largest per cent of active women and of Record subscriptions. Asheboro has largest number of Record subscribers. Three or four Auxiliaries sent boxes to Pine Ridge and quite a number reported special work for Children's Home and College. Mrs. Brown asked for suggestions for raising money, and among those given were, "Friendship Basket," "Feeding the Pig," "Penny Chart," and "Dime Helper."

In the absence of Mrs. S. W. Taylor, treasurer, Miss Mary Young read her report, which showed total receipts of $3,438.52, total expenditures $3,381.85, balance $56.69. Mrs. Hammer gave a comparative report of the receipts of the Board of Missions, which revealed that the total receipts for last year were over $40,000, while this year's total is around $21,000.

Mrs. Bates read a letter from Mr. Minnis. Discussion of the urgent needs of his department of work in India followed.

Mrs. R. M. Andrews, Secretary of Temperance, reported only five contestants for prize winning essay on "Why the Eighteenth Amendment Should Not Be Repealed." Mrs. Andrews requested that Executive Committee go on record as urging that all church people go to polls and vote "No Convention," and dry ticket on November 7th, the request to be published in Herald, if possible.

The report of Miss Young, assistant treasurer, showed a balance of $832.50, and two loans applied for and granted so far this year.

The Chairman of Districts, Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, reported several district meetings attended, and that she or Mrs. Hammer expect to visit each of the 18 district meetings before Branch Meeting.

Committee adjourned for lunch, which was served in the college dining room.

Upon reconvening, the discussion of raising Mr. Minnis' salary was resumed. Mrs. Bates reported two large gifts and less than $100 from the rest of the North Carolina Church. She explained in detail the Calendar Plan, and urged that one calendar be completed and be exhibited at Conference. Members of the committee contributed $11.10 for this purpose.

Program for Missionary Evening of Conference was discussed, and Mrs. E. L. Ballard and Mrs. C. W. Bates were asked to be responsible for program. Mrs. Hammer was requested to speak on Women's Work before Conference on Thursday.

The following secretaries made interesting reports: Thank-offering, Mrs. J. W. Boyles; Christian Education, Mrs. H. W. Maier; Literature, Mrs. D. S. Coltrane; Young People, Mrs. A. H. Ragan; Benevolences, Dr. Glascock; Student Loan Fund for High Point College, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker; Children's Home, Mrs. C. W. Bates. Mrs. J. S. Williams, secretary of Bethel Home, sent a written report, stating that Mr. Casto was not so well, and requesting the prayers of the committee.

Dr. Glascock led in the closing prayer, especially remembering the sick at Bethel Home and Miss Velna McCulloch.

The Committee adjourned to meet in January at the Children's Home.

MRS. C. L. KOONTS, Rec. Sec'y.

THE OCTAGON COUPON CONTEST

Mrs. Dixon tells me that Octagon Coupons will be worth more by 10 per cent during the next month than they have been or are likely to be again for some time. They have been a wonderful help to the Home and will continue to be; but for the next month they have an increased value owing to a special offer from the Colgate Company. So let's rush our coupons in and take advantage of this special offer. This is one way we can make an extra dollar for the Home without taking anything out of our pockets.

The contest closed with the 30th of Octo-

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

St. Paul, Greensboro.—Since our last report we have held a two weeks' revival meeting with Rev. Mr. Anderson, of Albemarle, as our pulpit help. He preached some soul-stirring sermons and held a good congregation throughout the meeting and while the meeting was not what we had hoped for, we feel sure the church has been helped by tis meeting and by Mr. Anderson's preaching, and we hope he can come our way again.

Bro. Millaway preached the fourth Sunday, as our pastor was suffering from a severe cold.

The Ladies' Aid held their October meeting with Mrs. J. S. Wade and elected new officers for the new Conference year; also planned a plate supper at the hut for last Saturday night; it was a real success.

The Royal Blue class held their class meeting last week with a large crowd out to take part in electing new officers and after the business meeting was over sandwiches, cake and hot coffee were served.

Mr. Garner gave us one of his best sermons last Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour, but why say one of his best when all of them are good?

Next Sunday morning the Sunday school will elect new officers for the new Conference year.

Monday night of this week the last quarterly conference will be held. We are glad to say that this has been a very good year at St. Paul and we are nearer paid up than we have been in a long time at the close of the year.

MRS. J. S. WADE, Reporter.

Pinnacle.—Our fourth quarterly conference was held at this church the fifth Sunday in October with all of the churches represented. Every church reported a strong Sunday school in regard to interest manifested, but with a diminished attendance. It seems that the great trouble, though, is the question of finances. Bro. Hunter, our pastor, left it to the discretion of every church as to whether he would be back for the coming year, and so he comes back by 100 per cent. The reporter wishes to thank, through the medium of this paper, those persons who offered words of encouragement to a "struggling reporter" this past year. Also he wishes to congratulate other church officers who have also had a hard struggle the past year. I'm sure that each and every one of us has been showered with blessings as we deserved them. I especially want to offer Bro. W. E. Jones, our Sunday school superintendent, my heartiest congratulations for his faithfulness in the discharge of his duties in that capacity.

It seems that the tide of thought swings "wet" for a while, then "dry" for a while. Christian people, let's all stick together for once and not let our state get any wetter. Vote dry, and stay dry.

Our church has its annual meeting on November 8, and at that time new officers will be sworn in, while others' services will be retained. Incidentally, a new reporter will take the paper and pen at that time..

It's very hard to break the tie that binds us as old Mount Zion binds her members together; it's the one thing that every member of Mount Zion finds so hard to do, but nevertheless, a change is sometimes deemed best. But Mount Zion always has been and always will be my home. I'll stick to her as long as she remains Mount Zion.

In closing let me once more offer thanks and congratulations to each and every one who has tried to make this a successful year, and may God's richest blessings be with you the ensuing year and make the harvest the richest ever, spiritually.

C. R. MICKELS, Reporter.

P. S. I would also like to express my appreciation for the courtesy shown me in regard to the publishing of my reports; also, I wish to express my appreciation for our paper, and offer these suggestions to Methodist Protestants. Take it. Read it. Talk it, and act it. REPORTER.

Roberta Charge.—A memorial service was held at our church October 8th in honor of Miss Mae D. Blackwelder. Our dear sister was a true and loyal member in our church, but God saw fit to call her home. She was missed so much by her friends and loved ones that they wishes to show their love and respect for her in this way. Rev. T. A. Williams, our postor, made a talk on "Miss Mae As I Knew Her in the Church;" Mr. J. B. Robertson, former superintendent of the public schools in Cabarras County, made a talk on "Miss Mae As I Knew Her in the School," and Mr. Norman, of the Ritchies Hardware Company, made an appropriate talk on "Miss Mae As I Knew Her in the Business World." A beautiful song service was held in connection with these talks. The service was completed at the grave. The grave was covered with beautiful flowers. The choir sang a dear old hymn and the service closed with prayer.

MRS. OMEY PENNINGER, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—Our services at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Sunday were fairly well attended, considering the inclement weather. The pastor and family spent most of the day Saturday visiting among the people of Baltimore church. We enjoyed a good dinner at the home of Bro. Jerry Kelly. Saturday night was spent in the splendid home of Bro. A. A. Doub, who was delegate to the Annual Conference last year. We stopped at the home of Rev. J. W. Doub three times during Saturday and Sunday, after learning that he was ill and confined to his room. Bro. Doub is in very feeble health. He has attended the services at Baltimore church only once in three months. Bro. Doub has been the leader of Baltimore church for the past 60 years, having served as superintendent of the Sunday school for 55 years. We trust that his illness will be of short duration. He is 80 years old. We enjoyed a good dinner in the home of Bro. Evan Doub Sunday.

Owing to the downpour of rain before and during the services at Stony Knoll we did not have many of our people present. Owing to this, it was decided to have another service there next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. That will be an extra service and will give the people who were not present last Sunday an opportunity to attend, and also those who were present last Sunday to attend the service.

The pastor and family are thankful for a number of gifts received from members of Baltimore church last Sunday. Our car was almost filled with various donations. We appreciate the spirit in which the gifts were made. We appreciate more than we can express the attitude of the people of the charge who have given exressions of their desire for the present pastoral relation to continue for another year. We have served West Forsyth Charge for five years, and have thoroughly enjoyed the work and the co-operation on the part of the people at all six churches. One-half of our active ministry has been on this charge, which is composed of some of the best people we have ever served.

The last regular appointment for this conference year will be at Union Hill church next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. This church has had the second Sunday in November for their appointment for a number of years, and heretofore did not have a service in November on account of the Annual Conference being in session. This year the church will have a service, which will be the last for this Conference year. We will be at Stony Knoll at 3 o'clock for an extra service.

May the approaching Annual Conference be recorded in the history of the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina as one of the most successful and harmonious sessions. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Kannapolis.—We are ending our first year of pastoral experience, and the next week we will submit our first report to the Annual Conference. It seems appropriate at this time to submit a reort to the Methodist Protestant people of North Carolina through the Herald. Rather, it may be termed an appraisal of our plant here and the fine spirit of co-operation which characterizes the people of Kannapolis church.

We began the year with a financial handicap, being in debt around $200.00. At this time the mills were running very poorly, and it was not until early spring that we began to get on our feet. Later in the spring a Tithers' League was organized, and since that time we have been able to realize everything paid in full, including the Building and Loan and other local interests. At present we are on the Honor Roll all the way around. Besides this, a number of improvements in the church have been realized, including new hymnals, book-racks, and church bulletins. The Lord has blessed us with two great revivals in which 135 were converted and an increase in membership of 58.

I mention these things only by way of explanation and in no sense boastingly. The fact is that the members of the church are largely responsible for any degree of success that we have had this year. I have been supported by a fine spirit of co-operation, for which I commend these good, loyal Methodist Protestants. I doubt if such loyalty and co-operation could be found in many of our churches.

May I express my thanks to these people for the fine tailored suit of clothes which they presented to me this week. Mrs. C. L Hampton broke the good news to me, and it came as a very pleasant surprise before leaving for conference. Also, I wish to thank the following for giving me one quilt each: Mrs. N. F. Harris, a beautiful velvet quilt; Mrs. L. C. Carter, Mrs. Eugene Grayson, and Mrs. Dwiggins. These quilts will come in very handy during the cold winter months.

Again let me thank these people for their splendid support and co-operation given me the last year. The Kannapolis people have won a place in my heart, and should I not return next year as their pastor I want to bid them God-speed. This year's work has been a pleasure and a joy, one that I shall not soon forget. I wish for them an even better year next year.

Remember us in your prayers.

C. P. MORRIS, Pastor.

Greer's Chapel, Shiloh Charge.—It has been a long while since anything has been written from Greer's Chapel, but silence has not meant that the work is not going on with increasing zeal. All who are interested in and eager for the spiritual growth and welfare of the church are putting all their efforts and energy behind the work and are reaching goals and realizing dreams.

We are afraid we are going to lose our beloved pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, this year. He has served us faithfully for the past six years. He as a pastor has delivered some of the most inspiring sermons ever heard here. He has been faithful in all his undertakings, and is loved by everyone. Mrs. Troxler will be greatly missed and will the children. There are none better than these people—always real friends to all who will let them be friends. We hope for Pastor and Mrs. Troxler one of the best places in the Conference, for they are worthy of the place.

As the Annual Conference year will soon close we realize that we have much to be done in the few days that remain. May we link together and take our share of the burden and do our part the very best we can.

Let me say again, I hope for Rev. and Mrs. Troxler a real good place.

REPORTER.

Charlotte, First Church.—I have stayed out of print, but I have been in the field. A most busy year is coming to a close. The work has done well under the circumstances. Until only recently our people, or many of them, have had from little to no work. At present this condition is much improved. Most of our membership are doing something, receiving something and paying something to the church. We will not be able to pay all of the A. C. B. or G. C. B., but will have something to apply on them. All current expenses, including $720.00 on the debt, together with Herald deficit and subscriptions, superannuates, Sunday school and Christian Endeavor assessments to the Conference Council of Religious Education will be paid. Something has been paid on back obligations.

Fifty-six members have been received into membership of the church. Have conducted seven evangelistic meetings outside of the local church. During the year have preached an average of five sermons per week, with an average result of one profession for each sermon. One hundred and twelve members joined the churches as a result of the meetings. Among the men assisted were Rev. Robert Short, at Denton; Rev. J. D. Morris, at Bess Chapel, and Rev. D. D. Broom, at Vickory Chapel, of the M. E. Church, South; also at Frace Chapel; Rev. W. Clark Dutton at North Monroe (twice), and Rev. J. A. Hendry at Nebraska Avenue, Tampa, Fla. All these brethren were most cordial and co-operative, and I greatly appreciate all of them and what they are doing.

All organizations of the church are functioning at about normal. The Sunday school is certainly gaining. The Young People's C. E. Society continues with an even tenure, holding interesting and well attended meetings.

The every member canvass will be held next Sunday.

Blessings and prayers for all the ministers and churches for a good day the final Sunday of the year.

G. H. HENDRY.

Draper.—As our time for Annual Conference is so close at hand will try to get this report in.

We are glad that our church is on the honor roll on all claims. We have labored here with these good folks for three years and have enjoyed our work. There are no better people anywhere than here. They are faithful and loyal to their church and pastor. They pay all that they promise; in fact, my salary has been overpaid and then all our budget paid in full.

We held our fourth quarterly conference last Wednesday night, November 1. All of the official board was present except two, and the best spirit prevailed I think I have ever witnessed. Everyone seemed to enjoy the conference. Our delegate was duly instructed and our alternate, Bro. W. M. Keaton, was elected.

We observed Communion service yesterday with all the adults partaking. I have never seen it just that way before.

Now as the year comes to an end and I soon shall have to leave this people, it fills my heart with grief; but I feel that I must labor somewhere else next year. I hope and pray that our church here will get a good pastor who will build the work here. They deserve a real good pastor.

May I ask all Christian people to pray for the work here and also for the writer.

R. L. VICKERY, Pastor.

Palestine, Flat Rock Circuit.—Our beloved pastor has filled all his appointments at our church for this Conference year. Pastor Hutton has preached good sermons. He has been plain, so plain that even a little child could understand and the older ones just love to hear him. In fact, I heard a very aged member say he could sit on a rock and listen to Brother Hutton preach all day long, and this reporter is pretty sure those that haven't enjoyed Brother Hutton's sweet sermons are the ones that stay at home to read the Sunday paper and do I hear someone say, That is always the one that wants to change pastors? Oh, yes, he takes up collection every Sunday, or his sermons are too long. Be that as it may, we are proud of our dear pastor, who has meant so very much to some of us, and it wodld seem very much like giving up one of our family to have him leave this work again. This family has always loved Pastor Hutton and since the death of our dear mother, Brother Hutton has spoken so many kind and tender words and extended so much sympathy we cannot bear the thought of him not coming back. We are hoping and praying that Conference will send him back.

Our pastor's salary was paid in full for this year; balance on last year's salary paid in full; some paid on budgets.

GRACE R. TUCKER, Reporter.

Baltimore.—Rev. Wade Adams preached an excellent temperance sermon October 29th, at 7 p. m. His text, Proverbs 20:1. Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. There was a fairly large crowd present. Baltimore is in the fight against the repeal of the 18th Amendment. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We had 90 present last Sunday. We have 168 on roll.

Rev. C. B. Way filled his regular appointment Sunday, November 5, at 11 a. m., it being his last appointment for the Conference year. We were glad to have a large crowd present Sunday to greet our pastor, Rev. C. B. Way, who delivered an interesting sermon. His text, Acts 4:13, and they had took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus. The sum of the sermon: We should make our lives such that the world may see Jesus in us. We all hope to have him back with us again. He has been on this charge for five years and has always brought a message of help and encouragement to his audience.

Our lessons during this quarter have been both interesting and inspiring, the lessons have dealt largely with the church and our obligations to it as church members.

Mr. John W. Doub is very sick has not been able to come out to church for the past few weeks.

LILLIE SPEER, Reporter.

Tabernacle-Julian.—At our quarterly conference some time ago it was found that our finances were far behind, but since that time this condition has cleared up somewhat. The salary was fixed for next year the same as for this year. The pastor was asked to return and Bro. C. A. Smith was elected alternate delegate.

Our officers have been elected at both churches. This work was done by nominating committees. The names of nominees were placed on ballots and each qualified member was given a chance to vote as by Australian ballot. The plan worked well, and the people seem to be well pleased with the idea. The officers at Tabernacle were installed on October 29. It was planned to install the Julian officers last Sunday night, but rain necessitated the postponement of the service until next Sunday night.

Miss Virginia Jackson, who is a member of Star Methodist Protestant church, of Baltimore, Md., is visiting the pastor and family at this time. We are glad to have her in our midst and we of course are glad to have her in our services on last Sunday. Miss Jessie Curry, of Greensboro, and Miss Margaret, of the Children's Home and High Point College, spent the week-end in the parsonage visiting homefolks. We are always glad to have the girls come home.

While everything has not been as we had hoped for, this has been a most pleasant year. The people have been fine and it has been a delight to work with them. People can make life very pleasant or very unpleasant for a preacher and his family. These people have given us to understand that they prefer the pleasant life and the pastor and family have not failed to find it out. The pastor feels that he has fewer gray hairs now than a year ago. We thank you, good folks, for your good spirit that has made us so happy, and God bless you every one.

GEO. L. CURRY.

Shiloh.—The fifth Sunday of October was Rally Day at Shiloh church for Shiloh Circuit. Bro. R. S. Troxler gave us a great message from Judges 7:7. God spake to Gideon, even while he was hiding for fear of the Midianites. When God called Gideon, He said "I'll be with you." Jesus never sent discipes out into world service until He said "I'll me with you." God Himself sifted the workers for men that He could use. When the testing was completed, only 300 men remained. They were the watchful, earnest souls of the whole 32,000 that answered the first call for volunteers. We can not live in a slip-shod way and expect to get to heaven. God can not use cowards; He needs, not so much, numbers, but watchful men.

After dinner on the ground and a pleasant social hour, we re-assembled in the church for the Rally service. Splendid music was rendered by the choirs of each church. Then talks were made by the superintendents of the Sunday schools, who were H. A. Leonard of Shiloh, M. W. Byerly of Friendship, and Stamey Fitzgerald, of Greer's Chapel.

Mr. Ray Leatherman gave a lively report from the C. E. Society, saying among other things that they had raised this year $170.

The last thing on the program was an inspiring address on "Helping Others," by Rev. C. E. Roach, pastor of Reeds Baptist church.

Today, the first Sunday of November, was Bro. Troxler's last service with us this Conference year. The Scripture text for his inspiring message was found in Acts 1:54-60, which was the account of Stephen's martyrdom. Christ is our perfect example. All things that we long to do, yet in our weakness fail to do, Jesus did. His feet never slipped. But even though we cannot attain the perfect life of Jesus, we can reach out after it; and the closer we live to Jesus, the more like him we become. Christ is able to succor His children.

The privilege of worshiping in our own church today is ours because men and women have spilled their life's blood for that privilege. Even our Bible, that we may purchase for a few coins, cost the red blood of those who dared to translate it, yet so many care so little about these privileges. Stephen, who gave his life for his faith, was wise and held to the right in the face of danger; he was spirit-filled, and had no time to live at ease. He won souls for the Master, but the enemy blocked his progress. Stephen reasoned with his enemies and used as his weapon the Word, which is the sword of the Spirit. That sword pierced through and enraged them so that reason was cast aside and God's saint was stoned. As he firmly stood on the Rock of Ages, God rolled back the curtain of Heaven and he saw Jesus on God's right hand, who reached down for his bleeding child, and Stephen fell asleep.

The church roll was called and the amount each member paid this year called after the name. Very few contributed nothing, and many were liberal indeed. Shiloh is sending her pastor to Conference with salary and all budgets paid in full.

Church officers for the ensuing year were elected today. The names of trustees and stewards were called too fast for me to get them all, but will give the names of the others: Sunday school superintendent, H. H. Leonard; class leaders, Jeff Berrier, Jeff Fritts, Robert Sink; pianist, Mabel Berrier; choir leader, Floyd Leonard; treasurer, J. L. Evans.

For the next year you will have for your reporter one of our most faithful and efficient young women, namely, Mrs. Raymond Fritts. You may expect good reports from Shiloh, for whatever Mrs. Fritts does, she does it well.

Our hearts were sad today because of the thought that Bro. Troxler may not come back to us next year. We wish that he might yet come back to us again; but if he is called to other fields, our tenderest affections and prayers will follow him wherever he goes, and we will always have for him and his family a warm welcome back into our midst. We pray God to send us another shepherd who shall lead us into paths of service for our Christ as Bro. Troxler has done. God forbid that any should fall out of line, because tender ties must be broken, but take up the cross, follow Christ and trust Him to keep us under His wing.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Our last quarterly conference has already been held and voted unanimously for the return of our present pastor. Mr. Williams has been with us a long time and has labored faithfully, and we would regret very much to lose him. We have learned to love him and his family and we think no other could quite fill his place. We hope Conference will return him to us for another year.

Our business meeting was held, the church register revised and officers elected for the new year. Few changes were made. One new steward was added and Miss Pattye Crutchfield is our new reporter. Here's hoping she will be more faithful to her duties than the present reporter has been.

Our Sunday school is good in attendance and the interest shown is encouraging. We as older people should feel the responsibility of training our youth more keenly, I sometimes think. When we see such a large number of boys and girls under our teaching, may God help us to make the most of our opportunities as we come in contact with them.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Concord, Saxapahaw Charge.—We were very glad indeed to have Bro. Waldo Woody of the Friends church to speak to us the fifth Sunday evening. Everyone enjoyed his splendid message, and we hope that he will come back again.

Our pastor gave us another good sermon Sunday. This being the last appointment before Conference, at the close of the sermon the officers were installed for the coming year. This was done in connection with the observance of the Lord's Supper, which was very impressive.

At the last quarterly conference Brother Loy was called back for another year. We hope that the Annual Conference will see fit to send him back to us.

We were very glad to see Brother T. H. Moore back at church Sunday after being ill for some time; hope his health will remain so that he may be present every Sunday.

Our Sunday school is growing in attendance now; hope it will continue until we have everybody in our community in Sunday school.

Bethel, Mocksville Charge.—On the third Sunday in August we held our special meeting with Rev. J. R. Hutton and W. M. Howard as pulpit help. Bro. Hutton did the preaching. We sure enjoyed hearing him so much. The church was revived and there was one accession to the church.

In the afternoon on the same Sunday we held our home-coming service. There was no preaching, but a short talk by pastor and prayer by Mr. Mock. A number of short talks by the old Sunday school superintendents and others were made. The Union Ridge choir, with Mr. Blair-Mock sang a number of selections, which were enjoyed very much. The Bethel quartet also sang several splendid selections. The honor roll of the dead was read and a small amount of the history of the church given.

Sunday school is good. We have prayer service every Sunday night.

Our last quarterly conference was held at the parsonage with very good attendance. Finances are behind; hope to do better yet.

First Church, High Point.—The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the 11 o'clock hour Sunday morning, and a large number of communicants joined in this solemn service in which the pastor was assisted by Dr. A. G. Dixon and Mr. Vernon W. Idol. A sweet and interesting feature of this period was the baptism of Patsy Henrietta Auman, baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Furman R. Auman. This winsome little lady, who is 15 months of age, is the second child of these young parents. Another little girl, Margaret Elizabeth Peace, united with the church on confession of faith, and Miss Margaret Patterson transferred her membership from Shiloh church on Liberty charge, Rev. Fred Love, pastor.

On Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock the service was in charge of the choir, which presented a lovely musical program, being augmented by some local artists. The choir appeared in the new vestments, which added to the solemnity of the occasion. Clarence Schultheiss, popular and well known tenor of High Point, rendered a beautiful solo; Miss Anne Robbins also sang a solo with pleasing effect; a trio was rendered by Mesdames J. H. Allred and J. C. Whitesell and Arthur Fidler; Mesdames Allred and Whitesell sang a lovely duet, and the choir rendered two anthems, which were well received. The pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, gave a splendid brief address on "The Great Influence Which Music Makes on Human Lives," in which he declared that music is one of God's greatest means of interpreting His love to us. Whether the heart bursts with joy or is weighed down with the burden of sorrow, release is found in song. Schopenhauer, great German philosopher, said that it is the shower-bath of the soul, washing away all impurities. When the steamer Titanic was sinking and thousands of helpless men and women were facing the merciless waves and icy death, the lovely strains of "Near, My God, to Thee" were wafted upward through the roar of the deep. Nothing gives more courage in such crises than sacred music. When Haydn was working on his famous "Creation," always before he sat down to the piano, prayed earnestly that God would enable him to praise Him worthily. In music, everything depends upon the tune. To be "off pitch" means discord. When the spirit of Christ enters the heart, we are attuned into harmony with Him and His law.

The executive committee of the Woman's Auxiliary met Monday afternoon with the president, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, at her home on Rotary Drive.

The Senior C. E. Society held its weekly meeting at the Ragsdale cabin near Jameston.

The supper for the stewards on Monday evening was an enjoyable affair, being well attended, and a delicious menu was served by Circle No. 3, Mrs. W. C. Ferree, cahirman. New officials were elected: F. R. Auman resigned as chairman and A. J. Koonce was elected to fill his place; Ralph H. Vance is assistant; Ross H. Davis is secretary.

The fourth quarterly conference will convene Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock when the pastor will submit his annual report, and all organizations of the church are expected to present written reports of activities for the past year. This will be followed by a congregational meeting, when the delegate-elect to Annual Conference, who is Arnold J. Koonce, will be instructed as to pastor for the coming year.

The newly elected superintendent of the Sabbath school is J. H. Jennings, who has served before, the first assistant is Ralph H. Vance, and second assistant, Tyson T. Ferree.

Mr. L. F. Ferree announces that only 15 subscriptions are required to complete the quota of First Church for Methodist Protestant Herald, which is 71, or one subscription to every ten members.

The High Point Public Library will be moved this week from the third floor of Municipal Hall to the former post office building on South Main street. This location will give more commodious and agreeable quarters for the ibrary, and the staff and trustees are delighted with the change.

In a well-expressed letter appearing in the local daily, High Point Enterprise, Robert Rankin, son ofCapt . and Mrs. A. M. Renkin, and a high school senior, makes a plea for support of the High School Library, which is badly handicapped by lack of sufficient reference books for school work, and begs friends to aid with new books. High Point College, through its librarian, Miss Louise Jennings, pleads for donations of books from private libraries of High Point citizens.

The all-important issue of Prohibition is at stake at the polls of several states of the Union today. A heavy vote of more than 5,000 will be cast in High Point, and at 2 o'clock this afternoon with 2,500 votes cast in the 12 precincts, a survey showed that apparently the drys are leading in every precinct. The workers' vote will come late this afternoon when the day shifts leave the different manufacturing plants. From Trinity, Archdale, and Jamestown, reports came that the majority against Repeal is large. The drys are already rejoicing over their successful campaign. It is the proud boast of High Pointers that no legalized saloon has ever done business within its confines since the charter was granted the city in 1859. The Enterprise will announce the returns from its office on North Main street for both the city and state, as well as other states voting today.

Mrs. J. H. Pritchard has returned from a visit to her mother, Mrs. E. C. Henley, near Asheboro.

Shiloh.—The Young Men's Wide-Awake class of Shiloh had a splendid attendance Sunday, even though the weather was rough. Although he was expecting Mr. Curtis Leonard to teach, our teacher, Mr. Evans, taught Sunday because Mr. Leonard was unable to get there in time for Sunday school. In the lesson we find that the people were stirred up by preachers who were practically like our street preachers of today. They were not sent by the church, but came of their own accord. Paul was one of the men sent to the mother church to find out about their teachings.

The conference year is nearing the end, therefore our class put on a drive to help the church pay up. We tithed the three weeks preceding the fourth Sunday in October and on this Sunday we paid in $111.00. On the next Sunday there was enough paid in to raise the amount to around $150.00. The amount was away beyond every one's expectations.

We are always striving to go forward in spirit and number.

FRANK SHOAF, Class Reporter.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. H F. Fogleman, brought us a very interesting message on the fourth Sunday morning. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered to a large congregation. We had several visitors from other churches who joined in this part of the service with us.

On the fifth Sunday the Sunday school officers were elected, as follows: Superintendent, L. W. Gupton; assistant superintendent, Kathleen Shearin; secretary, Miss Avis Odom; treasurer, Tasker Williams; pianist, Kathleen Shearin; teachers were elected as follows: Class No. 1, Miss Mary Alice Williams; Class No. 2, Miss Ruth Gupton; Class No. 3, Mrs. E. T. Ellington; Class No. 4, Mr. E. T. Ellington.

The officers for the church have been nominated and will be voted on next Sunday night, which is our last appointment before Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference was held at Bethesda church on November 3. The reports showed an increase in the amount formerly paid on A. C. B. Dr. Andrews emphasized this very much on his visit to the charge and helped Mr. Fogleman, who has received subscriptions at each service. Mrs. W. R. Neville was elected as alternate delegate to Conference.

Mr. Fogleman told the conference that he had been here for four years and that he wished that the conference would refrain from making any request either compelling or refusing his return. The conference failed to take his advice. The first vote was 13 to 11 in favor of his return; the second vote was 11-13 against his return. The result is that unless Conference comes to our help we will have a new preacher next year. We hate to give him up. The work at Hollister has prospered this year. This has been done largely through Mr. Fogleman's good sermons. He is not a big visitor, but we want him back. We know if he doesn't come back our loss will be someone else's gain.

The council meeting of the Women's Federation of Halifax County will meet at Hollister church on Wednesday, November 15, 1933. We hope to have a large representation from all over the county.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Lexington, Mount Carmel.—Rev. Mr. Isley delivered an inspiring and uplifting sermon Sunday morning, choosing as his subject, "Temperance." He asked the congregation to support the drys with their vote on November 7. At the close of the service the officers of the church were installed for the ensuing year. After this the ordinance of the Lord's Supper was taken.

We are closing one of the best years in the history of the church. The finances are nearer paid than last year, being only $10.00 behind, and that is expected to be raised before Conference meets next week.

Rev. Mr. Isley will deliver his last sermon this Conference year next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Although we are expecting him back for his sixth year. The Shoaf sisters of Midway will be with us and deliver special music for the occasion.

The ladies put on an oyster supper last Saturday and cleared $11.16, that will be added to their year's report.

ZULA FRITTS, Reporter.

First Church, Concord.—Last Sunday was our day to elect our officers for another year, so Mr. Morgan did not preach. He held the devotional exercise and made a short talk on temperance. We were very glad to have Mrs. Ed Joyner sing for us Sunday morning. Mr. Joyner is principal of Long Grammar School. Almost all the children of our church attend the Long School, so the children were pleased to have Mr. Joyner sing for us. One of his pupils, Miss Josephine Fant, played the piano.

The officers elected for next year are as follows: Class leaders, Mrs. B. F. Waddell and Mr. W. R. Earnhardt; trustees, Mr. W. I. Little, L. R. Wensil, J. L. Sides, J. A. Berrier and L. M. Williams; stewards, Mr. B. F. Waddell, S. C. Cass, T. F. Newton, C. T. Rabon, J. T. Blackwelder, Ross Little, L. M. Williams, R. H. Haupt, L. R. Wensil, Mr. J. T. Blackwelder, treasurer, and Bertha Earnhardt, corresponding secretary; for the Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Ross Little, assistant Mr. Fred Sides; ushers, Mr. Leander Nash, Oscar Mann, Horace Sides and P. H. Scarboro, Jr.; choir leader, Mr. Arthur Smith; pianist, Mr. Willie Furr; assistant, Mrs. Esther Litaker; reporter, Bertha Earnhardt. The new officers were installed Sunday night. This was a very sweet and solemn service. The candle service was used. A large candle was lighted and as each officer came to the front he was given a small candle by the pastor. He then lighted his candle from the large one and took his or her place after being told what their duty would be for the coming year. Sunday morning, Mr. B. F. Waddell, chairman of the board the stewards, passed the pledge cards to each member present and they were asked to make their pledge for next year. By filling out the pledge card the stewards will not only have the pledge, but the name and address of each member. Mr. Waddell said that we aim to know each other better another year. Mr. Waddell has many fine plans for us another year, and if Conference sees fit to send Mr. Morgan back to us he also has many good plans that we hope to work out. We feel like our folks are going to co-operate better next year than ever before. We are expecting Mr. Morgan to come back, but no church ever knows until after Conference who it will have for its pastor.

Last Friday night the Missionary Auxiliary put on a turkey supper in the basement of the church, but they ran out of turkey before all the people were served. They thought they had prepared supper enough for 300 people, and more than that number came. I do not know at this time what the profits amount to, but we hope that they made real good. Our women are really interested in the Mission work this year and our pastor helps all he can, and encourages the women in their work. The Ladies Aid Society has elected new officers for next year: President, Mrs. J. M. Morgan; vice-president, Mrs. Lottie Litaker; secretary, Mrs. R. H. Haupt; treasurer, Mrs. C. C. Little.

We were glad to see Mr. Robert Gray able to be out for the supper on Friday night; also at church Sunday morning. Mrs. R. C. Brown is still on the sick list; so is Mrs. Rosa Stokes.

Death claimed one of our neighbors on Ann street last Saturday morning, Mr. Howard Penninger. He had been sick for some time, but did not give up until last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Blackwelder have been on the sick list for some time, but we were glad to see Mr. Blackwelder able to be at church Sunday a week ago. Mr. and Mrs. Blackwelder live in the country, but they come to church regularly when they are well.

The B. and S. class held a Hallowe'en social at the home of the teacher, Mrs. B. F. Waddell, last Monday. A large crowd was present and all had a good time, but had a hard time finding out who each other was. We did not even know which one was Mrs. Waddell until after they removed their masks. This class believes in co-operation not only in the class, but in all the work of the church.

BERTHA EARNHARDT, Reporter.

Shiloh Charge.—We held our last service at Shiloh last Sunday for this Conference year; had a good congregation and a good service. It was an interesting service in a financial way, for our treasurer, Bro. J. L. Evans, announced that Shiloh church would pay every cent of every claim, so that made pastor and people feel good. We are thankful to our fine bunch of young people who helped to put Shiloh on the honor roll. Shiloh church has been good to their pastor, for the C. E. Society took this preacher over town on Saturday night, bought him a new suit, and a pair of shoes. My! that looked good. Bro. Jesse Hill bought us a new hat. Misses Blanche and Mildred Sink, two shirts, and our pantry was not left out, for Bro. Ed Waitman brought us a 100 pound sack of flour, the Brotherhood class at Shiloh gave me $4.00 and Mother's class gave Mrs. Troxler $5.95, which we appreciate very much.

I must say just a word about our neighbors. We have been on this work for nine years, and Bro. Berrier and his good family have been exceedingly good to us, for when their pastor needed anything, whether it was money or eats, he always got it. I shall never be able to repay them for their many donations and kindnesses. But Jesus will say in the great beyond, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me."

Next Sunday will be our last service at Friendship, and Greer's Chapel. We hope to have a good day at these two places, and we are hoping that they, too, will be able to pay all claims. They can if they will; then our delegate can go to Conference with a clean sheet. God help us to do this. I want to thank all who helped to make this year as good and as profitable as it has been—not by any means as good as we would like for it to have been, but fair.

Praying God's blessing upon this work, and all works in our Conference and His blessings on our Annual Conference.

R. S. TROXLER.

Fountain Place, Burlington.—Our fourth quarterly conference was held on Sunday afternoon, October 22, at which time the delegate, Mr. J. W. Wright, was instructed to bring Mr. Bethea back if he possibly could. We are confident that we could do no better. Although this church has had a hard struggle during the last few years, we feel that with the faithful help of Mr. and Mrs. Bethea our efforts have not been in vain.

About two weeks ago the Junior Christian Endeavor presented our pastor with a lamp for his pulpit. Miss Marie Brady is the leader of this group. The Senior C. E. has charge of each weekly prayer service. At a recent business meeting Miss Ruth Jones was elected president to succeed Mrs. Howard Kirkpatrick. On Wednesday night, October 25, we were very fortunate to have Rev. J. Clyde Auman give us some of his missionary experiences in Japan.

One of the strongest organizations in the Fountain Place church is the Ladies' Auxiliary. Each member seems to feel her duty, and does all that she can. The last meeting of this Conference year was held on November 6, at 7:30, with Mrs. Callie Fogleman.

HE'S PERFECT

It's bad enough for the average person to try to get a job without having a perfect man apply for the same position. It just doesn't give anyone else a chance.

An applicant to the Navy Department for acceptance as an aviator describes himself in the following terms: "Healthy, active, unmarried, college-educated, strong, amiable, competent, unselfish, reserved, plucky and persevering." But that ain't all. He states he has "character, temperament, courage, will power, physique and self control." There's still more. He doesn't drink, smoke, take dope, nor does he have any such thinys as "infected teeth, old wounds, bad throat, asthma, or indigestion."

He doesn't belong in the Navy, but in a museum or side-show. There can't be many like him.—Exchange.

100 PER CENT OR 25 PER CENT—WHICH SHALL IT BE?

Dear Brother Pastor:

The campaign is on to secure the promise from 200 charges to try to pay their General Conference Benevolences in full this year; and to secure from the balance of the charges of our denomination their promise to increase their offerings for this purpose at least 25 per cent over what they gave last year.

Your charge will be one of these groups—either as a 100 percenter, or an increaser—WHICH SHALL IT BE? Your Boards never needed your help more than they do now, and I appeal to you to lead your people in making their pledge some time during this campaign—November 5 to December 17.

Send the pledge of your charge, or churches, either to your Conference president or to me. The names of the pledging churches will be published in the Methodist Protestant Recorder.

IDENTIFICATION BY TEETH

A British dentist suggests that an international office for the purpose of registering toothprints be established as an aid in the detection of crime and the identification of unknown individuals. This suggestion calls to mind the numerous instances in which dental work identified criminals. One of the earliest such cases recorded is the famous Parkman-Webster murder case in Boston in 1849.

Every year many unknown persons are found dead and are buried without their identity ever becoming known. Teeth are almost never destroyed or at least seldom are unrecognizable, while fire or water may damage a finger until the print would be unrecognizable. Dentists could even "sign" their work like a jeweler, laundryman or tailor. A filing system of this sort would prove a valuable aid.—Pathfinder.

TREASURY ISSUE OVERSUBSCRIBED

Granting that it seems to be as scarce as hens' teeth, there must be money somewhere in this broad land of ours. Secretary of the Treasury Woodin has informed President Roosevelt that the Treasury's recent offering of $500,000,000 in 10 to 12 year bonds has been oversubscribed nearly four times. These bonds were offered for cash and carry interest at four and one-fourth per cent for the first year and three and one-fourth per cent thereafter. The fact that such a large issue of long-term government bonds at low interest rates was so overwhelmingly sold out is a most encouraging sign. It shows that the people have the utmost confidence in the government.—Pathfinder.

A VERY BUSY MAN

A member of Congress from the South was referring recently to the easy-going ways some of the people in his part of the country have. He told how a certain man would take his position on his porch right after breakfast and sit there hour after hour, perfectly motionless except for the steady working of his jaws as he chewed his "niggerhead" tobacco. Finally one day his wife came to the door and said, somewhat dispairingly, "Ain't ye goin' to work today?"

"Nope."

"Why ain't ye?"

"Ain't got time."—Exchange.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Thornburg

Mrs. Lila Campbell Thornburg was born in Chatham County on August 25, 1879. Her soul departed this life on October 24, 1933. She had been in ill health for several months and critically ill for about three weeks. She suffered a great deal, yet was very patient through it all.

Mrs. Thornburg had learned to maintain a Christian spirit toward all people. All people did not always have a friendly attitude towards her; there were those who endeavored to undo much that she tried to do in her home life; yet she maintained a Christian spirit towards all. She made a sincere effort to make and keep her home always Christian. She was deeply concerned about the spiritual training and development of her children. In her opinion, Christian character was more important than anything else. She expressed the desire that the life of her children might be an influence for God and make a better world. Mrs. Thornburg was devoted to her church. So long as her health permitted she attended faithfully the services of her church. She was interested in the growth and progress of the church.

May the loved ones be comforted in their sorrow and because of their love for God even this experience will work out for their own good.

FRED W. PASCHALL.

Mann

On Wednesday, October 18, 1933, Mrs. Lottie Kiser Mann quietly fell asleep in Jesus.

Mrs. Mann was born October 14, 1890, and was 43 years old. She was converted in early life and united with Love's Grove M. P. church, Stanly County. About 25 years ago she was united in marriage to Pearl J. Mann and to this union three children were born, and are as follows: Mrs. Fred Sides, Oscar and Grace Mann, who with their father survive.

When Mr. and Mrs. Mann moved to Concord 18 years ago they transferred their membership to Concord M. P. church, to which she was ever faithful until God called her home. She was also a member of the Ladies' Aid and the Missionary Societies and the women's S. S. class. She was vitally interested in every phase of the church work and trained her children accordingly. All the pastors who have served Concord church learned to depend on Miss Maggie Mann, now Mrs. Fred Sides. In all the Young People's Department of the church Maggie played an important part and the home training she received has made her a leader in the church.

Mrs. Mann was ill for four months and suffered greatly, but during that long time she was so patient, never complainig. She said so many times if it could be God's will she would like to live, but if not His will, she was ready to go, only she did hate to leave her baby girl.

It is so sad to see our loved ones slip away from us when we need them so much, but "Sometime, somewhere we'll understand," and we commend the sorrowing family and loved ones to Him who has said "I will be a mother to the motherless" and a companion to the husband, and "That where I am there ye may be also," and we know that if we are faithful some sweet day we may join her in that heavenly home not made with hands where God shall wipe away all tears.

Funeral services were conducted the following day at Concord church and were in charge of her pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, who paid a beautiful tribute to her life. Those assisting were Rev. A. C. Kennedy, pastor of Kerr Street M. E. church, and Rev. W. P. Robertson, pastor of Baylass Memorial Presbyterian church of this city. The floral offering was large and beautiful, showing the high esteem in which the family was held. Burial was in Oakwood cemetery.

BOOKS FOR HIGH POINT COLLEGE

The week of October 30-November 6 was celebrated as High Point College Book Week; that of November 12-18 is celebrated as National Book Week. The freshmen of H. P. C. wish the month of November to be used as a time for the accumulation of books for the betterment of the library. Representatives of the class have been sent to the various civic organizations of High Point to secure the help of these clubs toward enlarging the library.

All Methodist Protestants should be interested in every phase of High Point College. If any have new books or books which would be of lasting value, the freshman class on behalf of the library would be glad to receive them. (This plea should interest particularly those ministers who plan to move at Conference, as it will help them to get rid of a load which they would otherwise have to move).

Already two new books, "Morals of Tomorrow," Sockman and "This New Education," Home, have been given to the College by publishers at the request of the authors.

THE POWER OF WORDS

Words are very potent things,
Used by commoners or kings.
Many varied roles they fill,
They can serve or slay at will.
Words can mitigate, inflame,
Censure, stimulate, defame;
Stab, enchant, exasperate,
  Shackle, quench, extenuate;
Startle, soothe, antagonize,
Cheer, depress, monopolize;
Blight, embellish, desecrate,
Challenge, menace, captivate.
Words were made for you and me,
Wordless what would mortals be!

CANNING

Canning is supposed to have originated with Appert, a Paris chef, about 1783. His method was to place sealed bottles containing the food in a water bath and bring the water to the boiling point. Present-day methods, though more scientific, vary but little from the original. Knowledge of canning was brought to America about 1818 but it did not become an industry until 1860.—Exchange.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

20th AMENDMENT ANOMALY

The 20th amendment to the Constitution went into effect October 15 abolishing the "Lame Duck" session of Congress and changing the date of inauguration of a new president and vice-president from March 4 to January 20. But somehow in the enthusiasm of getting rid of the Lame Ducks the business of polling the electoral votes was overlooked. The new amendment fixes the date for the new assembly of Congress on January 3. The president and vice-president in the future will be inaugurated on January 20. But under the existing law the Electoral College meets the first Wednesday in January following presidential elections in November every four years to cast the ballots for their respective states. These ballots are sent to Congress and the present law provides that a joint session of that body be held the second Wednesday in February to poll the electoral votes and to proclaim the next president and vice-president. If this situation is not remedied between now and 1935 the new president will be inaugurated long before Congress gets around to polling the votes and proclaiming the winning candidates. But there is lots of time before 1935 ad Congress is expected to move up the dates for the Electoral College meeting and for polling the electoral votes.—Pathfinder.

ber, but Mrs. Dixon has been so short of help and so busy that she has not been able to tabulate the figures. That will be done shortly, and the winning Auxiliary announced.

A good many of the folks who attend Conference will pass by the Children's Home in getting there. Why not bring along a donation? And while you are doing that, let the women folks bake a cake and send it along for lunches for the children in the Home. The cakes that were sent in last year helped wonderfully. Remember, they have to put up 100 lunches five days a week. A slice of cake will help solve the problem of finding something for those lunches.

VOLUME XL GREENSBORO, N. C., NOVEMBER 16, 1933 NUMBER 1

Movements in Which God Does Not Share

Men sometimes misinterpret what they call the "acts of God." God does not do everything that He seems to do. Especially are great displays of physical force supposed to be manipulated by the hand of God. The tramp of a great army shakes the earth and men wonder what God is about to do. Violent wars are looked upon as God in action. The prevalence of pestilence has the same interpretation.

But God taught Elijah on Mount Horeb that God is not in every parade of physical force. A furious cyclone swept over the mountain, uprooting trees and leaving a path of desolation, but God was not in the wind. A violent earthquake rent the rocks of the mountain, but God was not in the earthquake. Lightnings flashed and thunders boomed, but God was not in the electric storm. A still small voice succeeded, betokening the real presence and power of God. Elijah was awed by the still small voice and humbly bowed himslf before God in the mouth of a cave. God proceeded to outline for him a course of action very different from that he had been pursuing. Instead of a slayer of men he was to be a true prophet, guiding kings and prophets in the ways of God's appointment. He laid out more work for Elijah than the prophet remained to perform, some of it being taken over by Elisha.

It must not be assumed that every powerful movement is of God. Who would now assert that the hosts of Napoleon were marshaled by God in his careers of destruction? Many leaders of men are agents of Satan rather than instruments of God.

We are not to go with a multitude to do evil even though men assert that God leads the multitude. We may be sure that God approves no evil work, much less leads in it.

God's mode of influence is not that of physical violence.

A Man Who Deals in Pleasant Surprises

Pre-eminently such a man is our always interesting contributor, Mr. Grenville Kleiser of New York City. His poems and prose articles both please and surprise. Now he is surprising people in a new way: He is giving away ten dollars a day, a dollar to each of ten people. The first day he gave to President Roosevelt, Henry Ford, and eight others similarly distinguished. The money is to be spent as the receiver chooses. It is not to be hoarded. Mr. Kleiser says his object is to end the depression and promote the return of good times. He would not be of those who complain of conditions and do nothing to improve them.

Conference Notes

Dr. Andrews was re-elected president on the first ballot. He has been elected president several times before, but never entered the office before with more intelligent zeal for the work of the church.

Dr. Bates was made secretary for the thirteenth time. He can't escape. The other officers were re-elected, but the treasurer, Dr. Brown, thought he had given a full measure of devotion in that capacity, and did not accept the office.

Bro. W. F. Redding, Jr., of Asheboro, was elected for the lay member of the stationing committee.

The Subsidy

We referred to the help rendered by The Herald Subsidy Fund, but were under a mistaken impression as to the size of it. We find that it amounts so far to only $700. The printers a year ago made a condition as to amount. We hope the balance can be made up. The situation will be very serious for The Herald if it is not.

DOING AS YOU PLEASE

Sometimes folks say, "Well, what if it does pay? If I am willing to pay the price of my wrongdoing, it is nobody's business what I do. I shall do as I please."

That sounds reasonable enough, but such folks have overlooked one thing, and that is, that you cannot pay the price alone. Some one else always suffers with you, even though he or she is innocent of wrong. And who suffers more when boys and girls err than their patient, loving, faithful mothers; mothers whose sole aspiration is to have a noble son or a womanly daughter?

There is very much more to life than doing as you please; none of us lives unto himself.—Youth's World.

IF?—WHAT?

If saints who now sit in the "arm-chair" of self-indulgence, nursing a little headache, coddling a pet corn or fearing a few drops of rain, could only see themselves as they shall see themselves at the judgment-seat of Christ, when their lack of "works" for the Lord shall cause them to "suffer loss",—

What Would They Do?

Answer—They would jump out of that "armchair" and hasten out on the "rugged path" of self-sacrifice, determined that they shall "not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him which died for them, and rose again." (II Cor. 5:15.)—D. B., in Milk of the Word.

SHALL OUR GOVERNMENT RECOGNIZE SOVIET RUSSIA?

One-sixth of the earth's landed surface is occupied by Soviet Russia. It is the third most populous group of people in the world. Its 160,000,000 have their faces toward the future, and they are to be reckoned with in the coming years.

For sixteen years their government has been maintained as a going concern. There is no inside party or power that threatens stability, and no outside enemy gives them serious concern.

The Soviet government has been recognized by twenty-four nations—including Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy. The United States is the only great power that, so far, has refused the hand of fellowship. Shall that condition continue?

The main reasons advanced against recognition are such as these: We do not like their form of government. We do not believe in either Socialism or Communism. We do not approve of their attitude toward religion and the churches. They have broken with traditional marriage and family laws and customs. They have not paid the money they owe us. They have threatened by means of their propaganda to break up our form of government and to make the whole world conform to their way of doing things.

Well, do we like Hitler and his manners? Does Mussolini always meet our approval? Are the religious ideas and practices of the Japanese—to say nothing of their military operations—pleasing to us? Are England and France continuing to pay, as they promised, installments on the amounts they owe us? Are Russians the only propagandists?

On what grounds does the United States recognize a foreign government? Former Secretary of State Stimson quotes with approval the words of Mr. Adee, for many years assistant secretary of state: "Ever since the American Revolution entrance upon diplomatic intercourse with foreign states has been de facto, dependent upon the existence of three conditions of fact: the control of the administrative machinery of the state; the general acquiescence of its people; and the ability and willingness of their government to discharge international and conventional obligations. The form of government has not been a conditional factor in such recognition."

This method was changed when President Woodrow Wilson refused recognition to Huerta as president of Mexico, because Mr. Wilson objected to the manner in which Mr. Huerta had secured the office. This led to considerable trouble. Succeeding presidents have abandoned the Wilson view and gone back to what has been the American practice since the days of Thomas Jefferson. In the past dozen years several South American states have been thus recognized. John Basset Moore, a high State Department official under Wilson, disapproved of his plan as ineffective. He said: "Not only does our recent departure keep us in an attitude of intervention in the domestic affairs of other countries, but it has indoctrinated our people in the preposterous and mischievous supposition that the recognition of a government implies approval of its constitution, its economic system, its attitude toward religion, and its general course of conduct. Not only is this supposition contrary to elementary principles of international law, which assure to each independent state the right to regulate its domestic affairs, but it is flagrantly at variance with the facts. It is, for instance, inconceivable that the government of the United States has at any time approved all the governments with which it held diplomatic relations."

It seems likely that—with President Roosevelt asking for a representative of Soviet Russia to come to Washington for conference with him on the matter—recognition will be an accomplished fact in the not distant future.

There is no reason to fear that our government will be destroyed by plotters from the outside. If there is right and reason in the things we believe and in the way we conduct our national affairs—our industries and our social life—we may well depend for safety on the rational convictions and judgment of our peple. If right and reason are not on our side, we will do well to make all necessary changes in principles and practice. If our people, with all our advantages, do not have the wisdom and the skill to withstand unreasonable opposition, do we deserve to continue in existence? If our religion is no better than was the state religion of Russia—used, as was claimed, as an opiate to keep the people quiet under oppression—it might well give way to something else. Russia will not alway be as opposed to religion as it seems to be now.

Soviet Russia is conducting an extensive experiment in government and in social and industrial life. There are likely to be interesting and instructive developments of value to the whole world. We may not want to follow their example. But observation and study of what she is doing may save us a lot of experimenting on our own account. We may be sure that this disturbed world will not settle down to the old ways without having tried out some of the things that have been growing in the thoughts of men for many years.

Meanwhile, it will be well for our government to recognize Soviet Russia. They will do us no harm. There will be mutual advantages, commercially and in other ways.

LUTHER K. LONG.

Later: Maxim Litvinoff, Commissar of Foreign Relations of the Russian government, has arrived in Washington. His discussions with Secretary of State Hull and his assistants are reported to have been satisfactory. Further consideration of the matter in hand is being had in the White House, where, it is believed, arrangements will be concluded for the long-deferred recognition of Soviet Russia. L. K. L.

CAN WE?

Enoch walked with God. Is it impossible for us to so live that we may walk with God? Can we walk with God in the shop, in the office, in the household, and on the street? When men exasperate us and work wearies us and the children fret and many things annoy and our best laid plans fall to pieces, then can we walk with God?

"I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." (Phil. 4:13.)—Word and Work.

THE LETTER KILLETH, THE SPIRIT GIVETH LIFE

"The life of the flesh," said the Jewish law, "is in the blood." This use of blood to signify the vital principle, the life, the temper of mind, the natural disposition, the inherited quality or character, is very common in English literature and ought to have saved us from misunderstanding it as used in the Bible.

"The blood of Christ," says Stanley, "means the inmost essence of His character." Substitute the words "deliverance from sin" for "forgiveness of sin" and "life poured out" for "blood shed" and texts that have often been emptied of their meaning become vital again. Thus:

This is the New Covenant in my life poured out for many for their deliverance from sin.

Except a man imbibe my spirit of life he cannot be my disciple.

The spirit of Christ's life cleanseth us from all sin.

Without the imparting of life there can be no deliverance from sin.

We are saved not by the drops of blood which trickled down from Christ's hands and feet, not by the blood and water that flowed after His death from Christ's pierced side; but by the life which that life symbolized; the life given from His early boyhood to His death; the life still given by Him in every self-sacrificing service of mother to her children, of every Christian worker to his church, of every patriotic citizen to his country, of the loyal soldier laying down his life on the field of battle.

Every aspiration to a life of love, service and sacrifice, however it may seem to come, repeats the call of the Apostle: "I beseech you by the mercies of God that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."—LYMAN ABBOTT, in My Life a Ransom for Many.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE PROFESSOR MAKES PRACTICAL USE OF KNOWLEDGE

By N. M. HARRISON

Dr. E. C. Cummings, professor of chemistry at High Point College, adds to his scientific achievements in working out of two new formulas for a compound for washing dishes and clothes.

These formulas are not only entirely different from all others on the market today, but the cleansing and sterilizing properties seem to be superior. "There is no dish washing preparation to be found," said Dr. Cummings, "which claims to sterilize, as well as to remove the greases and dirt, and at the same time not be poison or injurious to the hands."

Professor Cummings is just as enthusiastic about his preparation for washing clohtes. He says of it: "It contains no caustic soda or other harmful ingredients. The chemical found emulsifies and removes the dirt and leaves the fabric in a sterile state. This is all done with far less work and without injury to the person, fabric or color."

Dr. Cummings commenced his experiments along this line about three years ago when one of his college groups in industrial chemistry was studying floor sweeping compounds. With them he worked out a formula which has given the college a more economical and better preparation for sweeping floors than they had before found. The college authorities then asked him for a dish washing preparation to be used in its kitchens, and the same results were attained. Both preparations have since been used by the college and made in its laboratories.

The High Point professor has before put his knowledge to practical uses. He already has three patents for electro-chemical processes: (1) the electro-chemical process of the manufactory of white lead; (2) the electro-chemical process of the manufactory of succinic acid, which process is being used by the National Aniline Co.; (3) the electro-chemical process of the manufactory of parapheuylenediamine. The latter process is used principally for the dyeing of furs.

He also manufactures the Cummings batteries. This plant is located in High Point. His electro-plating plant is located in Greensboro.

Dr. Cummings received the B. S. and M. S. degrees at the University of North Carolina, and the Ph. D. degree at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. At the latter institution he was instructor while working on the doctor's degree. Later, however, he became professor of chemistry at Georgia School of Technology, from whence he came to High Point College in 1928, the institution of his home town.

"The coward mistakes a rock for a tiger."

"No man can rule the unruly until he first rules himself."

The teacher looked on with interest.

"Who taught you to write the word for door with seven strokes?"

"I watched the letter writer before the foreign temple. That and other words have I learned," the student boasted with pride.

"Then learn something more: 'There is no merit worthy of boasting.' And thine of this newly acquired knowledge, less than most, for the strokes were wrong."

Young Fu was crestfallen. "My heart is hot with shame, Honorable One, but I thought by studying this letter writer I might discover how to read and write."

"It is better to remain ignorant than to know what is incorrect. Come with me!" he commanded, and the youth followed him up the ladder to the second floor.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

To the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, assembled in Community Church, Thomasville, November 15, 1933, in the one hundred and sixth session—

Dear Co-laborers:

Since it is fitting that a summary of the labors of your president be incorporated in this message, the following statement is submitted:

From November the 18th last until October the 22nd, he delivered 156 sermons and addresses, and held 90 group meetings or conferences. Three of these were in the interest of refinancing church debts; 48 were quarterly conferences; two in an endeavor to bring about a better understanding among church members; 18 were area meetings; one for interracial interests, one for International Relations. Other meetings were held for the study of some of the problems which were troubling the workers. He assisted in the dedication of one church and attended the meeting of the Board of Administration at Pittsburgh, besides answering many special calls for conferences with individuals. To meet these conference appointments required the travel of 19,000 miles and the sending out of many hundred pieces of mail. The cost of this service approximated seven hundred dollars.

Analysis and Comparison

A questionnaire to the pastors disclosed many items of interest. Of the 80 sent out, 70 were returned in time for items to go into this summary.

Salary promised for coming year: 31 reported same as this year, 10 reported a reduction, and five an increase for next year.

Eight pastors raised the quota of their charges for the Herald subscription.

Thirty-three churches paid the Herald Subsidy.

Thirty-five charges paid the Superannuate Special.

Thirty-one charges paid their pastors from 90 to 100 per cent of the amount promised.

Twenty-four paid from 80 to 90 per cent of the amount promised.

Twenty-two charges raised same amount for all purposes as previous year; 30 reported more, and eight reported less raised than last year.

Thirty pastors favor keeping the Loyalty League; one opposed it.

Forty-three pastors favor forming our children church members into study classes for a fuller understanding of church membership and Christian duties; seven were opposed.

Eighteen pastors expressed a desire to change, 19 no change.

Thirty-four churches reported having paid the A. C. B. in full; many others expect to pay it by Conference. There were just 17 churches which paid this budget last year.

Pastoral Changes

C. I. Smith was assigned to Mebane church; J. H. Trollinger to Melton's Grove; O. C. Loy to Midway and Sandy Grove; C. W. Saunders to Rockingham; Atlas Ridge to South Winston in place of H. M. Crysler resigned.

The State of the Church

Our Morale Has Been Too Low.—While it was no lower than some of us have known it to be in other years, yet it was entirely too low for aggressive work efficiently done. We found several of our leaders greatly discouraged. Even a pastor here and there was affected by this sleeping sickness of the spirit. Morale is vital to the interests of the Kingdom; in fact, it is more valuable than gold. It is the spirit of achievement in the group when high, and spells defeat when low. The psalmist characterized the man with morale when he said, "One shall chase a thousand and two shall put ten thousand to flight." Gideon knew the futility of carrying an army with broken spirit into battle, so he commanded his raw recruits who were fearful and afraid to return to their homes. He knew victories could not be won by cowards, and that a doubting leader might destroy an entire army. So he set the example to his valiants by saying, "Look on me and do likewise." The leader of the Lord's host today should have the spirit of the pioneer. He must be willing to endure sacrifices—to suffer hardship for the cause of Christ. And only those who regard their call to the ministry as a Divine call will be found faithful when the pastor's salary fails to be paid and the position of the minister shall cease to be more highly regarded than other vocations in life.

As the shepherd's duty was to care for the sheep, so the faithful pastor will provide for his flock, whether they supply him with all the necessities of life or not. He will not gauge his service by what they do for him. He knows that after what they pay him is received for his support, no small part of his salary will never be received here, it is deposited with the Head of the Church and he will receive it at the Final Roll Call.

We deplore the fact that pastors' salaries are being slashed so much these days. It is not right that the faithful pastor should bear such a large share of the losses of the church, as some of our men are bearing. It is because in many cases worldliness is dominating the heart. Some of our benevolent enterprises are being strangled by the selfishness of those who could relieve the burdens if they would. To such the appeals of the pastor appear to have but little effect. Yet none of these things should discourage us. Indeed, they should nerve us to greater faithfulness. The pastor must not fear and his church should not hesitate to oppose the works of evil wherever seen.

We agree that there should be a purging of church membership. But this should be done not so much by revising the church registers as by the regeneration of the church members. For a regenerated human nature is the only human nature where the good seed of the Kingdom shall really grow.

Therefore let no pastor fail to declare the whole counsel of God, and remember the words of our Master when He said, "Ye must be born again."

Lack of Co-operaton.—There is an obvous lack of co-ordination in our conference programs. It comes about by the lack of co-operative effort on the part of our people. There are entire churches which stand alone in their efforts as though there were no conference program. They take no part in the denominational activities; do not even have the vision of a state-wide church. Of the foreign fields they are both ignorant and indifferent. This unwillingness to support these projects have in certain instances become so pronounced that the pastors of such churches feel the futility of an appeal for education or for missions, or even for the conference budget.

Now all such churches must be linked up with the conference program or they are doomed, and as they fail the conference fails. We believe that if the Committee on Official Character would scrutinize such reports where they are flagrant and continued failures to support the program of the church and have both delegate and pastor to come before it and explain why there is such failure, a solution of a most difficult problem might appear after a patient study of the conditions prevailing in some of our churches.

Recently I was greatly impressed as I reviewed the acts of the conference from 1892 to 1932, a period of forty years. I was reminded that the Israelites spend forty years in the wilderness wanderings, and I saw points of similarity between the two. One fact is plain: Israel was not ready for their Canaan home. And the many resolutions passed by those forty conferences show that our people were not yet ready for the achievements these resolutions would lead them to. And it is even true to this day that we pass resolutions without an opposing vote, only to permit them to remain in the Journal untested and soon forgotten. We believe that we would greatly increase the efforts of our people if we should set before them certain objectives or goals which would require several years to accomplish to which our workers might rally.

Our Financial Status

The Conference is in debt—debts incurred, most of them, many years ago. Some of those whom we owe want their money. It therefore becomes our duty and privilege to pay them. While your president does not think this feat can be performed in one year, under present conditions, yet we must exert ourselves tremendously to do it in the briefest time possible.

We reached our peak in contributions to the pastor in 1927, when the average salary was $1235, and the contributions to the A. C. B. were $10,706. Comparing 1927 with 1932, our contributions to pastors decreased fifteen per cent, to the A. C. B. sixty-six per cent, and to W. S. sixty per cent. That may be termed an economic landslide or a moral backslide, depending upon the angle the matter is approached. But whatever the cause, it must be remedied and our churches must be geared up to the steady pulling they were doing prior to this falling away. Whether it is a happy incident that we must talk money so much in our conference and church services, judge ye, but let your decision be what it may, it is emphasizing the obvious to say that present day Christianity cannot exist without money. Therefore, let us try to determine the smallest amount the conference can aggressively function with and try to find the best method of securing that amount. To this end there was created by the last Annual Conference a Commission on Financial Recommendations. This commission has had several meetings and will present its findings to this conference. We ask that you set an order for hearing this report and give it a careful and kindly consideration. It has in it recommendations which would have been incorporated in this report, had not the commission been created. It had likewise covered the entire field of finance for the conference.

Membership Gains

Taking the past decade, from 1922 to 1932, as a period for testing our numerical growth, we discover that although there was received into the churches of this conference for that period 17,966 members, the net gain for the same period is only 3,547. Surely this fact is enough to disturb the smug contentment of all who are at ease in Zion; for to lose 14,419 members out of 17,966—a loss of 81 per cent of all our growth—is enough to stagger the most heroic worker. While it is easy to account for part of this loss by the way our church registers are kept, that will not explain these other thousands who once thought enough of the church to join, yet ceased to care enough for it to remain in it. In other words, our problem appears to be that we must find a way to keep more of our church members actively identified with the church. While our denomination compares favorably with others in the accessions through profession of faith, we believe we surpass them all in our losses.

Our Institutions

Since High Point College and the Children's Home will both have reports before you showing their present conditions, financial and otherwise, we are leaving out of this report any other statement about them. Likewise, the committee which handles the affairs of the M. P. HERALD will doubtless present a full report of its condition, all of which makes further mention here unnecessary.

Appreciation

We have received from both pastors and people the most cordial reception in our visits and thoughtful consideration of our messages. So uniformly has this been the case, that an executive who was more meticulous than the writer could have found no cause for complaint. We have some of the best people in the commonwealth and many pastors who grade A on loyalty to the church and efficiency in its service. The work has been arduous, that was to be expected, and we have often grown weary, but never discouraged; these faithful ones have cheered us and kept us believing that we shall surely win if only we can remain faithful.

Recommendations

First—That the Loyalty League, which was created by a committee from the Board of Education this year, become a creature of the conference and that the conference consider the advisability of putting a man in charge of this work for the coming year.

Second—That our pastors and the officials in the local churches be urged to form the children of our church into study classes, using our catechisms and other means of instructing them as to the meaning of church membership and of their duties as young Christians.

Third—That Bethesda church and Melton's Grove church be discontinued as stations and be attached to Rockingham church and be known as Rockingham Charge.

With a profound sense of gratitude to our Heavenly Father by whose Spirit I have been sustained in the work of the year, I respectfully submit this Message and Report.

R. M. Andrews, President.

BETTER BUSINESS

Keep the Dollar Rolling!

Unquestionably business is on the upgrade.

A vital need, however, is more small purchasers, those who can spend at a time a dollar or less. Small amounts of money, spent by large numbers of people, may mount up to millions in the aggregate, and benefit thousands of small shopkeepers.

We must not wait for the Government to perform miracles. Each individual should do his part now, however small, to bring about the better conditions so much desired.

The "clutched" dollar means a closed hand, and a closed hand neither gives nor receives. Hoarding and selfishness are foes of prosperity.

If a sufficiently large number of people would daily send out "good-will" checks, for say one dollar each, to a carefully chosen list of names with a request to "buy something," it would lead to incalculable benefits. It would encourage others to do the same; it would help the small shopkeeper; it would set a good example in service; it would "keep the dollar rolling," and the cumulative effect would be inestimable.

Grenville Kleiser.

TO THE MINISTERS OF NORTH CAROLINA

I wish this morning that I could shake your hand and the hand of every other temperance worker in North Carolina. The entire state is grateful to you and all other workers in your church for your faithful efforts. Please convey to every committeeman and every other worker who helped in any way the thanks of campaign headquarters.

All of us who worked in this campaign in behalf of temperance and righteousness were mere instruments of God, seeking His will. Surely, the tremendous victory vouchsafed to us on Tuesday could not have come without His guidance and blessing. To Him must go the praise and the glory. Therefore, in humble gratitude to Him and in a spirit of willingness to rededicate ourselves to the promotion of temperance and sobriety, through prohibition, let us assemble in a specially arranged service in our churches on Sunday, November 19, and render thanks to Him. I have written to the county managers and candidates and have asked them to contact the ministers and assist in arranging for these services. I trust that the idea meets your approval and that you will co-operate in every way possible.

We know that your church has financial problems of its own. However, in order to organize the state for victory, we expended more money than we had. We need $2,385. If your church could take a thank offering for us as a part of your praise service on November 19, it would gladden our hearts.

I am sure that there are many individuals in your community who would be willing to make an individual contribution as an expression of their gratitude. I trust that you may be in position to contact some of them personally to obtain their immediate co-operation in your efforts to help us pay our debts. Please try this immediately.

Again thanking you for all you have done, and assuring you of my everlasting gratitude, I am

Sincerely yours,
Cale K. Burgess, Campaign Director.

THE LITTLE PREACHER

The shortest sermon I ever heard was preached by the shortest preacher I ever saw, on a small steamer running between Toronto and the Island. Ever since the boat left the wharf I had been amused by hearing a clear, high-set voice ask questions, one after another, as fast as one little tongue could go.

A policeman took his place beside the little boy, who turned up his dear little face and said: "Are you a policeman?"

"Yes," answered the man, looking at him kindly.

"Why are you a policeman?" was the next question. The policeman gave a puzzled laugh, but took out the key of the patrol box and a pair of handcuffs, and told him they were to put on bad boys when he took them away.

"You won't take me away," said the little fellow bravely, looking him straight in the face.

"No, my boy, I won't take you; but whom do you belong to?" asked the big man, still smiling at the mite.

"I belong to Jesus," said the child.

The big policeman got very red in the face, and rising very hurriedly, left his seat. I will never forget that little preacher and his little sermon. God give us more preachers like this little hero. The sermon was only four words—"I belong to Jesus." Can you say that and say the truth?—Publisher Unknown.

TO THE CAROLINAS

Greetings and congratulations! You have done well to stand four-square for your moral judgment against the unreasonable requirements of your political party.

Postmaster General Farley—emissary of the administration in Washington—did not succeed in leading you astray.

I am especially proud of the strength of the Tar Heel State. You will be so wise in the management of prohibition locally that—in the matter of efficiency—you will lead the way for other states. More power to you.

Luther K. Long.

ONE GIRL'S FRIENDSHIP

Bessie Mayes was a member of the Sunday school class known as Bethlehem Stars. In discussing a name, the class had all agreed that they wanted something out of the ordinary, and yet something that would be suitable for a membership composed mostly of young working girls, not a few of whom were Christians and eager to do things. Their teacher, Miss Pearson, had suggested Bethlehem Stars, adding that since they had so recently found their Savior they would want to help others find Him, so they might be modern Bethlehem Stars guiding others to Christ. The name had appealed to them. Soon some one had suggested a campaign wherein any member of the class who cared should pledge herself to invite to their class other girls who did not attend Sunday school or church anywhere. Eventually, by example and precept, they hoped to persuade the new-comers to accept their Savior.

Bessie had pledged and lost no time in inviting Doris Eller, who clerked in one of the town's dry goods stores. But Doris had not been especially anxious to accept the invitation.

''No, I don't go to Sunday school anywhere. You are the first girl who has asked me to attend in the six months I have been here. Where are all your so-called Christian girls of the town, anyway?'' she asked Bessie.

''Why, I guess they just haven't thought to ask you; I'm sure any of them would be glad to have you in their class. I have only just recently joined the church and started to Sunday school myself. You will come, will you not? We have such a fine teacher. I'm sure you will find our class interesting.''

''Well, I don't care to promise, though I do appreciate your wanting me. I've often thought I'd like to go to Sunday school and church; and then something has happened to make me doubt whether there is anything in it after all.''

''Oh, there is—just come and see!'' urged Bessie, who had been wishing for some time that she might know this attractive girl better. Doris had seemed to make friends slowly, though Bessie couldn't understand why. If only she will come into our class! Bessie waited hopefully for Doris to give her a more encouraging answer.

''I'll think about it,'' said Doris, ''but I can't make any promises. I usually do my washing, ironing, and mending on Sunday, as that is the only day I have free, and mother has enough to do without doing mine. I'm always too tired evenings to do much,'' she added almost defiantly, as though she expected Bessie to preach to her on the sin of Lord's Day breaking.

''I can sympathize with you, Doris—may I call you that, please? I clerked once, for a short time, and I know something about how hard it is,'' responded Bessie. She had been looking at curtain materials. She asked to see the cretonnes in order to prolong the conversation.

''If they would only pay what the work is worth, it would not be quite so bad here,'' complained Doris, spreading out the cheery patterns for her customer's inspection.

''If you could only do stenographic work, how much easier it would be for you,'' mused Bessie.

''Say, that's what I thought I should be doing, but where is there anything like that in this town—a vacancy, I mean. I couldn't go anywhere else, for mother likes it here and depends on me so. But skimp as we will on my small salary we can scarcely make ends meet. Oh, I get pretty desperate sometimes,'' concluded Doris, with a sigh.

''Do you know shorthand and typewriting?'' demanded Bessie eagerly, trying to conceal her excitement. She had a wonderful idea, if only——

''If I don't, I should,'' the other replied. ''I spent eight months in business college learning it, and then—''

''Then you may as well hand in your resignation here, for I know of a position waiting for you over at the bank where I work. At least, I am reasonably sure of it. President Stallard is considering hiring a girl to do general office work, filing, etc., and also to take what little dictation he might have. He is tired of picking the letters out himself, and he asked me to be on the lookout for some one. He will take any one whom I recommend. Would you like to come?''

''Would I?'' echoed Doris. ''It would be heaven compared to this, even if it didn't pay any more.''

''I feel reasonably sure the salary would be more than you receive here. And then there would be opportunity for advancement, if you liked the work.'' Bessie left the store promising to let Doris know soon.

President Stallard was agreeable. So Doris was added to the bank staff and everybody concerned was finding the arrangement congenial. But several weeks had passed and Doris had not yet entered the Sunday school.

Bessie had not given up hope, though most of the other girls had won their girl and the class was becoming more interesting all the time. She continued to ask Doris whenever occasion permitted, telling her of the good times they had and how helpful the class sessions were. Doris always declared she would like to go, but that she just couldn't find time. And Bessie, who had been in her friend's home and understood some of the conditions there, felt that she did have a reasonable excuse. And yet, if she realy wanted to come, she could find time, she thought.

It wasn't altogether the fact that Doris refused to go to Sunday school that was responsible for Bessie's graveness as she was returning to work at the noon hour that particular October day. She had been hearing rumors that Doris had not been altogether honest while working at the store. Bessie wasn't one to give much heed to rumors and yet she had to admit that she had taken Doris on faith. She hadn't thought of the question of references, and President Stallard hadn't mentioned it. He had just left the whole matter to her discretion, which wasn't strange, for he had known Bessie and her folks for years, and he had come to depend upon and trust her during the year she had been in the bank.

''If only Doris would come to Sunday school,'' she mused as she neared the street on which Doris lived. ''As it is, she hasn't a single influence for good in her life that I know of, except what little I may have, which to all appearances seems precious little. Dear Lord ,help me win her—" she prayed. Then Doris joined her at her corner and they proceeded uptown together, stopping to admire the new scarfs in Blake's windows.

"Oh, I must have one of those darling blue ones!" exclaimed Bessie. "And that wine one would be just the thing with your dark hair, Doris. What say we drop in after work this evening and get them if they are still here." It didn't occur to her that perhaps Doris couldn't afford one. She had heard her say on different occasions that she wanted a scarf, as she had never owned one.

Doris was unusually silent as they walked on toward the bank, and Bessie wished she had thought twice before speaking about the scarfs. She thought of Doris helping keep her large family of brothers and sisters, and trying to dress decently on her small salary, and she would have given anything to have recalled her words. Doubtless the girl didn't have two dollars and fifty cents left out of last month's salary, and her shoes were getting shabby, she noticed. Of course, they were more necessary than a crepe de Chine scarf.

Again there came to Bessie's mind the rumors she had hard of articles being missed at Taylor's, where Doris had worked. Nothing was definitely known but suspicion pointed to Doris; then because she had resigned to go to the bank the matter had not been pressed.

Just then they met Irene Darby, on her way to work in the loan office. Bessie's smiling greeting froze on her face as Irene passed by with averted face. Doris noticed it.

"One of your Bethlehem Stars, isn't she?" Bessie nodded with flushed face. "Doesn't seem to like the company you keep. I suppose she would give your little friend Doris a hearty welcome if she should decide to join the class," she added with bitter sarcasm.

"You mustn't mind Irene, Doris. She does belong to our class, but she doesn't attend regularly, and doesn't seem very interested. But, anyway, we shouldn't let what others do or say or think influence us too much, do you think? There are a number of girls in the class who will be mighty glad to have you join us."

To herself Bessie thought: "I wish Irene hadn't acted so. And I've noticed some other girls being snobbish lately. Not that I mind for myself. Oh, it hurts a little, of course, to be slighted by one's friends. But I'm not going to drop Doris now. If the rumors are true, she needs a friend more than ever. But in all probability Doris is innocent and a great injustice is being done her," thought Bessie as the girls hung up their wraps and the afternoon's work began.

Later, on her way to the vault, Bessie had passed the table where in the morning she had noticed President Stallard place some money. It was still there. He had gone out somewhere and hadn't returned before noon. "Well, he will be in soon, so I'll not bother to put it away now," she thought, though she had fully intended putting it in the vault before going home to lunch. She noticed it consisted of two one-dollar bills and a fifty-cent piece. "Just the price of the scarfs," she thought, and her face again assumed some of its former graveness.

At two o'clock President Stallard had not yet returned. The cashier had been out clerking a sale. Bessie had occasion to go to the cloakroom. Returning almost immediately, she was on the point of stepping into the main banking-room when she noiselessly slipped back out of sight. What she had seen caused her to stand, transfixed with horror for several moments. "So the rumors were true! Oh, Doris, why did you do it? Oh, why didn't I put the money away?" the poor girl fairly moaned in her anguish. "And why did I say what I did about the scarf, for I'm sure that's why she took it!" Bessie was really suffering as she stood thinking and praying as to the best course to pursue. The president mut know about it sooner or later, and then Doris would have to leave the bank. "And I'll lose what little influence I have with her," thought Bessie. She had become strangely attached to the girl since they had been associated so intimately in the bank. She didn't want to lose her as a friend, and above all she desired to win her for Christ.

Suddenly hope shone in her drawn, white face. Why hadn't she thought of it before! With fingers that trembled she opened her purse. The front door opened. A customer was coming in. She must go to the front! Hastily she transferred two crisp one-dollar bills and a fifty-cent piece from her purse to the pocket of her suit shirt.

It was President Stallard who had come in. He went at once to the desk where he had left the money. Bessie's heart almost stopped beating as she listened for his first words. Doris was filing letters in the back of the room.

"Bessie, will you get the money I left here this morning? I was afraid you might not notice it and put it away, but I see you did."

Bessie dared breathe once more. She hadn't expected the situation to play into her hands so easily.

"Certainly, sir," she said, going to the vault, where she surreptitiously slipped the two dollars and fifty cents from her pocket, and, returning, placed it in his hands. She didn't dare glance at Doris. At least she had saved her for the present. She couldn't think how it would all end. Strangely, thrtough all her chaos of thoughts flashed the words of the song, "I gave My life for thee, what hast thou given for Me?"

"Oh, I would give anything to save Doris from herself," thought Bessie as she turned with a heavy heart to her work. She thought the incident was closed, for the present at least, so far as President Stallard was concerned, and she was thankful.

But what was wrong? What was the president saying, and why was he looking so queerly?

"Bessie, I am sorry, but this isn't the money I left here this morning. It was old money, quite invaluable. Could you perhaps have—"

Poor Bessie! Too late she remembered the president's hobby of collecting old bills and coins. What should she do! Doris was coming toward them, her hand in the pocket of her jacket. Bringing forth the money she had taken from the desk she handed it to the puzzled man.

"Here is your money, sir. I stole it. In case you didn't miss it I was going to buy a scarf with it this evening. Bessie must have seen me take it, and so to protect me she was giving you some of her own." Turning to the bewildered but strangely happier Bessie, she said sincerely with tears in her eyes: "Bessie, I wouldn't have believed anyone in this world but my mother would have done for me what you have just done. Now I know there must be something worth while to be found in your Sunday school class or in the church somewhere. If you still care to have me I would like to go with you next Sunday."

Turning again to President Stallard, she said: "And now I will go, but, please, may I have the salary that is due me? If I didn't need it so desperately—" and tears choking her voice, she turned toward the cloakroom, to be stopped by the peremptory but kindly tones of the man.

"Just a moment, Miss Eller—Doris! We can't spare you now, especially since you are going to join Bessie's Sunday school class." Then as an afterthought: "I believe the Book they study in your class up there at the church has quite a bit to say abou trepentance and forgiveness, hasn't it, Bessie?"

"Yes, sir, it has," answered Bessie softly, with shining eyes, as she placed an arm about Doris and drew her gently into the cloak-room. "It's a good guide." And Bessie's Christ wasn't far away!—Young People.

THE WORST MAN

Some years ago an evangelist was conducting an open-air service in one of the lowest slums of the East of London. With few exceptions, his motley audience consisted of people who never attended a place of worship, and whose saddened and care-worn faces formed but too true an index to their lives.

As usual, bright singing and earnest prayer opened the informal gathering, after which came a plain, pointed address, proclaiming, with no uncertain sound, the Gospel of the grace of God. "Believe me, dear friends," were the speaker's concluding words, "the Lord Jesus Christ is this very hour willing and able to save the worst man in London."

At the close, a rough-lookign fellow stepped out, saying, "May I put a question to you, sir?"

"Of course you may," responded the evangelist, with a kindly smile.

"Is it really true what you said just now, that Jesus Christ is willing and able to save the worst man in London?"

"It is, undoubtedly."

"Then, sir, I am the worst man in London! Will Jesus Christ save me?"

There could be no doubt about the answer.

Before parting, the burglar—for he belonged to a large city gang—told the evangelist that he was born in prison, his family being thoroughly bad. The sole recollection he had of his wretched mother was, when a little boy of four, being held up by a warden to look at her through an iron-barred window. Subsequently he himself had been a frequent jail-bird, and that very night he was engaged to lead his gang in a desperate house-breaking raid.

The change in the man proved very real. At the time of his conversion he was just thirty-three, and for several years God spared him to give decided proofs that old things had passed away and all things had become new.

At this very moment the Lord Jesus Christ is both willing and able to save the worst man, woman, or child in the whole wide world.

OVER AND OVER AGAIN

"I want to make my life count," the girl cried, with a quick, impatient breath. "I don't want to spend it all in cooking meals and dusting rooms—things that have to be done over and over every day, and never are remembered two minutes after they're done. I want to do something that will last."

"Did you ever think," the old teacher asked, "how many things God does over and over day after day and year after year? Day and night, summer and winter, seed time and harvest, come as regularly as the cooking of meals and the dusting of rooms. The need of forgiveness, of encouragement, of strength—isn't He answering these over and over again every hour of our conscious lives?"

"That's—different," the girl answered slowly.

The old teacher smiled; she had been a girl once, and she understood. "Do you remember the miracle of Cana?" she asked. "The thirty long years of preparation were over, and the Master was going out to His public work. The marvelous baptism at the Jordan, the terrible days in the wilderness, each had borne witness that the time had come. Even the first disciples were chosen. Then came the first demand upon the power that filled Him. What was He to do—heal the sick, restore the blind, raise the dead, tell eager multitudes of the Father's waiting love? You remember that the call was to none of these things; with a whole world to love, the first duty was merely—to help out a wedding feast."

The girl had listened with brightening eyes. "Thank you," she said softly.—Home Friend.

THE COST OF DODGING DUTY

I have read of a king who placed a heavy stone in the road and hid to see who would remove it. Men of various classes came and worked their way around it, some loudly blaming the king for not keeping the highways clear, but all dodging the duty of getting it out of the way. At last, a poor peasant, on his way to town with his burden of vegetables for sale, came, and contemplating the stone, laid down his load, and rolled it into the gutter. Then, turning around he spied a purse which had lain right under the stone. He opened it and found it full of gold pieces with a note from the king, saying it was for the one who should remove the stone.

Under every cross our King has hidden a blessing. We can turn back from a cross, or go around it, but we are eternal losers if we do. We cannot dodge the cross without dodging God's blessing, and we cannot refuse it without endangering our crown—He is watching.—Unknown.

Poems That Cheer!

By GRENVILLE KLEISER

THANK GOD

Thank God for dawn,
The song of birds,
Awakening earth
And browsing herds.

Thank God for work
And wel-filled day,
The power to serve
And joyous way.

Thank God for friends
And fireside talks,
Inspiring books
And pleasant walks.

Thank God for night
And silence deep,
Protecting love
And peaceful sleep.

COURAGE

Press on! Though mists obscure
The steep and rugged way
And clouds of doubt beset,
Soon dawns the brighter day.

Keep on! Though hours be long
And days deep-fraught with woe,
Let patience have her perfect work
And vanquish every foe.

Hope on! Though all seems lost
And storms beat high,
Have faith! Be still and know
That God is nigh.

THE OPTIMIST

I sing a song to the optimist,
To the man that is brave and strong,
Who keeps his head when things go right,
And smiles when things go wrong.

I am proud of the genial optimist,
His radiant voice and speech;
He helps to smooth the rugged path
Of all within his reach.

I like the way of the optimist
Who looks for the bright and best.
He scatters sunshine as he goes
And leaves his fellows blest.

I am glad to meet the optimist
With his message of good cheer;
He carries hope and confidence
To those assailed by fear.

So here's a song to the optimist
Who joyously works and sings,
And daily shows this weary world
The way to better things.

WATCH YOUR THOUGHTS

Watch your thoughts,
Keep them strong;
High resolve
Thinks no wrong.

Watch your thoughts,
Keep them clear;
Perfect Love
Casts out fear.

Watch your thoughts,
Keep them right;
Faith and wisdom
Give you light.

Watch your thoughts,
Keep them true;
Look to God,
He'll govern you.

POINT OF VIEW

The optimist sees the sunshine,
The pessimist sees the gloom;
The optimist sees the starlight,
The pessimist sees the tomb.

The optimist sees the beauty,
The pessimist sees the smudge;
The optimist sees the craftsman,
The pessimist sees the drudge.

The optimist sees the service,
The pessimist sees the dole;
The optimist sees the doughnut,
The pessimist sees the hole.

The optimist sees the progress,
The pessimist sees retreat;
The optimist sees achievement,
The pessimist sees defeat.

WHEN SKIES ARE DARK

When skies are dark
And you feel blue,
There's always something
Good to do—

A book to read,
A friend to write,
A word to cheer,
A smile to light—

A soul to feed,
A walk to take,
A song to sing,
A gift to make.

When skies are dark
And you feel blue,
That's just the time
Some good to do.

SONG OF SUNSHINE

Sing a song of sunshine,
Know that all is well;
Harken to the message
That the robins tell.

Sing a song of sunshine,
Spread it everywhere;
There are golden treasures
You may freely share.

Sing a song of sunshine,
Joy your daily theme;
See the good around you,
Love is all supreme.

Sing a song of sunshine,
Truth is now unfurled;
Happiness your birthright,
God still rules the world.

BE GLAD

Just be glad for simple things,
Since fickle money oft takes wings!
Simple things are much the best
To bring you happiness and zest.
Simple thoughts and simple ways,
Simple joys and simple days;
Simple words and simple means,
Simple tastes and simple scenes;
Simple gifts and simple aims,
Simple walks and simple games;
Simple books and simple deeds,
Simple truths and simple creeds.
Just be glad for simple things,
Simplicity contentment brings.

THE ROAD TO HAPPINESS

The road to daily happiness
Is not so hard to find;
You walk ahead serenely
And leave your cares behind.

A word of cheer upon your lips,
A ready hand to give,
A smiling face, a snatch of song,
Will help you well to live.
The love you give to others,
The good that you may do,
The helping hand you proffer,
Will bring happiness to you.

The road to daily happiness
Is not so hard to find;
It's what you do for others
That brings true peace of mind.

PRAYER

God of the sunlight, God of the sea,
God of the twilight, God of the tree,
God of the midnight, God of the day,
God of the starlight, teach us to pray.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Rockingham.—Sunday night brought the Conference year to a close. We've had a very successful year. We've enjoyed having Pastor Saunders with us, and feel that much good has been accomplished. We hope to have him with us again next year. Hope the members will have a greater determination to have a better Sunday school and get the finances up in full.

Rev. C. W. Saunders preached two good sermons Sunday. His subject for the morning service was "Influence, Its Evil and Its Good." His subject for the evening service was "Value of the Church in the Community." A person who moves into a community inquires if there is a church there before he moves. He wants to live in a community where there is a church and a school. He feels safer, and is safer.

We are thankful for the stand that the people of North and South Carolina took in the recent election. Hope the coming year will be one of peace and prosperity.

Winston, First.—It has been a very good year for First Church, Winston. There have been 13 persons received into the church, and the average attendance for morning worship and vespers has been quite satisfactory. The Sunday school attendance has been averaging a reasonably good mark. With the old year going out—Conference—and then a glorious new year in our church, we hope to make it a better all-round place.

Miss Helen Carroll, daughter Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Carroll, is ill, and is at the Baptist Hospital. She is getting along nicely.

Mrs. W. T. Collins, one of our older members, and somewhat a shut-in, fell and injured herself a few days ago. She was taken to a local hospital for examination, but was returned home shortly. No serious injury, we think.

Sunday morning Dr. Pritchard was very much surprised when the closing of the Sunday school service was held in his honor. When all the departments had assembled in the main auditorium as usual, the general superintendent, Mr. B. K. Millaway, introduced Mr. C. H. Smith, who had charge of the special part of the program. Mr. Smith spoke of the great appreciation of the Sunday school and church for Dr. Pritchard and his splendid work as leader and helper, and his fine personality. Mr. Smith then introduced Rev. Gordon Spaugh, who spoke of Dr. Pritchard's good work in the Winston-Salem Ministerial Association, his ability, and his thoughtfulness of others. Poems were read by two members of the Sunday school furthering this appreciation. Dr. Pritchard arose and gave a very fine response. There's no place one could get him in that he could not find a fitting story and say something to get out. The entire membership sincerely hopes that Dr. and Mrs. Pritchard will come back and continue to help in this way, and the co-operation of the members, we hope, will be even greater than it has ever been before.

We sympathize with Mrs. H. O. Sapp in the loss of her brother, Mr. Lindsay.

Miss Pearl Sapp is imroving nicely.

It has meant a great deal to our Sunday school to have had such a fine sirit shown in our superintendent, Mr. B. K. Millaway. During the year, programs in honor of members and other programs that were very helpful and interesting have been put on. Mr. Millaway has worked very hard and has accomplished a lot of results, whether they be seen as yet, we don't know and cannot say. Mr. Millaway is an able thinker about things that we need to do in our school, and if the members will at once start work and cooperation, we will grow bigger and better every week.

During the church service on Sunday, officers were installed for the coming church year. A very brief installation service was used, first the names were read and then the officers went up and stood around the pulpit. Dr. Pritchard talked of the carrying out of the church work and pledging support to the church by members and officers. A prayer was offered by Dr. Pritchard and seats were again resumed.

The quota for the Herald has been reached, for which we are glad.

Union Chapel, Granville Circuit—The attendance at our church is improving greatly as the weather gets cold. We are glad to see this.

The people responded to Bro. Spencer's plea for Herald subscribers very readily. He was able to secure a goodly number last Sunday.

The Woman's Missionary thank-offering worship services were given Sunday. We were glad to have with us Mrs. F. L. Gibbs, from Westminster, Md., who so kindly consented to speak for us, and it was a most inspiring talk. The collection taken amounted to $15.30.

The Missionary Society met in its regular monthly meeting Monday evening with Mrs. Spencer, the president, at the parsonage.

Our members are paying up all church dues gradually as they dispose of their crops. We are glad to see the spirit that God comes first in all things, existing to some degree.

The officers and teachers of the Sunday school were voted on the first Sunday. There were not very many changes made from last year's group.

Enfield.—It has been quite a while since Enfield has had a report, so I'll try and mention several outstanding things that have taken place in the last few months in our town and community.

The Woman's Auxiliary celebrated Mrs. W. D. Bustin's 85th birthday June 12th by giving her a surprise party. Mrs. Bustin isn't well, and would enjoy hearing from any friends who may read this. The Auxiliary gave Mrs. E. L. Pike and Mr. Henry Neal, who have both been sick several months, a miscellaneous shower; also remembered all shut-ins in the town and community in various ways.

In September the Auxiliary gave Mr. and Mrs. Peeler a towel shower and made clothing for girls at the Children's Home.

The Auxiliary observed thank-offering at the October meeting with splendid attendance. Miss Mary Collins, thank-offering secretary, was in charge of the meeting. A very beautiful and inspiring program was given, including a splendid talk by Miss Collins. The offering was very good. After the meeting a delightful social hour was enjoyed during which time Mrs. P. S. Bellamy, costumed as a witch, entertained the guests by telling fortunes and stories. This was truly a good meeting.

A contest on money-raising has been on for the past six months between the two circles of the Auxiliary with much interest displayed. Several unique and successful ways for making money have been put on by both circles.

Mrs. Peeler left last week to visit her relatives near Shelby, N. C.

Mr. Peeler held his last appointment for this Conference year at Enfield Sunday morning and night with fairly good attendance. Mr. Peeler delivered two splendid sermons, which everyone enjoyed. Following the morning sermon the annual installation of church and Sabbath school officials, who had been duly elected for the coming year, took place. This was a solemn and inspiring service.

We appreciate the splendid service Mr. and Mrs. Peeler have rendered our community and are anxious for them to come back. The last quarterly conference, which was held at Whitakers, voted unanimously for their return, and we hope Conference will see fit to return them.

Mrs. Mary A. Barnhill, who has been sick for several weeks, was able to be at church Sunday.

R. C. Rives, who recently underwent an emergency operation at Park View Hospital, in Rocky Mount, N. C., is improving and his many friends wish for him a speedy recovery.

Siler City Church.—We have come to the end of another Conference year, and what a short year it has been! We believe all organizations of the church have tried to do their best to build up God's kingdom here on earth. Whether we have done our best or not, God is our judge.

Our beloved pastor has been with us every service, only missing one when he was sick. The first Sunday morning he brought to us a real gospel message on the theme of "Christian Liberty." After the sermon an impressive installation service was held.

On the second Sunday morning just after Sunday school the Woman's Auxiliary rendered a very good thank-offering service. Our collection was not so good as we had hoped for. Just after this service a meeting was held to raise a balance of $75.00 so our church could go to Conference with all claims paid in full. Did we get it? Well, we collected $58.75, and all members were not present. Yes, all claims will be paid in full by Conference.

Circle No. 1 met with Mrs. J. E. Fox Monday afternoon and Circle No. 2 with Miss Clata F. Andrew Monday night. Both circles were well attended and quite a little business was transacted. Delicious refreshments were enjoyed by all present. Our Auxiliary has paid all claims to date and we recently sent $10.00 to Mr. Minnis.

The Young Ladies' Circle had charge of the mid-week prayer service on November 1. Mrs. E. D. Woody had charge of the devotionals. Misses Verda Shaw Fox and Lucille Poole sang a lovely duet, after which Miss Minnie Cooper told very pleasingly the story of "Esther."

Mrs. O. E. Stone is confined to her room. We hope she may soon be able to be with us again.

We hope and trust the Conference sees fit to send Mr. and Mrs. Isley back to us for another year. We all love them very much and would hate to give them up.

Gibsonville-Fountain Place.—A good closing up of the year at both points. A unanimous vote for return of the present pastor. Salary paid in full and all paid on claims per agreement. This puts both churches on honor roll, except A. C. B. at Fountain Place. It is understood here that this church apply everything possible on church debt as this was undertaken by Board of Church Extension but had to be left out of appropriations on account of the heavy indebtedness of the board.

We have reached our goal for Herald, both in the number of subscribers asked and the subsidy fund. We appreciate the co-operation of the membership who have helped so faithfully in all these efforts.

We have been remembered substantially outside of salary by the following since last report: Mrs. William Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Kivett, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Truitt, Lednum Amick, Mrs. T. A. Amick, Arthur Kivett, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Williams, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jennings. Thank you, good folks.

This is the winding up of our fourth year here and the increase in interest and co-operation on the part of most of the membership is highly appreciated, and we are praying God's blessings upon those who have stood by us so loyally, and also upon those who have not, for it is hardly to be expected that one man can hold the interest of all the membership all the time.

We are looking forward to Annual Conference, hoping and praying that all that is done there may be for His glory.

First Church, Thomasville.—Another year has come to a close. Have we made it the best that we could? If not, it is time to begin the new year right.

By the time this reaches you, Conference will be in full swing. Much preparation is being made for the comfort of all ministers and delegates.

Our fourth quarterly conference was held on Wednesday evening, November 1st. Our delegate was instructed to bring back our pastor for another year. Quarterly conference granted Ishmael Dorsett license to preach at this meeting. Ishmael is making a fine record as a ministerial student at High Point College.

The Ladies' Auxiliary held their regular monthly meeting at the church on last Thursday night, November 9, with 15 members and three visitors present.

The meeting was opened by singing "Close to Thee." Mrs. A. H. Ragan, as devotional leader, used as responsive reading the 100th Psalm. She also made a very interesting talk on the topic, "Prayer and Missions." Just a few gleanings were read from the book, "Prayer and Missions," written by Mr. S. J. Gordon. A long business session was held with reports from different committees.

The business session being very lengthy, the question box was omitted. After singing "Sweet Hour of Prayer," followed by prayer by Mrs. Lloyd, the meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. Stewart Westmoreland December 7th.

There still continues to be quite a lot of sickness among our people. Mrs. Myrtle Barber is right sick at her home on Maple street. Ivy A. Teague, Jr., is ill at his home with pneumonia. Paul Wright, Robert Joe Ragan and Audrey Dorsett all are recovering very nicely from their recent illnesses.

A wedding which will be of great interest to many occurred Saturday, November 11, when Miss Pauline Hill became the bride of W. Shirley Hodge. The ceremony was performed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hodge, parents of the groom, with Mr. John Yokely officiating. Only interested friends and relatives were present.

Mrs. Hodge is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Hill, of this city, and attended Thomasville High School. Their many friends wish for them a happy and most successful life.

Miss Ruby Pearson, of Roanoke Rapids, N. C., is spending some time here with her sister, Mrs. T. G. Madison.

Among the visitors to worship with us Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Payne and small son, Mr. Clark, of High Point, Mr. and Mrs. Kemp Freeman, of Winston-Salem, N. C., and Mrs. Minnie Hundley.

Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Powell were with us in the evening service.

We were glad to see "Grandma" Loftin at church Sunday. She does not get to attend very often, but she comes whenever she feels able.

Denton Church, Denton Charge—The fourth quarterly conference was held in the Denton church on Friday, November 3rd, at 3 p. m., with Dr. Andrews presiding and a good representation from the other churches present. Dr. A. G. Dixon was also a visitor at the meeting. The regular routine of business was dispatched and in view of the fact that the finances were still behind, and the delegate was not instructed, the conference stood adjourned to meet the following Thursday night at the same place. At the adjourned meeting, the pastor's salary was reported paid in full from the Denton church, with the country churches still trying to traise their quotas. Since Mr. Short has decided not to return, a committee was appointed to work with the delegate in securing a supply for the coming year.

The election of Sunday school and church officers was held at the regular preaching service on the first Sunday in November. The following officers were elected: S. S. Superintendent, J. G. Rogers; stewards, W. A. Johnson, N. V. Johnson, L. U. Johnson, J. G. Rogers, D. M. Sexton; trustees, C. A. Hoover, R. C. Powell, A. R. Morris, C. H. Surratt, N. H. Johnson; church treasurer, A. R. Morris; class leaders, N. V. Johnson, E. O. Lane; C. E. president, N. V. Johnson; choir leaders, Edward Hill, P. D. Hamilton; pianist, Miss Blanche Hoover, Miss Kathleen Frank, assistant; S. S. secretary and treasurer, Clinard Sexton, Oda Beck, assistant; ushers, C. L. Kearns, Arthur Lanier, Clinard Sexton, C. T. Surratt; reporter, Max Rogers; janitor, Thomas Bailey.

With these people at the head of our church, we are looking forward to a prosperous, soul-saving year.

MAX ROGERS, Reporter.

Shoals, Pinnacle, Mt. Zion Charge.—The second Sunday was our regular preaching Sunday, and our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, brought us a wonderful message, as usual. He gets better as he grows older. Everyone of us at this church is hoping the Conference sends him back to lead us for another year.

In the afternoon we elected the officers of the church, as follows: S. S. Superintendent, J. P. Owen; assistant superintendent, Thomas Hauser; secretary, Vener Hauser; stewards, W. B. Moser, T. J. Westmoreland, D. C. Harvey, and R. T. Moser; trustees, H. C. Hauser, T. J. Westmoreland, H. E. Kiger, Ernest Barber, and C. W. Harvey.

Charlotte Church.—We have just finished our revival and we sure had a revival. There were between 12 and 15 members added to the church roll. The revival lasted two weeks. The first week Mr. Hendry had visiting ministers to conduct the services all but one night when a layman, Mr. Patterson, of the Christian Men's Club of Charlotte conducted the service. Monday night of the first week Rev. Mr. Gibson, of Amity church, preached particularly to the Sunday school. Tuesday night Rev. Mr. Anderson, of Albemarle, preached to the ladies. Wednesday night, Rev. Mr. Dutton, of Monroe church, preached to the men of the church. Thursday night Rev. E. H. Neese preached to the young people.

During the last week Pastor Hendry conducted the services and at the close of each service he arranged for some man of God to tell his life's experience. Mr. Thomas, our song director, arranged for special music each night, which we enjoyed very much.

The ladies of Wilma Shaw Bible class held cottage prayer meetings during the last week of the revival and made house to house visits to invite people to the services.

We are very glad to have back one of our faithful members, Mr. P. S. Garmon, who has been ill for a few weeks.

Mr. Thomas is starting a Glee Club this week, and by the number who gave their names Sunday I think we will have one of the best Glee Clubs in Charlotte.

We are looking forward to the next year for better music, more church members, bigger attendance, and, most of all, more faith in God.

Granville Charge.—We are very busy winding up the Conference year. We feel somewhat encouraged with the results. We are going to be able to make a better report than we did last year.

We held all of our meetings with good results. Rev. B. M. Williams, assisted us at Rehoboth, where we had a good revival with 12 conversions and 11 accessions. The people there were well pleased with Bro. Williams' splendid messages. The writer held the meeting at Mount Carmel, where we had a good revival with five accessions to the church. Rev.

S. W. Taylor, D. D., assisted us at Union Chapel, where we had good congregations. The church was revived and four accessions were made to the church.

We held our fourth quarterly conference at Union Chapel church on October 29th. The business was transacted in a spirit of harmony. Mrs. E. F. Smith was elected alternate delegate; W. R. Kittrell is the delegate. The pastor's salary was fixed for the same for another year and the conference voted unanimously for the return of the present pastor. It has been a pleasure to serve these good people on this charge, and we appreciate the expressions of appreciation that they have given us. C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Cedar Cliff, Mount Hermon.—We had our regular service Sunday, which was the last one for the year. Our new officers were elected. Mr. W. T. Coble was elected superintendent; A. G. Cooper, assistant. We have been instructed to bring Mr. Mabry back if he could possibly come back. We are confident that we could do no better. We are very proud to say that our church paid its budgets in full, as they have been doing for the past year.

Our Christian Endeavor is still moving on. We hope it will continue to grow. We had our first social Hollowe'en night. The officers for the church were as follows: Class leader, Mrs. W. T. Coble, trustees, Mr. B. H. Payne, Mr. J. B. Williams, Mr. J. D. Payne, Mr. A. G. Thompson, and A. G. Cooper; stewards, Mr. W. T. Coble, A. G. Cooper, B. M. Payne; ushers, Mr. Roy Boger and A. G. Cooper, Jr.; pianist, Mrs. H. D. Woods; choir leader, A. G. Cooper, secretary, Mr. W. T. Coble.

We are very sorry that we have several on the sick list. Mr. G. W. Rumple is very low; also Mrs. Jim McVey.

MRS. R. M. BOGER.

Siler City C. E. Society.—On Friday night, November 3, the C. E.'s enjoyed a social at the home of Miss Edith Leonard. Games and contests were played throughout the evening, after which candy, apples, bananas and peanuts were served.

On the first Sunday night Miss Berta Mae Andrew had charge of the meeting. The topic was "The Awfulness and Futility of War." This was discussed thoroughly and was very beneficial to all present. At this time new officers were elected for the ensuing year, as follows: President, Irvin Ellington. vice-president, Joy Holt; secretary and treasurer, John Robert Forrester; assistant secretary and treasurer; Beta Mae Andrew; corresponding secretary, Miss Clata F. Andrew; supervisor of music, Minnie Cooper; pianist, Verda Shaw Fox; assistant pianist. Clarice Fox, reporter, Minnie Cooper. The society was divided in four groups with a captain for each group, namely, D. G. Fox, Joy Holt, Hubert Stone and Minnie Cooper. Each group will have charge of the program once every month and the months that have five Sundays the whole society will unite and Miss Sallie Smith will take charge.

Miss Smith has been a very efficient leader since the first C. E. was organized in our church and we feel we could not get along without her helpfulness and guidance in this great work.

In the absence of our leader, D. G. Fox, for the second Sunday night, our president, Irvin Ellington, took charge of the program. The topic was "A Program for Peace." This was rather an impromptu program, but some very helpful thoughts were brought out and discussed. Hubert Stone has charge next Sunday night.

MINNIE COOPER, Reporter.

West End, Thomasville.—Mid-week prayer meeting was held Wednesday night in the basement of the church, Rev. Mr. Bell was the leader.

The Men's Bible Class met Saturday night with Mr. John Hege for their monthly class meeting and supper. Seventeen members were present.

Rev. H. W. Bell preached his last sermon of this Conference year Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. His subject was "The Tears of Jesus."

Our C. E. Society is growing in size and in interest. The C. E. Society of the South Winston M. P. church met with us Sunday night and put on a very interesting program. After the meeting a young man from their society preached for us.

Kannapolis.—We truly feel that the great God, ruler of this universe, has sheltered and protected us as a band of Christian workers. We have received some glorious blessings this past year and we are praising God for them and giving him the glory for the success that has been gained. We are proud to say that all bills of the church are paid in full except the Building and Loan which is paid up to date. All churches who did not go over the top, so to speak, have our heartfelt sympathy, for we know how you feel. And our prayers are that you will walk with the Master so close and abide by His laws that next year will be the greatest year in gain for the Lord in history of your church.

Our pastor has done a fine piece of work here this year. He has received up to date 60 new members this year and now holds a letter of one other, which brings our membership up to 156. We have been blessed to the extent of no deaths in our membership this year, although we had to give up the faithful presence of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Lisk and their daughter, Coleene. They have moved to Concord, N. C., and we miss them very much. Just hoping they will be back with us soon.

On Friday, November 3, Miss Eva Nell and Annie Mae Faggart entertained Miss Coleene Lisk with a farewell party at the home of the former. A good number of friends enjoyed this occasion, as interesting games and contests were enjoyed, after which delicious refreshments were served by the Misses Faggart.

The Ladies' Aid Circle No. 1 met on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. C. B. Price with a good number present. During the business hour new officers were elected for the year, as follows: Mrs. C. B. Price, president; Mrs. G. F. Coble, vice president; Mrs. W. T. Kiser, secretary, and Mrs. M. E. Marlow, treasurer. After the business refreshments were served.

No. 2 Circle held their regular monthly meeting November 3 with Mrs. N. F. Harris. At the business hour plans were discussed and new officers were elected as follows: Mrs. L. C. Carter, president; Mrs. N. F. Harris, vice president; Mrs. H. W. Sides, treasurer; Mrs. Inez Lisk, assistant treasurer; Mrs. X. E. Grayon, secretary; Mrs. Rena Steele, assistant secretary; Mrs. Mildred Weaver, re-elected penny march treasurer. After the business hour delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. N. F. Harris, with Mrs. Grayson and Mrs. Weaver assisting.

On Sunday, November 5, we had the pleasure of welcoming Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Christy into the church. We are happy to have them; we hope they will enjoy working with us and join us 100 per cent to do our best for the Lord.

Sunday, November 12, the morning worship hour was practically filled with the installation of officers. Miss Laura Braswell, of the High Point Children's Home, and her sister, Mrs. Barrett, favored us with a duet, "Does Jesus Care?" The officers installed were as follows: Trustees, Mr. W. M. Henderson, Mr. C. B. McCommons, Mr. C. B. Price, Mr. M. E. Marlow, Mr. J. G. Lisk; board of tsewards, Mr. Eugene Grayson, Mr. M. W. Henderson, Mr. G. F. Coble, Mr. M. E. Marlow, Mr. C. E. Gabriel, Mr. J. G. Lisk, Mr. David Abernathy, Mr. W. A. Christy; church treasurer, Mr. C. B. Price; class leadesrs, Mr. R. T. Sides, Mrs. J. G. Lisk; Sunday school superintendent, Mr. C. W. Tutterrow; assistant, Mr. C. L. Hampton; Sunday school secretary, Miss Kathern Hampton; assistant, Mr. Eugene Henderson; Sunday schooltreasurer, Mr. C. L. Hampton; Herald reporter, Mrs. X. E. Grayson; Sunday school teachers, Mr. R. T. Sides, Mrs. W. T. Kiser, Mr. W. T. Kiser, Mr. M. W. Henderson, Mrs. C. B. McCommons, Mrs. C. B. Price, Mrs. J. B. Price, Mrs. J. V. Dwiggins, Mrs. C. L. Hampton; Ladies' Aid presidents, Mrs. C. B. Price, Mrs. L. C. Carter; C. E. S. Senior president, Mr. Arthur Tutterrow.

The service was very impressive. After the installation a duet by Mrs. W. T. Kiser and Mrs. R. T. Sides, "Give Me Thy Heart," was rendered as a prayer.

As our Annual Conference convenes this week and next. We are praying that the Lord will be with those preachers and delegates and help the president in his assignments to the different pastors that all good that is accomplished that the Lord will get the praise.

Mr. R. T. Sides will be the representative of our church, but if by any reason we are disappointed in the return or change, whatever may be desired (we prefer return) in the pastor, let's all do our best in the future more than ever, for He tells us "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord." Pray for us.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—In this, our final report for this Conference year, we do feel a sense of deep gratitude for the blessings that we have enjoyed throughout the year. We have been highly favored in many respects. Sunday school and church attendance have been good, and the people have labored together in harmony. Our pastor, Dr. S. W. Taylor, has preached the wonderful story of love, Jesus the Savior of the world, from Sunday to Sunday, in so pleasing a manner that it has attracted many visitors to our services, and, best of all, has held the membership together in a remarkable and unusual manner. Everybody is satisfied with the preacher. Now, isn't that fine! That doesn't happen every year in every church, does it? The different organizations have very good final reports. While there is still room for improvement, and there's much to be done in all branches of the church work, yet we are thankful that all is as well as it is. All budgets have not been paid in full, which we do regret. Pastor's salary will be paid, and he will go to Conference with a fair report.

The young people are giving a silver tea tonight (Monday) in the junior hall, the receipts of which will go into the educational fund. The Senior C. E. Society recently presented the play, "The Old-Fashioned Mother," in Oak View School, to a crowded house. It was considered a marked success, all the players played their roles so well. They are giving this same play in the Junior hall this Wednesday night.

The Woman's Auxiliary is meeting in general session in the church this afternoon for final reports. We think the ladies will hold up to their usual good records in financial obligations.

Officers for the coming year have been elected and duly inducted into office in the installation service last Sunday week. Sunday school teachers have also been selected. It happens that a list of these names did not come into the reporter's hand, so this part of the report, of necessity, will be published later.

S. W. Taylor, Jr., has been confined to his home on West Lexington Avenue with scarlet fever. He is imroving nicely, however, we are glad to report, and the quarantine will be lifted November 21.

After Annual Conference we will start anew with a clean slate. Now, good Christian reader, let us begin with renewed enthusiasm, fortitude and deeper faith. "Be enthusiastic, for without this great impelling forward urge one cannot succeed. It is the human dynamo; it stirs; it convinces. Hold your ground. Be true to your convictions. Respect yourself and the world will respect your self-respect. Believe in yourself. Self-faith is saving faith. The trinity of faith is faith in God, faith in man, and faith in yourself. Do not allow discouragements to linger long. Let the Star of Hope point the way. Keep the sunshine of love, laughter, and work in your heart." Let us deny ourselves, take up the cross (whatever that may be) and cheerfully follow Jesus.

First Church, High Point.—Many residents of the city are still rejoicing over the result of the election a week ago, November 7th, when the Anti-repealists voted a three to one majojrity for Prohibition. There has never been a legalized saloon in the city limits in its history since the charter was granted in 1859, and there is no danger of one for some time to come. This vote is a splendid showing for the church people and better element of our population, for the dry forces waged a vigorous campaign under the leadership of Dr. A. B. Conrad, pastor of the First Baptist Church.

The fourth quarterly conference of the year convened in the assembly room Wednesday evening, November 8, after prayer meeting with a large attendance. Gratifying reports were heard from the pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, the superintendent of the Sabbath school, chairman of the board of stewards, Woman's Auxiliary, etc., all of which is strong evidence that the First Church congregation has been very active for the past year, despite the discouragement of the hard times and business depression. A spirit of hopefulness for the future prevailed. Arnold J. Koonce, delegate-elect to Annual Conference, was instructed by a majority of the votes cast to ask for the return of Pastor Farmer for another year. Report of the Sabbath school superintendent, J. C. Whitesell, shows an average attendance of 351. The Woman's Auxiliary, under the leadership of Mrs. John C. Whitesell, has been unusually active and helpful to the pastor. An interesting feature of the session was the reception of two new additions to membership, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Payne, who transfer from Pleasant Grove church, Rev. D. R. Williams, pastor. From the same church came Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Meredith, who live on the Thomasville road; they united with the church at the Sunday evening service. Both these couples are heartily welcomed to our ranks.

The congregation was delighted to hear Dr. F. W. Stephenson, secretary of the Board of Education, when he filled the pulpit Sunday at the 11 o'clock service. He is a guest at High Point College, and will attend the sessions of Annual Conference at Thomasville. At this service Mesdames J. H. Allred and J. C. Whitesell sang Mendelssohn's lovely duo, "I Waited for the Lord." The evening service was featured by a special sermon by the pastor, Rev. Roy I. Farmer, addressed to the Andrew Jackson Post No. 87, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 610 jointly. This service was in commemoration of Armistice Day, November 11.

At a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of parents and school children in the Junior High School auditorium Sunday afternoon, President G. I. Humphreys of High Point College, spoke on the theme, "Your Child and Mine." He told them that High Point's greatest values are not in beautiful churches, magnificent school buildings, busy factories, handsome homes, but in its childhood and youth. Education must provide spiritual emphasis. It really begins at the cradle and goes on through all the years. These things must be stressed in childhood, high ideals, worthy motives, plain faith in the greatness of life and the glory of living, plain faith in a heavenly Father, charity, decency, honor, sincere devotion to things good and true, wholesome relationship with folks, a simple belief in the good life. We are the trustees for the greatest asset that High Point has. We fail utterly if while feeding and clothing our children and directing their minds and giving them insight into books, we do not develop these things of the spirit that alone can enrich life and beautify it and make it worthy. This thoughtful and practical address was well received by the audience.

Dr. R. M. Andrews will preside over the sessions of Annual Conference, which convenes Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock at Thomasville, Rev. R. I. Farmer will deliver the Annual Conference sermon after the preliminaries are over, and Dr. Geo. R. Brown, ex-pastor here but now of Reidsville, will next Sunday morning deliver the ordination sermon at 11 o'clock.

The Circles of Woman's Auxiliary met Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in different homes.

The Senior C. E. Society held its usual weekly meeting at the church Monday evening, with Ralph H. Vance leading.

A tea is being held this (Tuesday) afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock at the beautiful home of Mrs. C. C. Robbins, south of the city, sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary. Six ladies, Mesdames R. M. Andrews, P. E. Lindley, L. R. Peacock, Minnie P. Harrell, G. I. Humphreys, and Miss Mary Young, will present the Foreign Mission Study book. Several out-of-town guests have been invited: Dr. and Mrs. Maier, of Lexington; Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wills, of Greensboro; Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro; Dr. and Mrs. S. W. Taylor, and others. There will be special music and tea and sandwiches will be served.

Cordial sympathy is extended by many friends to Mrs. S. C. Voncannon in the death of her father, Mr. John Robert Mebane, of Burlington, which occurred Sunday afternoon, November 12, while on a visit to his daughter, Mrs. C. C. Staley, near Liberty, after an illness of only four days from heart disease. He was 79 years of age, and had lived in Burlington 30 years, but was a native of the Mount Hope Church community. He is survived by six daughters and two sons, and was a member of the First Reformed church of Burlington, where funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mr. Mebane was well known in High Point, having spent two winters here with his daughter, Mrs. Voncannon.

Mrs. R. T. Pickens and daughters, Misses Lucille and Annette, drove to Concord Sunday to spend the day with her sister, Mrs. Frank Armfield, and family.

Mrs. John S. Pickett, Mrs. Lester R. Peacock, and Mrs. J. Hobart Allred will work in the Red Cross Roll Call on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. More than 250 workers are engaged in the campaign, and the goal is 3,000 members.

A large number of friends are gratified to see Mrs. W. C. Hammond out again after a long illness.

GETTING RID OF HIM

"No more shall I hear Tolliver's footsteps on yonder walk every night as the clock strikes eight."

"Goodness gracious, Naomi!"

"And the old parlor light will never be turned out for him again."

"You don't mean it!"

"I do. And furthermore, he will never sit on the sofa beside me seven nights a week and call me pet names as he has been doing for two years."

"You could knock me over with a feather!"

"And tonight I am going to burn all his old love letters and empty out my bureau drawer."

"But—are you going to discard him? I thought he was a very good fellow, as men go."

"Discard him! Why, you goose, I am going to marry him."—Exchange.

ANNUAL REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT OF CHILDREN'S HOME

The trustees of the Children's Home met last Thursday, November 9th, and the following is a part of the superintendent's report to the board:

Dear Fellow-Workers:

Under the providence of God we have completed another year of service for dependent children through the M. P. Children's Home. The blessings of the dear Father have been abundantly upon the work and the workers, and because of this we preesnt to you a report showing progress. The health of our workers has been reasonably good and very little time has been lost because of sickness. The Duke Endowment is requiring that our workers as well as our children stand a physical examination.

The Children

Your interest is in the children, so it is of them we speak first. All other parts of the report are made because they have to do with keeping the children. There are 107 children in the Home, exactly the same number we had at this time last year. We are trying to be more and core careful to admit only the worthy needy ones. These are terrific times through which we are passing, the need is very great for this kind of service, and our church will not fail the dear Lord at a time like this. The health of our children has, in the main, been good. A few cases have caused us anxiety. Dr. S. S. Coe, Dr. J. W. Austin, Dr. W. L. Jackson and others have been prompt and faithful to respond to our needs during the year. The State Board of Health sent a dentist, who gave a week's time without cost. He went over the teeth of every child in the Home, and said that he had never before treated so many children with so little work.

School Advantages

Ninety-nine of our children are in school at Jamestown, one is taking a business course, and two are in High Point College, a sophomore and a senior. The work in the house, on the grounds and on the farm is done largely by the older children under proper direction, although all of them who are of school age go to school. We strive to have them make a perfect attendance record at school.

We have cut our paid help to minimum, and are using college students to help in keeping study hour, teaching music and in directing the work. We are trying this out, and will keep it up if it proves satisfactory after a faithful try-out.

Religious Life

It is our sincere desire that this, in every sense of the word, be a Christian Home. We have the advantage of First Church, High Point, our own Christian Endeavor Societies, and the daily devotional services. The children are also taught to memorize portions of the Bible. We wish we could do more for their social, moral, and spiritual welfare. But with the help of the church and the school we are doing all we can. We are keeping the buildings and the ground in the best condition we can with our limited funds.

Outstanding Gifts in Substance

The Deton Church: Two loads of lumber, hosiery, and other produce and money amounting to about $200.00.

Fountain Place Church: Dress goods and produce and money totaling over one dollar per member.

The Home Building Company, Asheboro: One load of lumber to build platform for Home-Coming Day.

The Biltmore Industries, Asheville: One large crate containing more than 200 yards of Biltmore homspun, out of which we had made 34 suits for our larger boys, and some coat-suits for girls.

Mr. M. C. McDonald, West End, N. C., 75 bushels of fine peaches.

Miss Cleo Harrell, East Bend, N. C. helped us to secure about 400 gallons of blackberries at a very reasonable rate.

The Gould Foundation of New York: Two rocking boats, and money to buy 14 single beds and springs, 14 mattresses and 10 pollows.

Mr. Fred W. McPherson, High Point: Has done all of our heavy laundry for the entire year.

Estates: The Enoch Ludford estate of Plymouth was finally settled and we received a balance of $298.02. Mrs. Lettie Smerdon's estate, Henderson, $250.00.

Clothing for Children: A number of our Women's Auxiliaries took the measurements of children sent them, bought the material and cut and made dresses and slips for a large number of our girls this fall. A few men and men's classes responded with money to help buy clothing for boys. First church, High Point, led in this.

Many churches and charges have joined heartily in making donations of canned goods and other produce. This has proven a most helpful project for the Home.

Silver Anniversary and Home-Coming Day

This day as planned and carried out by our friends on June 8th, 1933, was a great success in every way. The day was ideal, the people came in goodly numbers, the speaking was of a high grade, a goodly number of the children came back, everybody seemed happy and the day netted the Home about $600.00.

The Farm

The work on the farm is done by two men and the boys, and notwithstanding the dry season, the farm has yielded more produce this year than in any previous year. Farm prices being so low, the show in dollars is not as large as it otherwise would be, but the produce is worth just as much as ever to the Home. The summing up of the results takes a small space, but it has taken faithful service to bring it about.

The farm has yielded as follows: Pork, 4,923 pounds; beef and veal, 1,623 pounds; sale of pigs, beef, etc., -54.85; chickens for table use, 228; eggs, 1,531 dozen; 109 loads of hay, 60 tons of ensilage, 8 tons of corn stover, 330 bushels of Irish potatoes, 356 bushels sweet potatoes, 147 bushels of wheat, 350 bushels of corn, 50 bushels cane seed, 190 gallons of molasses, 12 bushels dry peas, 14,051 gallons of milk, about $30.00 worth of wheat-straw, and vegetables from gardens and truck patches at least $500.00.

Making a total of about $8,357.17, about 40 per cent of which is clear profit.

We have sowed about 40 acres to wheat and 17 acres to oats.

Our Live Stock

There are at present on the farm four mules, 15 cows, 15 calves and heifers, one male cow, 18 hogs for killing, four stock hogs, 25 pigs, and about 275 chickens.

Special Recommendations

1. We recommend that an Annual Home-Coming Day be set and observed by this Home, and that a silver offering be made on that day for the benefit of the Home. The day to be designated as "Children's Home Day."
2. We recommend that the Secretary of Children's Home for North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary be invited to be present and to sit with the Board of Trustees in their regular meetings.

Both recommendations were unanimously adopted.

The Hand of Death

We record with sorrow the death of one member of the Board of Trustees of this Home, Dr. Fletcher R. Harris, of Henderson, N. C. Dr. Harris was a faithful member of this Board from the organization of the Home until his death. He was deeply interested not only in this institution, but in all the institutions and organizatios of the Methodist Protestant Church, which stand for Kingdom progress and the betterment of mankind. Dr. Harris loved humanity. He was a great man, one who was sometimes called visionary, but the Lord has said, "Without vision the people perish." Would that there were more visionary men among us. Mr. J. Norman Wills, a life-long friend of Dr. Harris, was asked to write Mrs. F. R. Harris expressing the sympathy of the entire board.

An Added Word About the Children

This added word is given only to show some of the fruits of the work done here. During the last five years the following have graduated from the Jamestown High School:

May, 1929, Eloise Beam, went to college two years and is teaching.

May, 1930, Laura Braswell, still with us and is a Senior in High Point College; Lola Mae Byrd, in her third year in Long's Sanatorium, Statesville; Virginia Beam, went to college three years and is teaching; George Crickmore, went to college three years and is working.

May, 1931, Herbert Garmon, went to college two years and is working; Mary Crickmore, took a business course and married Mr. L. L. McClure.

May, 1932, Christine Latham, still with us. A sophomore in High Point College; Flora Coble, took a business course, working in Greensboro.

May, 1933, Howard Byrd, still with us, taking a business course; Paul Guice, still with us, not yet able to get work; Ruth Beam, with her people in Cleveland county, wanted to take a course in music.

Cash for the year came from the following sources:

* Subsidy paid in full.

This apportionment is based on one subscription to each ten members, which we do not think is too much to expect, or beyond the possibility of attainment. We are urging every pastor, every one who now takes the Herald, and every Herald agent to get busy on their charges and see how quickly these quotas can be reached, and the charges become Herald Honor Roll Charges. Start now, and keep at it until the goal is reached.

THE COMMITTEE.

This is fine for our last report before Conference, and we thank you.

In our Harvest-Home offering from Hickary Ridge, Forsyth, there were 68 quarts of canned fuits and vegetables which failed to get into our report in the Herald. We apologize to the good women of that church. We always appreciate offerings of that kind.

Other donations in produce are not reported this week because we are asking for so much space in the Herald. We thank you for the donations, and will report them a bit later.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON, Supt.

VOLUME XL GREENSBORO, N. C., NOVEMBER 23, 1933 NUMBER 2

What Is Sin?

Sin is missing God's true mark,
Sin is wandering in the dark,
Sin is turning from the way,
Choosing night for perfect day.

Sin invades forbidden ground,
Sin gives forth uncertain sound;
Sin disfigures where it goes,
All its mischief no man knows.

Sin provokes the wrath above—
Wrath that's tempered by God's love.
Sin's so ugly it must die,
Thus will God clear earth and sky.

Conference Notes

Thomasville, the seat of conference, is a clean-looking city pleasantly situated on the Southern Railway, and the wheels of industry are heard humming.

Thomasville has three Methodist Protestant churches. The first was built about 30 years ago; the second, 10 or 12 years ago; the third, recently. The conference was held in the second, the magnificent church built by Bro. Charles F. Finch as a memorial of his dead wife. A sight of this church impresses one with his generosity.

Rev. H. Freo Surratt was the efficient host of conference. He was so accommodating that he consulted each guest as to his diet. One delegate called for corn bread and cabbage. No one called for humming-bird tongues, we believe.

The tallest man in conference was probably Bro. W. F. Redding, of Asheboro. His father is a phenomenally tall man. One time when the latter was in a southern city he was followed along the streets like a circus by a crowd of boys, one of whom cried out to him: "Say, Mister, reach up and hand us down a buzzard!"

Dr. G. W. Haddaway in an impressive speech on our mission fields reported that Rev. J. F. Minnis had been wired to remain with the mission workers in India.

President Humphreys gave a hopeful report of High Point College which we hope to publish this week.

Rev. Frank Stephenson made a nine-point speech for the college. He is secretary of the Board of Education and knows what he is talking about.

Dr. S. W. Taylor and Rev. J. L. Trollinger were called away to conduct funeral services.

It was proposed that the usual layman be left off the stationing committee. It quickly brought a layman to his feet in opposition. Not only was it opposed, but to emphasize the opposition the biggest layman in conference was made a member of the stationing committee.

Conference suffered a slight interruption on Friday afternoon. The hour to hear fraternal delegates from two M. E. conferences in North Carolina had arrived and been announced and the delegates were on the platform ready to make their addresses. It was a tense moment. President Andrews was on his feet to introduce the first speaker. Just then a loud, clear voice was heard from the rear of the auditorium saying, "Mr. President, may I ask a question?" The president replied: "What is the question?" The man with the question was encouraged and moved forward to the front of the auditorium. The president protested that he was out of order as the fraternal messengers had the right of way and must not be delayed, as they had to speak and return by night to their distant homes. "That's just my situation," said the man with the question; "I am far from home and must return before nightfall." This provoked general laughter and the irrepressible questioner was allowed to proceed. His question was: "Is there any church law by which church members can be made to attend their prayer meetings?" He asked the question as Pilate asked, "What is truth?" and did not wait for an answer.

Brother George B. Harris, of Henderson, was an interested spectator of conference proceedings.

Brother Reiner, of Baltimore, was present as he usually is with books new and old.

Rev. Ferry Lee Gibbs was in attendance in the interest of his department of work.

Rev. F. W. Paschall was assistant secretary of the conference.

The spirit of the conference was good so far as we saw it. The brethren were courteous, sympathetic and mutually helpful.

We hope for all, ministers and laymen, a reasonable degree of satisfaction with their appointments and a year of great success.

Next conference goes to Grace church, Greensboro.

See the report of the stationing committee in another column.

Next Week's Issue of The Herald

Next Thursday is Thanksgiving Day for the United States, so proclaimed by President Roosevelt. Our printers wish to observe the day. THE HERALD will therefore be printed on Wednesday of next week. Please send your articles as early as possible.

THE 106TH SESSION OF THE NORTH CAROLINA ANNUAL CONFERENCE

J. L. Trollinger, Reporter

It is doubtful if a more favorable condition of weather could have been found for the meeting of what was, in the minds of many, the best and most agreeable session of the Annual Conference held in many years. The ministers and delegates were practically all present for the first session, and that is something entirely different from other years. So, the weather and the attendance upon the first service were all that anyone could wish for.

Dr. R. M. Andrews, our congenial and lovable president, conducted the worship service, which was characterized by its simplicity and deep spirituality. The sermon by Rev. Roy I. Farmer gave all those who heard it a stronger belief in the gospel of another opportunity to rebuild one's life. The theme, "The Bird With a Broken Wing," gripped the congregation from the very beginning, and as he progressed in the development, we were assured of two things, viz., that we were listening to a man who knew how to develop and deliver a sermon, and, best of all, one who believed in the deep fundamentals of the Gospel of Jesus.

Since the president's message has already been published in the M. P. Herald, it is needless for me to say much about that, except to say that not only was it a profound utterance setting forth actual conditions, but that address became the keynote of every act of the conference, and as reports were read, resolutions formed and debate carried on day after day from the conference floor, a close observer was conscious that the theme running like a golden thread through the president's message was finding its way into every thought and decision of the conference.

The election of officers gave Dr. Adrews what was said to have been the largest majority in many years. Brother W. F. Redding, Jr., Asheboro, was elected lay member of the stationing committee on the first ballot. Dr. Bates was elected for the 18th term as secretary; Dr. Fred Paschal, appointed assistant; Rev. C. B. Way, statistician, but later resigned, and Rev. E. G. Cowan elected in his stead; Prof. J. H. Allen, of Reidsville, succeeds Dr. Brown as treasurer, and this writer was honored with re-election as reporter for the conference.

The Special Commission on Financial Recommendations submitted their report in mimeographed form, and for two days the conference studied the report privately, and when the time of adoption came it went through without very much hesitation. It is well for us to consider certain points of the report.

The expenses of the Annual Conference, viz., president's salary together with office and traveling expenses, interest on the president's parsonage and parsonage upkeep, treasurer, secretary, reporter, statistician, incidental expense account for the Annual Conference, and an allotment for The Herald now constitute the Annual Conference Budget. This item totals less than $4,000. Superannuates will no longer share in the A. C. B., but will have a separate appropriation of $2,500, church extension receives $2,000 to be applied on outstanding obligations, a fund for retirement of Annual Conference obligations is $2,000, and the High Point College maintenance fund is reduced from $10,000 of last year to $5,000. All these items will be allotted to the charges on the same basis as last year. Even though the conference has separated these items, the charges have the option of paying to each separately, of making the entire amount allotted to their churches into a budget. Even if the budget is combined, the assessment will in most cases be smaller than of last year. This came about because Dr. Andrews recommended that the smallest amount possible, upon which the conference could be run, should be assessed to the churches.

Someone asks, "Why separate the items from the budget?" This can be answered in few words. We have been hearing for a long time that the Annual Conference expenses have taken money from the superannuates and the church extension. Those who are close to the workings of the conference know that this statement has become a stereotyped expression on the floor of conference. Acting from this standpoint, the commission set about to remedy conditions. Now, with the new financial set-up, this "thorn in the treasurer's flesh" will be removed. If people are as anxious, as some believe, to relieve the Board of Church Extension, and to make life easier for the superannuates, now is their chance to do it. If their argument is true, there will be no sad faces carried about conference by members of these two boards.

The Conference Council of Religious Education, formerly sharing in the A. C. B., will wage their own campaign for funds, through C. E. Societies and Sunday Schools. The Children's Home will carry on as before, and the conference urges all Sunday Schools to contribute one Sunday each month to this institution, as well as continue to give produce and clothing to augment cash offerings made to the Home.

It is interesting to note from Dr. Dixon's report that this year has brought an abundant harvest from the Home farm. Aside from what has been given to the Home, the report says that the total value of the farm income was more than $8,357, 40 per cent of which was net profit. Forty acres have been sowed to wheat and 17 will bring forth oats. The live stock is valued at more than $2,000.

Upon recommendation of the Pastors' Summer Conference, which received the support of the conference faculty, a forward step was made in ministerial education when conference voted to authorize an extension school for ministers during the summer. This school will be under the direction of the Seminary and High Point College, together with members of the conference faculty. Courses offered in this school will be advantageous to young men who have not completed their conference course, and another course for those who desire credit towards a degree. Dr. Holloway, of the Seminary, said that his institution would gladly give credit for work done in the school.

Dr. G. I. Humphreys, president of High Point College, spoke during the Christian Education hour, and declared that "I say, simply, yet sincerely, there never has been a time since I assumed presidency of this institution, that I was more hopeful for the future of High Point College than today."

Dr. George R. Brown brought the ordination sermon on Sunday morning, using as a text Acts 5:20, "Stand and speak in the temple to the people, all the words of this life." Approximately 3,500 people heard that sermon, and went away knowing that Repentance, Regeneration and Sanctification of life were fundamental factors, not only in the life of a minister, but in the life of laymen as well. President Andrews was assisted in the ordination service by Dr. Gerringer and Dr. Dixon. R. L. Hethcox, Earl Cook, J. T. Bowman and D. T. Huss were ordained to the office of elder in the Church of God and elected to membership in the conference.

Sunday afternoon Prof. Guy B. Phillips, superintendent of Greensboro (N. C.) city schools, addressed the Laymen's Fellowship on "Finding the Lads and Lassies." Officers elected were: President, J. G. Rogers, Denton; vice president, F. G. Hammer, Gibsonville; secretary-treasurer, J. W. Boyles, Thomasville. H. A. Garrett, Burlington, and Hon. J. B. Hicks, Henderson, were elected on the Executive Committee.

Among visitors to the conference were Dr. G. W. Holloway, Dr. F. W. Stephenson, Dr. F. G. Holloway, our own F. L. Gibbs, Dr. I. G. Greer, of the Baptist Orphanage at Thomasville; Dr. P. N. Garber, of Duke University, and Mrs. Edith Kilbuck, a former Moravian missionary to Alaska. All of these persons brought thrilling and inspiring messages to the conference and left us inspired to greater things in Kingdom service.

Monday, the closing day of the conference, dawned bright and clear, and it appeared that preachers and delegates had generated much surplus steam over the week-end. From the resolutions presented that day, we thought that something was really going to happen, and it did for a while. Oratory ruled supreme for more than an hour, and when the smoke of battle had died away we found several resolutions passed into law so far as this conference was concerned. They follow:

"Whereas, there is a growing tendency on the part of church members of this day to engage in dancing and other questionable amusements, and whereas, such conduct hurts the influence of the church and retards spiritual growth;

Therefore be it resolved, that this conference is opposed to dancing and card playing, and that the pastors and religious teachers do all in their power to influence those under their care to refrain from such conduct."

Of course, this seems to be a big order, but from what the brethren said on the conference floor, it must be done, and it is to be seen just how far the promoters of this resolution get with such legislation during these days when people are repealing rather than making laws.

Following closely upon the heels of this resolution came another which will send a saddening quake into many a breast heretofore not so easily shaken, for it said, "Whereas, it has become the custom of special delegations and personally appointed representatives to come from many of our charges to exert influence in the stationing of some pastors, which effort has hindered more often than helped the work of the conference, and has sometimes resulted in misunderstandings and bitterness back home; Be it resolved, that it is the sense of this conference that the official boards of our churches should see to it that those who are elected delegates are the very best qualified to serve as can be found, and that these official representatives be the only ones who shall present the claims and interests of the charge to the Stationing Committee.

In surveying the roll of conference, it was found that several ministers would be left without work, and the brethren brought out and adopted another resolution, far-reaching and meaningful, as the reader can readily see. The sense of the resolution is "that we do not accept ministers from other conferences and assign them to our charges until all of our available usable men are assigned, and that no charge shall be left unsupplied as long as there are available usable men to supply them." This resolution grew out of the tendency on the part of some charges asking that they be left unsupplied, and later asking that a minister from another conference be appointed to their work.

In adopting the report on social service the conference declared itself as being in the fight for the complete enforcement of all laws on the statute books of the state, and most especially that of prohibition, as related to the state. It was declared that North Carolina was the first state to vote for the adoption of the 18th amendment, and while the much-discussed liquor amendment was lost to the Federal Constitution, yet there are laws that strongly forbid liquor in the state. The report said in part, "In this connection we rejoice in the stand recently taken by our state which said that so far as this state is concerned, legalized liquor, or any other kind of intoxicating beverage, has no legitimate place in our commonwealth. We call upon all those in authority to make even more effective the present liquor laws of the state, and we further call upon our people to create and sustain such a moral nvironment as will compel retention and enforcement of our present state laws. North Carolina has become the pivot in the great battle against legalized liquor in America and the world. We must not turn back." This report said further that the church should root out all causes of war and help sustain the spirit of brotherhood among the nations. In the field of domestic relations, the conference went on record as deploring the increase in divorces and the breakig of American home life. There was expressed the feeling that this might be remedied by a more uniform divorce law throughout the nation.

The conference accepted the invitation of Grace church, Greensboro, to meet with them in our 107th annual session November 20, 1934. Rev. H. Freo Surratt, Thomasville, was elected to preach the conference sermon, and Dr. L. W. Gerringer, Henderson, will deliver the ordination sermon.

—Times are too hard to take the church paper? But America has more than twenty millions of automobiles. The price of gas consumed in one ordinary "Sabbath day's journey" would buy the paper for a year with something left over to send it a while to someone else.—Wesleyan Methodist.

—There are sermon tasters—those who love to hear preaching and know how to listen; and there are sermon critics—those who do not enjoy preaching and cannot listen because they are cynics. The one type is spiritually minded, the other spiritually without any mind at all.—Christian-Evangelist.

THE BIRD WITH THE BROKEN WING

Below is a copy of the conference sermon by Rev. Roy Irwin Farmer, preached on last Wednesday morning:

Eccles. 9:12: "As the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men snared in an evil time."

Isaiah 61:1: "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted."

Jeremiah 18:4: "The vessel that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter; so he made it again another vessel."

1 John 2:1: "If ay man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous."

Modern as may seem the NRA (National Recovery Act) and the C. C. C. (Citizens' Conservation Corps), both are antedated by the length of the Scriptures in the effort to reconstruct men and times. "Valuable as they may be, there is yet the basic necessity of laying the foundation stone in God's way of salvation from the forces of distintegration."

One day in my parish calling I came to a home where dwell a young man and his young brother. Little Bobby said, "Come out in the yard and see Kent's owl. Its wing is broken." There it was with its bandaged pinion. Kent had found it upon the street, carried it to the veterinary surgeon and had its broken wing set for healing.

Instantly there came to my mind the lines of Hezekiah Butterworth, the American author who was once editor of the Youth's Companion. He called them "The Broken Pinion."

"I walked through the woodland meadows,
Where sweet the rushes sing;
And I found on a bed of mosses
A bird with a broken wing.
I healed its wound, and each morning
It sang its old sweet strain,
But the bird with the broken pinion
Never soared as high again.

"I found a young life broken
By sin's seductive art;
And, touched with a Christ-like pity,
I took him to my heart.
He lived with a noble purpose
And struggled not in vain;
But the life that sin had stricken
Never soared as high again.

"But the bird with the broken pinion
Kept another from the snare;
And the life that sin had stricken
Raised another from despair.
Each loss has its compensation,
There is healing for every pain;
But the bird with the broken pinion
Never soars as high again."

Somehow it seemed to me that this beautiful poem was now set before me as a queer philosophy. Its sentiment is beautiful as expressed in the once much-used Sunday School song. And I resolved that the sentiment may be true of a bird; but that, applied to human life, it does not work so well. It is not in keeping with the declarations of God's redemptive love.

There are recorded the lives of certain great men and women, as well as thousands of the more humble, which lead us to believe that even their mistakes proved to be spurs urging them on to victory in great thinking and acting. Who can forget, for instance, John B. Gough, the drunkard of the lowest type, who arose to be unexcelled as a temperance orator? Or will memory ever lose the regeneration of Jerry McAuly, the wharf-thief who spent terms in the penitentiary and later founded and established the New York City mission which bears his name? Our own church has honored with ordination to the ministry one who, while in the bread-line in New York, wandered to the Bowery and, hearing the hymn, "I've Anchored My Soul in the Haven of Rest," said "Yes" to the Spirit's pleading—I refer to the Reverend Frederick Baylis, of the Illinois Conference.

Holy Writ tells us of David who cried unto God, "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation" (Psalm 51:12); and of Peter whom the Lord's persistent, "Lovest thou me?" (John 21), restored to himself and to his Christ; and of Saul of Tarsus, the persecutor of Christians, who became the preacher of the cross of Christ. Are not all these the story of twice-born men who, fallen from the heights to the depths, found a spiritual strength unknown in the former even tenor of their ways?

But I would make no plea that we do evil that good may come. There is a theory that man is stronger because he does wrong and then comes back. But there is always the inevitable loss. Moreover, does good grow out of evil as a base? Can sin ever directly produce righteousness? Hegel's view was that the way to virtue lies through sin. This makes for evil a legitimate place in human life. Prof. B. Bosanquet, in his book, "The Value and Destiny of the Individual," wrote thus: "Evil, one might say, is good in the wrong place."

In human experience, at times, evil may seem to be essentially relative to good. Virtue would presuppose vice as a counterpart. Both good and evil dwell in cultural systems. For every virtue that enters new phases some evil assumes new forms. While beneficent spirits help us, malignant spirits produce ills. With Paul we say, "I am in a strait betwixt two." (Phil. 1:23).

Our theologians and philosophers tell us there are natural and moral evils. The former are involved in the course of nature and affect not only man, but all finite creatures. Death and pain are examples. But moral evils, they tell us, are those springing directly or indirectly from the exercise of human wills. Here to be capable of sinning means to be capable of rational choice. It places the blame for moral sin on man instead of upon God. Not how or when sin began but the fact of its presence matters most to us now.

Sin thus becomes the transgression or failure to conform to God's law. Consciousness of sin comes with the recognition of a norm or rule to which we ought to conform. Awareness of the broken or neglected rule results. Sin, functioning as a collective force and developed only in a social order, has a social significance. None can dam up the consequences of a single act of sin nor make it concern himself alone. Sin in one section of a community, state or nation reacts upon the rest of it. Hence, there is always a battle to fight. The life or the church not at war with sin has lost its communion and its commission.

The redemption of the individual is not enough while the real source of infection remains. Realization of the true character of sin is the signal to fight to overcome it. The reaction to evil should quicken the superior forces of good to proving the Word which says, "Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up." (Matt. 15:13). Environment has a significance in propagating sin—a power in fostering and fastening and sustaining sinful habits. Here is the danger to youthful, growing lives—they are infected and infested with sinful habits before fully conscious of their meaning. They fall before their capacity of resistance is developed. What responsibility rests upon adult leaders today! O church of Christ, forget not the vast difference in spiritual opportunity between the life growing up in the environment of sin and that one afforded the environment of grace!

No, in God's plan there is no proper place for sin. That may sound plausible in the realm of the universal or impersonal, but will not fit into concrete and personal facts. Whose good does the existence of sin serve? What benefit is there to the neighbor of the sinner? Is it any blessing to the sinner himslf? It is unnecessary for any to plunge into sin in order to experience that reaction which is a stimulus to well-doing. Any dispassionate survey of sin and its effects on the individual or upon society reveals it as a positive evil rather than as an instrument of good. It is not a discord which brings harmony. The individual who decides to do evil can choose to do good. And choosing to do evil makes a place for sin in the world.

There are memories that bless and those that burn. Coming to us when the lights are low or "we sit alone with our thoughts," they comfort in our happiest moments or haunt and sadden us with recollections of mistakes. Paul branded himself as one of the "sinners, of whom I am chief." (1 Tim. 1:15), as he thought of the pain of persecuted Christians.

Once I clipped a picture from the Christian Herald, entitled "Mistakes That Last." A workman was carving upon the stone entrance to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City. This great edifice was to be one of the greatest—that workman dare not make a mistake to be seen by the eyes of passers-by or worshipers for perhaps a thousand years. It was impressive.

Again I was walking through the unfinished chapel of Duke University. Upon a high platform another workman was chiseling upon a pillar of an archway. The guide told my companions and me that he dare not make a mistake—that if the block of marble was marred the workman must pay for another. I said within my soul, "Can any workman of God, any co-laborer with Him make a mistake which nobody knows and which does no harm?" But you say, "Life is not observed as a cathedral or as a chapel is seen." Hear Paul (II Cor. 3:3), "Ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ . . . written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone but in fleshy tables of the heart." We make mistakes but we pay the price. Life has a most peculiar and insistent way of collecting damages. Our mistakes may be more visible and permanent than those in granite.

Yet, in human life I would not say that the bird with the broken pinion never soars as high again. So many among the immortals have proven the truth in Browning's tenet:

"We fall to rise, are baffled to fight better."

Despite the presence of sin in the world there is room for an optimistic view of life. Goethe cried, "We bid you hope." Being God's children is the basis of the Christian's hope. "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to His purpose." (Rom. 8:38). We may well accept the word of Tennyson:

"I hold it truth with him who sings
To one clear harp in divers tones,
That men may rise on stepping stones
Of their dead selves to higher things."

Some experiences of life make us say with Jesus, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." (Matt. 26:38). But still others make us joyfully hopeful. Life is commingled light and shadow. The struggle with poverty, ill health or broken confidences tends to make us feel that life is bitter. But with Keats know this: "There is a budding tomorrow in every midnight." There is a fresh spring of uplifting thought and comfort for every dark hour. The great source of hope is the religious faith of mankind. No human failure should shake our faith in the goodness of God and in the ultimate divine government of the affairs of men.

Of course, life is too rapid and superficial. It needs depth and enriching. But our hope lies in the fact that evil, though not yet eradicated, stands out in bolder, sharper contrast with the good than ever before. The Christian redemptive view of the world beholds the evil and is still optimistic. This view may not come from experience always—it is rooted and grounded in the character and promises of God. Christ died to convince us of all this. If this life were the ultimate, complete destiny of man, then were pessimism proper. "If in this life only we have hope in Christ ,we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead." I Cor. 15:19, 20). Because earth is the training school for heaven beyond, "we have been born anew to a life of hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ." (I Pet. 1:3, Moffatt's translation).

It is reported that once Dr. Schofield's face was filled with righteous indignation as he said: "People talk about the bird with the broken wing—'the bird with the broken pinion never soars as high again.' As though we did not all have a broken wing! For most of us both our wings are broken, and both legs, ad our necks!" When we look within our souls we admit this.

Without a broken pinion, can there be any ultimate victory? Sometimes it almost seems that one qualification for the overcoming life is a broken pinion or broken nature or broken heart—that God makes no offer of victory to people who have not in some way failed. David in his brokenness declared, "The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart." (Ps. 34:18). And again, "He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds." (Ps. 147:3).

Somewhere from out the past floats to me the story of Jenny Lind, the Swedish nightingale, and one who heard her sing. He realized her talent with the sweet voice [illegible] said that she would never really sing until her heart had been broken. He married her and somehow succeeded in creating the conditions for the heart-break. Then, as never before, did she sing her way into other souls. But only with Christ can we arise from some brokenness—from any brokenness of life. That is His office—"The Spirit of the Lord is upon me; . . . He hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted." (Isa. 61:1).

For all sinners He has the Gospel of Another Chance. Were it not thus, our meeting here would be in vain—useless much of the work of the past year. Some poet spoke [illegible] which may well be said to be words of the Christ—"Opportunity."

"They do me wrong who say I come no more
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door
And bid you wake, and rise to fight and win."

That is, they may well be Christ's words to all who have not committed the unpardonable sin—final [illegible].

There are only two great themes [illegible] and think, anyway—the tragic theme of the [illegible] upon the soul of man of fate, or sorrow or of sin; and the companion theme of the triumph of a man's soul over its adversities. They are in the great Greek tragedies. We have them in the Book of Job. They are enacted in great plays like "Macbeth" or "The Merchant of Venice." We read them in books like "Les Miserables" or in poems like Goethe's "Faust." The Holy Bible is their supreme picture.

Let us look for a moment, then, upon the tragic pressure upon the soul of man. The word of the Lord unto Jeremiah (18:1-10) pictured it as like unto clay marred in the hands of the potter. Jeremiah saw Jerusalem in a [illegible] condition. It was drifting from God to religious degeneracy. He was God's voice warning of inevitable disaster. Though a Jewish prophet, Jeremiah, the patriot, was mocked, insulted, and branded a traitor. How like him are some patriot-prophets today being persecuted, hounded and warned not to preach about modern sins—keep politics out of the pulpit! Yet even he, as many a modern but maligned preacher, would turn the hearts of the people to God.

The Spirit sent him to the house of the potter. Then he said, "O House of Israel, cannot I do with you as this potter, saith the Lord? (Jer. 18:6). Behold, as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in my hand, O House of Israel." Yes, He who made us can re-make us, if we will let Him. Religious leaders everywhere, both ministers and laymen, are convinced that present economic and social conditions present at once an opportunity and a challenge to the church. Under the seeming blessing of universal prosperity men closed their ears and hardened their hearts to the voice of God through the church.

Many efforts, governmental and otherwise, are now in process toward the end of reconstruction. But will they succeed any more than the external veneer of yesterday, unless they can be honored of God? Men and churches and nations must still listen to the voice of God rather than the voice of [illegible] man, no matter his position or fame. One writer says: "The church has come to the kingdom for just such a time as this. The world is in a bad way and knows it. Like a vessel that has passed through many storms, she finds hesrelf far from port, bruised and broken, off her course, compass unreliable, and no master hand at the wheel. It is a matchless day for the church."

Roger W. Babson believes that the people have lost faith in bankers, political leaders, and business giants—that they are as sheep without shepherds. He say: "What this world needs is a great religious revival." The broken wings of unrighteousness and injustice must be supplanted with the [illegible] of godliness and fairness. And the churches—our church—must lead the way. Our commission is to [illegible] principles, motives, desires and actions of all un[illegible] broken wings with which to do it? Listen [illegible]:

"I [illegible] that dared to dream
A dream beyond belief;
[illegible] that made a bed
And lay in a silken sheaf.

[illegible] I dreamed it true
[illegible] rise and fly—
[illegible] a flying flower
In a blowing of the sky."

[illegible] turn to that other great theme—the triumph [illegible] soul over its adversities. Jeremiah also said (verse 4), "So he made it again another vessel, as seemed good to the [illegible] it." It was marred but remade. This, then, [illegible] redemption—the inescapable [illegible] man is greater than his battle. It is faith in [illegible] achievement as we labor together with God. Neither ministers nor laymen are to yield to life as a hopeless task. There is a power with which to achieve. It is ours [illegible] and using.

For the ministry there is the necessity—Isaiah's "Woe is [illegible]"—the obligation of preaching the whole Gospel with earnestness and power through dependence upon the Holy Spirit. The word of comfort will be included—trouble and sorrow is the universal experience. Certainly there is not less now than before—perhaps a great deal more. The Master ministered always to troubled souls. It must be preaching authoritative, unafraid and unshaken. Christ must be exalted [illegible] power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." (Rom. 1:16).

[illegible] leaders of the church, as well as the ministers, necessity is upon us to live Christ-like lives daily—in the world but not of it. More effective, I sometimes think, than the preacher's sermon in the pulpit are the weekday lives of adherents of the church, confessors of Christ in daily walk and talk. When you exemplify the power of Christ, others desire it. There must be a revival in the church before it comes outside the church. Same enthusiasm for Christ means twice-born men.

This is no idle dream—it occurs daily. It is portrayed in "The Man I Meant To Be" (Glenn H. Stewart):

"I knew his face the moment that he passed
Triumphant in the thoughtless, cruel throng—
I gently touched his arm—he smiled at me—
He was the Man that once I MEANT TO BE!

Where I had failed, he'd won from life 'Success';
Where I had stumbled, with sure feet he stood;
Alike—yet unalike—we faced the world,
And through the stress he found that life was good,
And I? The bitter wormwood in the glass,
The shadowed way along which failures pass!
Yet so I saw him thus, joy came to me—
He was the Man that once I MEANT TO BE!

We did not speak but in his sapient eyes
I saw the spirit that had urged him on.
The courage that had held him through the fight
Had once been mine, I thought, 'Can it be gone?'
He felt that unasked question—felt it so
His pale lips formed the one word answer, 'No.'

Too late to win? No! Not too late for me—
He was the Man that STILL I MEAN TO BE."

O friends of the North Carolina Conference, the man inside you and those for whom you are responsible in the sight of God is bigger and better than you or they think he is. And that YOU in you will make you pay a high price for any, every low act. We must be square with ourselves and God—only then will we be square with the world. Only then will we win for Christ and His church.

In the Book of Revelation (Ch. 2), St. John the Divine says the church in Ephesus was sound in theology (hating the deeds of the Nicolaitanes), diligent, persevering, intolerant with evil, and patient. It was no ordinary church. If there were any such in our conference, it would be judged the very best. But hold—would it be the best? John also made this incisive analysis: "Nevertheless, I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love." (V. 4). The Lord was not satisfied; Moffatt translates it, "You have given up loving one another as you did at first." And Weymouth says, "You no longer love me as you did at first." Whichever is correct, Jesus saw a lost interest and a waning spirit. Then He said, in effect, "Make it right at this point or else I will take your candlestick out of its place." That was a penetrating, heart-breaking moment.

John Wesley said, "The greatest heresy is the lack of love. . . . I want a league with everybody who loves our Lord Jesus Christ. . . . If I had three hundred men who feared nothing but God, hated nothing but sin, and knew nothing but Jesus Christ, I could set the world on fire." Fellow ministers and laymen of the North Carolina Conference, it is fatal spiritually to let go our first love unless we "repent and do the first works." (V. 5). Broken wings? Let us hear opportunity shouting to us—

"Art thou a mourner? Rouse thee from thy spell;
Art thou a sinner? Sins may be forgiven;
Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell,
Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven.

"Though deep in mire, wring not thy hands and weep;
I lend my arm to all who say, "I can!"
No shame-faced outcast ever sank so deep
But yet might rise again and be a man!"

Brethren, entering today upon the celebration of the Holy Communion for ourselves and upon behalf of Christ's "other sheep," we may receive anew the assurance that "If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous; and He is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." (I John 1:1, 2). Let us then be dedicated to the binding up of the broken-hearted. The bird with the broken pinion may yet rise higher than before in the spiritual realm. This is Christ's declaration and purpose.

The genius of the Renaissance, Michelangelo, the Italian painter and sculptor, turned from painting to sculpture, the art he loved best. In Florence he retired into a workshop built around an 18-foot block of marble which another sculptor had half-spoiled 40 years before. Out of this piece of cast-off block of Cabarra marble two years later was unveiled his youthful, courageous "David." The world gasped at the "spirit-quailing, awe-inspiring force." He had used the marred marble, with the slice out of its side, to make a well-poised, perfectly curved body of one of the world's greatest statues, a majestic figure. Dare we believe that our Creator, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, can do less with us and those to whom we are sent? We fail only when we give up trying. Hear again Kipling's words, "We can make good all loss except the loss of turning back." This is our day of opportunity. Let us go, let us preach, let us teach, let us live for Christ and His church.

—According to recent reports the Chinese have recently taken an increased interest in museums. We are told that many of "the lovely old palaces in Peiping are now used for museums, and contain splendid collections, among them Sung seramics that cannot be approached elsewhere." The Temple of Heaven, also in Peiping, is being restored by a Chinese association for the preservation of ancient objects of art. The Siccawei Museum, located at Shanghai, has had its modest quarters replaced by a magnificent structure, and while primarily concerned with natural history, it "contains a remarkable collection of Chinese arts and crafts, both ancient and modern." The museum movement, while still in its infancy in China, is being backed with much enthusiasm by the younger generation.—The Christian Sun.

REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT OF HIGH POINT COLLEGE

BRETHREN:

It is my privilege to make report to this body for the third year of my presidency of High Point College.

In view of the place accorded the College on your program last Wednesday evening, I shall omit any general observations and make this report brief. I wish to add my high appreciation of the recognition given to the College interests and for the gracious hearing which you always give me.

The Enrollment

September 16, 1932, dated the beginning of the ninth year of the operation or our College. The peak registration for the year reached 286. This was a slight increase over that of the previous year.

It is interesting to note that the average yearly enrollment for the years 1927 to 1930 (September to June inclusive) was 16 above 300, while for the years 1930 to 1933 it was 16 below 300. The contrast is between the last years of the recognized prosperous era and the first years of the well known period of depression. It seems, therefore, that we should feel highly gratified that we have so well maintained our enrollment. Our average, therefore, for the past six years is an even 300 per year.

The report for the current year, in which we now are, will not come until the next conference, but it seems that our peak for this year will be just about the average of the past three years. Our expectation and conviction are that the country has turned that corner, in an economic sense, that we have so often heard declared, and that the immediate years are better in promise for the chance for our youth to attend college.

Again we find that our student body comes from several states, nine in all, and that the various church affiliations are well represented, making emphasis of the fact that the standards of the college make their appeal out beyond the bounds of our own denomination as well as beyond the bounds of the state.

Of our 286 students last year, 96 were out of our own churches. Of the remaining number there were 145 from the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches; this left a small number scattered among several other branches of the Christian church. I simply cite these facts to give emphasis to the statement above made, a thing which should be most gratifying to all of us.

For last year, the school program went forward in the usual manner, without discord noticeable, with no serious illness among students or faculty, and with the feeling that the work was of high caliber.

Forty-three were graduated—25 men and 18 women. The average number of graduates since June, 1927 (the year of the first graduating class) is 41. Changes in the faculty September, 1932, brought in five new members, two of whom are among this year's staff.

Financial

Our support from the church for the last college year was the smallest over a period of seven years. From the conference came $375.00, received just at the close of the last session,—just $1400 less than the year previous. No other monies came during the school year. From the Women's Branch came $496.79; their special offering passing through the General Church Board was $281.00. This made a total for the women's contribution of $777.79,—a slight increase over the previous year.

Our total receipts from the district, therefore, were $1152.79, just 41 per cent of what was given for college maintenance the year before. And the college gave in concessions $3900.00 to ministerial students and children of ministers.

I offer these figures not by way of criticism or for comment. I am only trying to show how hard has been the pressure upon us because of diminishing receipts. That you may still better visualize what it means, I would remind you that for the years ending September, 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1930 the average receipt from the conference was $5,450.00 per year. For the years 1931, 1932 and 1933 the average has been $1316.00. During the last two years the women have contributed annually an average of $736.00. This makes, all in all, from the district, an annual average of $1808.00 for the past three years. This is less annually by $3,642.00 than what it had been those previous four years.

Now, brethren, I do not chide that the College has greatly suffered by the lack of contributions. Rather I commend you for what you did so splendidly in those prosperous years, and that through these lean ones you did not altogether despair of the College. The days coming have the hope of better things. I therefore ask your prayers, labors and contributions that the College shall have the portion that is due according to your own decision and program.

I am glad, however, to be able to report that despite declining receipts the year closed with a total of expenditure much reduced from the figures of the preceding year; and with the per capita cost still further reduced than indicated in last year's report to this body.

My goal has been a balanced budget. For this year in which we are operating, we set up a budget based on last year's student roll that is nearly $12,500 less than last year. And that the church may fully appreciate the fact that the faculty is sharing with the church the lean years, I am reminding you that the total of salaries for the present year is less than last year by $8,785.00, and less than the first year of my administration by $17,403.00.

And to further remind you, and as a way of tribute to the faculty, all salaries are behind and have been behind for some years.

Now a word of encouragement. This, that after another year's operation, with a deficit because the church could not under the difficult times do the usual for the college, the college still has a very much lower net liability than in September, 1932. When the final of the Emergency Campaign pledges are in, and the books audited, a complete report will be made.

Our Opportunity

It is here, in my judgment. The Board of Education will make its annual report and its recommendations. I shall not anticipate. The recommendation of the president, that a full-time agent for the conservation and energetic carrying on of the Loyalty League, gives an insight into the mature judgment growing out of the experience of those most closely connected with the Board and the College. My feeling is that the plan is not only imperative from the standpoint of need, but it is imperative from the standpoint of opportunity. As the country regains its normal economic condition, so will the church; and as the church gains its grip upon new resources and becomes imbued with a new courage, so will it respond to the claims upon it for the conservation and growth of its institutions. I see in the Loyalty League Program and Plan, with a full-time agent directing it, the great auxiliary channel for the church to care for its interests as those interests are held in trust by the Board of Education, and find expression in the life and activities of the College.

My appeal, therefore, is that the conference and the churches stand by and support the program as it comes out of the deliberations of this session, and as it shall develop and move on through the year directed by the agencies that the conference sets up.

"Therefore, brethren, be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding" in the things of the Kingdom Life; and ADD to your faith, hope; and to hope, courage; and to courage, brotherly love—that together we may share in the things of Christ.

"Watchman, tell us of the night—
What its signs of promise are.
Preacher, Layman, out of the night
Shines that glory beaming star!
Watchman, does its beauteous ray
Aught of joy or hope foretell?
Preacher, Layman, it brings the day—
Promised Day! And 'twill be well!"

Recommendations:

1. That the conference appoint P. E. Lindley, P. S. Kennett and N. M. Harrison for work at the college.

2. That the conference reaffirm recommendation six, as proposed in my report of last year, to the effect that the first Sunday in May be designated as Christian Education Day and that our ministers be requested to preach on a fitting theme for the day.

3. That the ministers and delegates pledge their support for the college, unto the end that (a) a full patronage be sought in the matter of students from the homes of our churches; (b) that earnest effort be made to raise in full, this year, the budget for college maintenance; (c) that we rally all of our people everywhere in the district to support the Loyalty League; (d) and that the pulpits of the conference be open to representatives of the Board of Education and of the College as missionaries of Christian education.

Fraternally, G. I. HUMPHREYS.

THE HOLY CATHOLIC CHURCH

One thing which the General Conference ought to do, in the name of common sense and for the sake of general utility and effectiveness, is to eliminate the word "catholic" from our Apostles' Creed. The word is not Biblical, it is not necessary, and it is not clear to the average layman or the public in general. The Roman Catholic Church has so used the word and attached it to herself that there is little possibility it will ever fail to convey to most minds thoughts of that church. Why not let her have it? There are other words just as good. The real value of any word is in the meaning it has in the minds of those who speak it and those who hear it. The great Methodist Church admits the weakness of the use of this word in her creed by printing a neat little footnote explaining what the word means and what it does not mean and showing her right to use it, and thousands of Methodist preachers thousands of time have paused in their services to explain carefully to candidates for membership and listening congregations just what the word "catholic" means and what it does not mean. Ridiculous! Is the word worth all that? Why not replace it with a word that does not require apology and explanation?

If it be argued that the word is ancient, hoary with tradition, etc., then why not "let the dead bury their dead"? What would St. Paul have thought of such an argument? If this argument be valid, then why not repeat our creed in the Greek or in Latin, as our Roman Catholic friends do? These are older languages than ours. Our fifteenth Article of Religion is against such: "It is a thing plainly repugnant to the word of God, and the custom of the primitive church, to have public prayer in the church, or to minister the sacraments in a tongue not understood by the people." This ought to help rule "catholic" out of the creed. That our creed is not unchangeable is shown by the fact that we no longer use the words, "descended into hell," although the Episcopal Church, from which we sprang, still faithfully repeats them. We have revised our marriage service to make it acceptable to modern women; why not revise the wording of our creed to make it clear to modern minds?

If the brethren desire to continue their inward shivering and outward explaining and defending, they are welcome to it. As for me, in all my ministerial work, on the authority of the Bible, under the sanction of common sense, for the sake of practical results, and in behalf of whole-hearted, reverent worship, I have definitely "parted company with" "the holy catholic church"!—JOHN CLINE, in N. C. Christian Advocate.

HE IS COMING

If I'm faithful to my Saviour,
Live for Him the best I know,
I shall win His glorious favor
When I leave this world below.

I shall see that city's splendor
And behold my Saviour's smile;
Hear His voice so sweet and tender:
Life will then be well worth while.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE TOP LONG DRAWER

This is a story about a little boy called Paul. Paul was seven when this happened. He is much older now and has nearly forgotten all about it; otherwise I should never have dared to tell you.

It was on a Wednesday, and Paul's birthday was coming the very next day. It was always, as you know, difficult to wait for one's birthday, especially the day before, and most especially when the day before is a wet day. And it happened to be a wet Wednesday and also a half-holiday for Paul and Percy. Percy was nine and comes into this story, so it is just as well that you should know him at once. They had played Ludo in the dining room a long time, and had caught all the flies in the window, and were just in that state where you don't quite know what to do next. Then Percy had an idea. "I say, Paul," he said, "let's ask mother if we may play with the precious shells and things from the South Sea Islands." So they rushed to mother, who said: "Yes, take them very carefully from the second drawer of the bureau." "Righto!" said Paul.

I cannot tell you how beautiful the South Sea Islands things were. They almost made a wet day worth while. There were scarlet beads, andn queer little brown fruits, and yellow shells, and some dark, fierce-looking knives. "Poisoned, you bet," said Percy, tying one to his side with a piece of string. They had one of the best savage games you ever witnessed. The dining table was a forest, and behind the curtains in the window lurked the chief of the savage tribe, watching to kill the beautiful and saintly missionary. They had a little quarrel about who should be the missionary, because that part wasn't so exciting, and they agreed to take it in turns. The missionary did not carry a knife, but only a hymn book; and when the missionary sang several numbers the savage chief dropped his poisoned knife and surrendered.

But even the best games come to an end, as this one did. And then there was a long pause while the rain splashed on the windows, and there was nothing else to do. At last Paul said, "I say, Perce, I wonder what's in the top long drawer! P'raps it's my birthday present; and p'raps it's the magic lantern I want so badly." "P'raps," said Percy. Then Paul said, "Mother didn't say to you 'don't touch it'; only to me." And that was why Percy opened the top long drawer which Paul had promised not to. Yes! There it lay in shining beauty. The brass of it gleamed, and the gunmetal shone with rich dullness. Paul's heart leapt. He touched the sides with dirty loving fingers. "Oh, I say!" he said. Then there was a sound outside the dining room door, and they shut the drawer hastily.

Paul couldn't get to sleep very well that night. "Still awake, dear?" said mother, coming to tuck him in. "That's birthday excitement." Deep, deep down in his heart Paul tried to stop a beastly little prick. It hurt and made him miserable; but at last he fell asleep. And then—

"Many happy returns, birthday boy," he heard. And there was mother again, and telling him to hurry and get dressed, for there were lots of parcels on the dining room table. Paul flew out of bed, and almost directly the prick began again. "Shut up!" growled Paul to his heart, which was where the prick was "situate," as house agents say. In a brown parcel was a box. On it was written: "To darling birthday boy from mother and father." And both father and mother wondered why Paul, who didn't like kissing, flung himself into their arms and hid his face and said so many times: "Oh, thank you, mummy, daddy; oh! thank you."

There was a party that night, and the lantern show was a tremendous success. But the prick in Paul's heart got worse and worse; and when everybody was gone he could bear it no longer. He went to mother and told her how he was unhappy because he had to pretend he hadn't seen what really he had seen. And mother understood.—The Free Churchman.

SERVE WHERE YOU ARE

A policeman in Birmingham, becoming a Christian, was so greatly troubled by the sights and sounds of sin among which he worked that for a long time he and his wife prayed:

"Lord, take me out of the police service. Give me some other work."

Still no answer came and no other work was opened for him. At last he said to his wife:

"I think we have been making a great mistake. We have been praying that I may be taken out of the force, and I begin to think that He has put me there to work. Now I am just going to pray that He will help me serve Him where I am."

That was the beginning of a life of marvelous usefulness. His influence over the men was so great that he was promoted to be the head of detectives. He was instrumental in the salvation of many criminals.

The place where God has put you is the place you can do the best service for Him.—The S. S. Friend.

THE RAW MATERIAL OF A PIONEER MISSIONARY

Robert Morrison was the first Protestant missionary to China. It is said that his conversion was the result of persevering effort on the part of a timid Sunday school teacher.

"A young woman in an English school undertook to gather a class from the ragged boys of the town. Morrison was one of them. He was given a suit of clothes by the superintendent. After this he absented himself from class till his clothes were worn out. The teacher sought him and promised him another suit if he would come to her class. The second trial resulted like the first. The third time she went for him and promised him a third suit of clothes. After this she went for him for three Lord's Days. The fourth and ever after he came of his own accord. He became pious and useful. His great work was the translation of the Bible into Chinese."—The Challenge.

WHAT SOME KANNAPOLIS METHODIST PROTESTANTS THINK OF THE M. P. HERALD

I like The Herald because it keeps me informed about the work in general of our conference. Our people are more interested in the church as a whole since so many are reading The Herald. They are more interested in the Children's Home and we hope we can keep the club going next year.—R. T. Sides.

We like The Herald because we are interested in our church and The Herald gives us news of what other churches are doing. The better informed a person can be about the church, a better member he will make, and The Herald is the only medium through which we can gain this information. Then the children like the story page.—Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Price.

I take the church paper because I enjoy reading the reports from different churches and the Children's Home. I don't feel like I could do without it.—Mrs. N. F. Harris.

Everything is so good in The Herald it's hard to say which is best. The story page means so much to the children they are anxious for The Herald to come, and of course we are anxious to hear from all our churches and pastors. These I always read first.—W. T. Kiser.

I am an old lady but I surely enjoy reading The Herald. There are so many good stories and I give it to my friends to read. —Mrs. M. B. Dwiggins.

We feel like we could not be without our church paper, it has so much good reading in it and we enjoy the reports from pastors and people. It really makes a person become a better church member to read The Herald.—Mr. and Mrs. C. B. McCommons.

The Herald helps us to become better informed on our conference and the works of our church as a whole.—M. W. Henderson.

I want to thank Mr. McLaurin for making it possible for our church to get The Herald. It has been a great inspiration to me in my church work.—Eugene Grayson.

I have greatly enjoyed reading The Herald. It has meant lots to me and my family. You can read about the needs of the Children's Home and the church. The stories are interesting, and you can get information on almost any subject. I hope I can continue to take The Herald.—Mrs. L. C. Carter.

I have been reading The Herald and I really enjoy it. I like the stories and everything in it. I have enjoyed helping deliver The Heralds to 29 people every Sunday, and I hope the people will come to the rescue of Dr. McCulloch and put The Herald on its feet.—D. A. McLaurin, Jr.

GOD WILL GUIDE YOU

God will guide you,
Simply trust Him,
He knows what is best for you;
Stop outlining and repining,
Wait and see what He will do.

God will guide you,
Do not doubt Him,
Freely yield your human will;
Never straying, daily praying,
He will every need fulfill.

God will guide you,
Love and serve Him,
Like a child obedient be;
Kindness voicing, keep rejoicing,
His good purpose you will see.

—Grenville Kleiser.

CHILD OF GOD

You are a child of God,
Harmonious and true;
You are a child of God,
His Love environs you.

You are a child of God,
Protected all the way;
You are a child of God,
He walks with you today.

You are a child of God,
On His great power to lean;
You are a child of God,
Immortal and serene.

—Grenville Kleiser.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

CONCERNING COUPONS

We are asking the editor of the Herald to publish this letter this week because the time is so short in which we are to get the bonus on coupons you send in.

Dear Friends:

We've been offered some extra money. We must have YOUR help to get it. We have until December 31, 1933, to take advantage of a generous offer.

The above lines give you briefly the purpose of this letter—but following we will tell you more about the timely "Good News" that has just come to us.

You recall that the manufacturers of Octagon Soap Products, Luzianne Coffees and Tea, have been redeeming our shipments of coupons at the rate of $4.00 per 1,000, or $100.00 for 25,000. They now offer us a bonus of 10 per cent, or $110.00 for 25,000 coupons, for all coupons turned in between now and December 31st.

The needs of our Home give us, more and more, a problem to be solved—for our regular cash income is far too scanty. This generous bonus offer will help us provide some of the necessities of life for "our dependent family" during the winter season just ahead.

We know you wish to help us—so, we ask that you call a special meeting of your Auxiliary and "act now and all together." Your members HAVE demonstrated their loyalty by donating coupons. But what we must have NOW is more coupons per person—greater effort in saving and collecting coupons. Please try to make each member realize how much we need the extra bonus money—that we have until December 31, only a few weeks, in which to take advantage of an unusual opportunity.

May I count on YOU and ON EACH MEMBER giving me the pledge, "WE DO OUR PART?"

A post card to this effect will encourage me.

Yours for a big bonus,

MRS. A. G. DIXON.

MISSION STUDY BOOKS, 1933-1934

Theme: Christ and the Modern World

This is the general theme for both home and foreign missions for youth and adults.

For Adults

Eastern Women—Today and Tomorrow, by Ruth Frances Woodsmall, is the foreign mission study book. It treats of the tremendous change taking place in the life of the women of the East. Christ is the dynamic underlying this change.

Christian Missions in America, by Hugh T. Kerr, is the home mission study book for adults. This book portrays through an abundance of thrilling illustrations how the Gospel has transformed lives and renewed society wherever it has gone.

For Young People

Builders of a New World, by Robert Bartlett, is the study book for youth. Religion is the center of hope in building this new world. The personal quest for reality is answered and a program of world reconstruction discovered in the religion of Jesus.

For Seniors

Today's Youth and Tomorrow's World, by Stanley High. Again the challenge of change is motivated by the principles of Christ.

For Intermediates

How Far to the Nearest Doctor? by Edward M. Dodd. A reading book of stories from the work of medical missions telling of the work of Christian doctors. Full of interest and inspiration.

For Juniors

Meet Your United States, by Mary Jenness. A course on the major phases of present-day home mission work. Contains lesson plans and suggestions for carrying through a number of plays which the pupils write and produce.

In the African Bush, by Jewel Huelster Schwab, missionary in Africa. A Friendship Text giving stories and activities for Juniors.

Young America Makes Friends, by Mary Alice Jones. A Friendship Press Text dealing with the problems of Christian living common to junior boys and girls.

For Primaries

The Call Drum, by Mary Entwistle and Elizabeth Harris. A Friendship Press Text dealing with the children of Africa.

Child Neighbors in America, by Elsie Rodgers. A Friendship Press Text dealing with the problems of Christian living common to primary boys and girls.

For Beginners

Wee Wong, by Elsie H. Spriggs. A story of Mary Jane and Wee Wong, two little children who live in China.

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD, Sec'y,
Missionary Education.

SECRETARIES FOR CHILDREN'S HOME

We are publishing the list of Children's Home Secretaries for the local churches, as given by patsors at Conference, which has just closed. The charges and churches left blank we hope to have filled at an early date. Pastors will please appoint these secretaries soon and let us have names and addresses.

Duties

These secretaries are charged with the responsibility of helping to secure regular support for the Children's Home in their local communities by:

1. Assisting the pastor and Sunday school superintendent to get a good Thanksgiving offering for the Home. This requires haste.

2. To assist the Sunday school superintendent in securing a regular monthly offering from your Sunday school.

3. To direct in securing gifts of produce, clothing and other needed articles during the year; also to collect and mail us Octagon coupons.

We shall be glad to make further suggestions if you will just write us. You are going to help us to make this the very best year the Children's Home has ever had, and we thank you.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Eller

Rebecca Annie Brank Eller passed away November 11, 1933, aged 66 years, 6 months and 6 days.

On May 1, 1906, she was united in marriage to L. F. Eller, who with one brother, Mr. Brad Brank, and four sisters, Mrs. Adelaide Bell, Mrs. Mary Bell, Mrs. Tabitha Weaver and Miss Ellen Brank, survive; also a number of nephews and nieces and many other relatives.

Sister Eller came to this church upon her marriage to Brother Eller from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which she joined in early girlhood. She loved her church and was faithful to all of its interests, even until the end, though not able for some years to attend upon its services.

She lived a consistent Christian life up to the very last. She always looked upon the bright side, always seeing God, and speaking good of everyone whom she knew. Some five years ago she suffered a stroke while here at the church, and during all the years of her affliction and suffering she was cheerful and patient and never complained nor murmured.

She possessed a most lovable and happy disposition with a sterling character. During the three years that it has been my privilege and pleasure to know her as her pastor, I was always glad to visit her, which I did often. It was a benediction to chat with her and to read and pray with her, and I found her to be a person of very striking personality.

Sister Eller numbered her friends by the hundreds, and all who knew her admired her, and she loved them every one, and was always glad to see them.

She left every assurance both to her pastor, loved ones and friends that she has gone to a better world, where all is peace and joy and happiness. Her passing is a great victory for her. Our loss is heaven's gain, yet we know that she will be sadly missed in the community and especially in the home, but her suffering is over and we are led to believe that she is at rest forever more. Thus we can truthfully say with the writer of old:

"Servant of God, well done,
Thy glorious warfare's past,
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

She was laid to rest in Clarks Chapel cemetery November 13, 1933, beneath a beautiful mound of flowers to await the resurrection morn. Her pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, conducted the funeral service. We commend the sorrowing ones to Him who doeth all things well.

Furr

Rhoda Garmon Furr, wife of D. R. Furr, was born March 24, 1873, and died October 22, 1933. She was married to D. R. Furr, September 9, 1894, and to this union six children were born, as follows: Silas, who died in 1922, and Mrs. V. B. Lowder, Mrs. Clyde Measmer, Mrs. Dewey Sherwood, Mrs. L. M. Belvin, and Floyd Furr, all of Concord.

She was converted in early life and united with the church, and when moving to Concord 30 years ago she transferred her membership to Concord M. P. Church, and for many years was an active member. For several years her health had been such that she could not attend church, but her interest never waned. She loved for her pastors to visit her, and her doors were always open to church people who often went there and held prayer meetings.

Funeral services were held at Concord M. P. church and were in charge of her pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, assisted by Rev. R. S. Arrowood and Rev. W. P. Robertson. Interment was in Oakwood cemetery.

The bereaved ones have our sympathy in their great loss.

MRS. L. E. BEAVER,
MRS. J. W. RITCH.

IT DOESN'T PAY

It doesn't pay to worry
Or to give up in despair,
Since there's so much of gladness
For you to freely share.

It doesn't pay to grumble
Though many things seem wrong;
Better drown your disappointments
In a cheerful burst of song.

It doesn't pay to dawdle
When there's urgent work to do;
A clear and noble purpose
Will inspire the best in you.

It doesn't pay to sorrow
Over chances missed and gone,
For however black the midnight
There will surely come the dawn.
—Grenville Kleiser.

YOUR DAILY DUTY

TRUST GOD
To Him be true;
Be still, and know
He cares for you.

LOVE GOD
With humble heart
And purpose clear
Find well your part.

PRAISE GOD
In daily prayer
Give fervent thanks
For good to share.

SERVE GOD
This is the test:
To nobly work
And do your best.
—Grenville Kleiser.

DEATH

Death? There is no death.
It is an open door
Through which you pass
To life forevermore.
—Grenville Kleiser.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Guilford Charge.—We have spent the most pleasant year of our ministry on Guilford charge.

Four revival meetings were held on this charge with much interest. We had a good number of conversions, reclamations, and additions to the church membership as a result of these meetings. However, we believe that the reviving of the church members was one of the greatest assets of the meetings. The following pastors assisted us in the revivals: Rev. T. G. Madison at Hickory Grove; Rev. G. H. Hendry, at Vickory; Rev. O. C. Loy at Fairfield, and Rev. J. W. Braxton, at Mitchell's Grove.

Our church attendance in geenral this year has been encouraging. But we believe there is room for improvement.

There have been a number of interesting projects gone forward during the year. Two of the cemeteries on the charge have been remodelled. The church grounds have been improved considerably by the County Board of Welfare at a cost of approximately $750. Plans have been laid for moving the church and building new Sunday school rooms at Mitchell's Grove Church. Some of the money has already been raised for this purpose. We are hoping to complete this project by the first of the year.

We believe that this is going to be a good year financially for this charge.

There have been a number of people on this work who, from time to time, have been very thoughtful of the needs of the pastor's family. We appreciate all these gifts very much indeed.

We bespeak for these people a greater year in the future.

We had quite a pleasant surprise after our last service at Hickory Grove church Sunday. While my family and I were conversing with friends, the members and friends of this church were loading our car with quite a variety of good things to eat. Many thanks to these fine people. Quite a nice way to send a preacher to Conference.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—Our pastor has been with us three Sundays and has been preaching some inspiring sermons. Last Sunday the Lord's Supper was observed. This was a beautiful service, because Jesus said As long as you do this you remember me. We had a duet by Misses Evelyn and Mary Virginia Hawkins.

Last first Sunday Miss Erma Hawkins held prayer service. She brought out some good points of the teaching of Christ. She also had as many as would take a part in it, by giving a verse from the Bible.

We are glad to report our Sunday school is moving right on from the Junior class up. Each class is trying to get the high percentage of this quarter. Miss Erma Hawkins' class, the Senior girls, stand highest at present. And another thing: All who will are going to write an essay on the topic of anything they wish to choose, if it is on the Bible. They will be given Thanksgiving night. The best one will be awarded a prize, given by Mr. Billy Williams, of Roanoke Rapids.

Our church officers for the coming years are as follows: Superintendent, Mr. Edward Hawkins; stewards, Philip, Claude, and Clifton Hawkins; chairman, Mr. Baldy Green; trustees, V. Z. Hawkins, J. H. Hawkins, C. F. Hawkins, Tommie Hawkins and Baldy Green; class leader, Mr. C. F. Hawkins; secretary and treasurer, Mr. Baldy Green; pianist, Mrs. Baldy Green; reporter, the writer.

Since my last report two have gone out of our midst: Little Margie Ann Carpenter, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Carpenter; she was not quite 21 months old when on October 9 Jesus called her home. Jesus said 'Suffer the little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Mrs. Mattie Mitchell closed her eyes October 15 to meet us in yonder world. We will greatly miss her at church and in our homes. Our sympathy goes out to her husband and little eight-year-old girl, Mildred.

Mrs. Clarence Hawkins has returned home after visiting her mother-in-law, Mrs. B. S. Hawkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Hawkins spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Hawkins.

Our Beginners, Primary, and Juniors gave us some right pretty singing Sunday.

Glad to note Miss Dollie Pepper has returned from the hospital at Roanoke Rapids, but sorry to saw that Mrs. Otis Hawkins is in there now.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—We are deligted to have our pastor, Dr. Samuel W. Taylor, return to this field of work for another year. The people are unanimous in parise of him as pastor and preacher. We feel that this is only a beginning of a great work in this community. And with grateful hearts to the dear heavenly Father for all his benefits toward us, and with renewed devotion to Christ and His kingdom we now enter into a new Conference year.

We are pleased to report the most recent additions to our membership, on confession of aith: Mr. W. L. Brown, Mr. Arthur M. Brown and Mrs. L. M. Perdue. By letter, Mr. Jack Patterson, Mrs. Emma Culler and Mrs. J. A. Thomas.

In preparation for membership are the following: Mr. Ramon Welborn and his son, John Raymond Welborn, John Cook Blair and John Robert Cook, Hazel Craven, Ruth King, Marie Setliff, Mary Blackburn, Gladys Yokely, Shirley Welborn, Ruth Cockman, and Irene Harris.

The following officials for the coming year were recently installed: Trustees, Messrs. R. L. Briggs, V. L. Cook, W. C. Montgomery, Percy Payne, A. J. Jayne, C. B. Welch, H. E. Pitts; stewards, Messrs. D. C. Montgomery, Fred Pritchard, V. J. Willard, D. S. Hedgecock, E. C. Blair, R. E. L. Hayworth, S. E. Montgomery, J. L. Hayden, Stokes Gallimore, Miss Loula Thacker, Miss Halcie Welch, Mesdames Percy Payne, W. L. Lee, Pauline Bracket, V. L. Cook; S. S. superintendent, Mr. Chas. A. King; assistant superintendent, Mr. J. W. Montgomery; church treasurer, Mr. J. B. Huff; class leaders, Messrs. J. A. Jones and F. F. Briggs; church pianist, Mrs. Stokes Gallimore; assistant, Miss Juanita Hayworth; S. S. pianist, Ruth King; assistant, Eleanor Welch; reporter, Mrs. Lena Hammer Thacker; ushers, Manley Craven, William Bronson, Francis Payne, John Wimberly, Staley Montgomery, Chester Jones, J. S. Hedgecock, Louis Huff.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hedgecock, Jr., are happy over the arrival of a fine son at their home on route No. 2.

A goodly number of our people attended sessions of the Annual Conference in Thomasville, and have returned feeling very happy with good reports. That wonderful sermon of Dr. Brown's Sunday morning is "the talk of the town." One remarked that it was the best sermon heard in 30 years. (This was a regular attendant upon church services, too). No reflection on other ministers, of course. Just a way of rejoicing over the sowing of good seed, the blessed Word, to grow in the hearts of his hearers and bring forth an hundredfold.

Mr. F. G. Hammer, delegate from Gibsonville, to the Annual Conference, stopped over here to exchange greetings with relatives.

Fairview Church, Anderson Charge.—We certainly did hate to give up our pastor, Rev. J. L. Love, and also his family, who have made many friends in Easley. We are indeed grateful to Mr. Love for the splendid work he has done for us, and we wish for him and his family much success in his new field of labor. May greater opportunities be opened up for him to go forth in this great work that he loved so much to do; but as he was sent elsewhere we are very much pleased with the fact that the Conference sent us Rev. Robert Short. We are looking forward to having him and his family with us next Sunday.

Messrs. T. B. Nalley and G. M. Watson accompanied our delegate, Mr. J. W. Smith, to Conference. They report a fine trip.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. We have reorganized and are hoping to do a great work. Mr. T. B. Nalley, our Sunday school superintendent, has promised to the family which attends Sunday school every Sunday 100 per cent a nice present.

Our Christian Endeavor is doing much to prepare leaders for church and Sunday school. Some splendid programs have been given recently under the direction of our president, Miss Montez Henderson. She is planning a very interesting Thanksgiving program for next Sunday night, the subject being "What Have We to Thank God For?" Special music is also being planned. We are going to elect officers the second Sunday night in December.

The Ladies' Aid Society continues to do splendid work for the church and community, under the leadership of Miss Montez Henderson. The November meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. C. Henderson with Misses Montez and Anne Henderson as joint hostesses. During the business period the society voted to send $7.50 as a Thanksgiving offering to the Children's Home. The president also sent a gift of $5.00, making a total of $12.50. After the business session the society studied and discussed, beginning with the 11th chapter of Deuteronomy and ending with the 16th chapter, with Mrs. J. M. Carpenter, Jr., and Miss Mary Hendrix leading the discussion. Then, the hostess served delicious refreshments, and the society adjourned to meet in December at the church for a Christmas program to which the public is invited. We hope and pray that the Ladies' Aid will continue its good work.

Two of the most popular members of our Young People's Department, Miss Mildred Aline Nalley, daughter of Mr. T. B. Nalley, and Mr. Woodrow T. Lollis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Lollis, were recently married. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. L. Love at 4:30 o'clock on Wednesday, November 1, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. L. N. Tate. Their many friends wish for them a long and prosperous journey upon the sea of life.

The many friends of Miss Anne Henderson, our pianist, will regret to learn that she is seriously ill. We are hoping to hear soon that she is greatly improved.

We were glad to have with us yesterday, November 19, in Sunday school Mrs. Cecil McClemmons, of Liberty Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Watson are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a daughter, who has been christened Dorothy Jean. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Watson also are the proud parents of a son. The young man has been named Thomas Anderson.

Miss Sara Henderson, a student at Winthrop College, visited her parents recently.

Messrs. Knox Lamar, of Alamance, N. C., and Kenneth Lamar of the Children's Home in High Point were recent visitors in the church and community.

Mrs. Lugenia Day, one of our older members, departed this life, Nov. 12, 1933. We realize that her going is our loss and her eternal gain. May the family and friends be comforted by the fact that in a little while they, too, may cross over the river and the family circle will never be broken.

We are planning and praying for a good year; pray for us.

LUCILLE FREEMAN.

Orange Charge.—Am pleased to be re-assigned to Orange Charge. I know something of the tasks confronting us. In order to get busy at once am making the following announcements: Thaksgiving services will be held as follows: Fourth Suday in November, Hebron, 11 a. m.; Chestnut Ridge, 3 p. m.; Thanksgiving Day, Union Grove, 11 a. m.; Efland, 7 p. m.

At each of these services offerings will be received for our Children's Home.

The first quarterly conference will meet with the Efland church Saturday before the first Sunday in December at 2 p. m. Important business planning for the new year. Hope to have a full attendance, especially of the official members.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

West End, Thomasville.—The people of the West End church greatly enjoyed the Conference that was held here last week and also enjoyed helping to entertain the preachers and delegates while here. The Ladies' Aid conducted a lunch room during the Conference for the benefit of the church and are greatly pleased with their success. We wish to thank each and everyone that helped make this a success.

Our Sunday school is growing rapidly. The church was almost filled to capacity Sunday morning for Sunday school. We had several visitors, which are always welcome.

Rev. Mr. Russell, one of the ministers attending Conference here, met with us Sunday night for Christian Endeavor and made an interesting talk.

Rev. T. J. Whitehead, a former pastor of our church, preached for us Sunday night. We were glad to have Rev. W. M. Loy, another former pastor, in the audience and also other ministers and delegates.

MARY DISHER, Reporter.

Concord.—We held our regular service Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The congregation welcomed with open hearts our former pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. G. F. Millaway. Having Mr. Millaway fill our pulpit brought back memories of former days. We were most happy to have them with us. The Baracas favored our visitors with a special selection.

Our Sunday school has started off the new year with a record to be proud of. We had 382 present. Everybody is showing loyalty and co-operation to our new superintendent, Mr. Ross Little.

The ladies of the church have done a good work in the past year and are having a call meeting Monday night, getting started on this, our new year.

The young people are now working on a Thanksgiving play under the supervision of Miss Agnes Litaker, who is doing a wonderful work among our Junior Societies.

Taking the church as a whole, it has most enthusiastically started on the new year, and with the help of our Lord we hope to make this the best year of all.

REPORTER.

First Church, Lexington.—We have completed another Conference year which we believe has been the best in the history of First Church. We believe all organizations have tried to do their best for the upbuilding of the church. The attendance of church services and Sunday school has averaged a good mark.

With the old year gone, we are hoping to make our church a better all-round place. To start the year right, the board of trustees, J. H. Yates, chairman, met last Monday evening and made plans to beaver-board the walls, lay a new floor, and install a water system in the church. The board plans to begin work on these improvements immediately.

The Woman's Auxiliary met recently with Mrs. J. J. Mallard and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. O. F. Johnson; vice-president, Mrs. Archie Miller; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. George Ridenhour; reporter, Mrs. A. E. Cutting; chairman of social committee, Mrs. Hattie Isley.

Our prayer services are being conducted by the Sunday school classes. Last week this service was in charge of the Loyal Workers' Class. Mrs. H. C. Koontz, teacher, made a most helpful talk on the Ten Commandments. A good number was present to hear Mrs. Koontz. This class of girls feels very fortunate in having Mrs. Koontz for a teacher. She is a devoted Christian and is deeply interested in the youth of the church.

Sunday morning Rev. J. C. Russell filled the pulpit, bringing to us an inspiring sermon, the basic theme of which was Elijah invoking fire on the prophets of Baal.

Sunday evening we were delighted to have Rev. J. P. Pegg of the Glen Raven charge preach for us. Rev. Mr. Pegg chose as a subject, "The Spirit of Prayer," and as a text, Matt. 6:9, "After this manner therefore pray ye." We were also glad to have Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Isley, of Siler City, worship with us.

Miss Margaret Lea Swink spent Thursday in Thomasville attending the Annual Conference.

Miss Georgia Etta Davis, first year student at Averett Junior College, spent the week-end visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Davis.

MARGARET LEA SWINK, Reporter.

Mount Pleasant, North Davidson Charge.—Bro. O. C. Loy delivered his last sermon Sunday night for this Conference year. As we come to the end of the Conference year, opportunities have passed and new ones are facing us. The Israelites had a hard time getting to the Promised Land, and if they had not had faith in God they would never have overcome the obstacles that they had to go through. Neither would we have overcome the obstacles that we had to go through this last year if we had not had faith. Bro. Loy's last message was "Be faithful unto the end."

I do not know who our preacher will be next year, but I hope with his help and the help of the church that next year will be more successful than the last year has been.

Next Saturday night, November 25, the Woman's Auxiliary of this church is giving a chicken pie supper at the church. There will also be other nice things to eat—oysters, weiners, custards and cake will be served. The public is cordially invited to attend.

There will be a Christmas tree and entertainment given at this church Saturday night, December 23. Everyone is invited to come and enjoy the Christmas spirit with us.

REPORTER.

Henderson.—The adjourned session of the fourth quarterly conference convened November 14th with only 60 per cent of the official members present. Dr. L. W. Gerringer, our pastor, led the devotions. There were very few reports read, as they had been given at a previous meeting. Our treasurer, Brother J. B. Hicks, gave a final report, stating that all local bills had been paid, superannuate pledge paid, and pastor's salary paid in full.

Mrs. F. R. Harris then read a resolution offered by the Ladies' Auxiliary requesting the return of Dr. L. W. Gerringer. Brother E. O. Faulkner, our delegate to Conference, phoned me today that Dr. Gerringer would be returned.

My sincere wishes for the ensuing year are that every official member in the Sunday school and church will co-operate with our pastor toward making this coming Conference year the best ever recorded in the history of our church.

I do not know the plans of the new board of stewards, but whatever they are, let us encourage them by responding, remembering our vows and obligations to our Lord's work.

Circle No. 4 was delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. E. O. Faulkner on Monday evening, November 20th, Mrs. L. W. Gerringer conducting the devotionals.

Next Sunday, November 26th, let every member possible come to the services and give Brother Gerringer a real welcome, assuring him of our co-operation and loyal support for the coming year.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

OUR SPECIAL PLEA

By Conference action, the week of November 26 to December 3, inclusive is set apart as the week to pray for, and make our Thanksgiving offerings to the Children's Home. Our people are asked to contribute as much as a day's income to the Home, and every Methodist Protestant and their friends are asked to contribute something at Thanksgiving. The goal set for each church is "At least one dollar per member for the Home at Thanksgiving."

Conference has just closed, the pastors are tired and worn; many of them must move; Thanksgiving is almost upon so, so if the Home is to secure anything like its usual Thanksgiving offering the friends of the Home in each local church must plan and push the matter so that each one will be given a chance to contribute. We are depending upon you at Thanksgiving. If you help us we will rejoice; if you fail us we must suffer.

Our Letter to Pastors and S. S. Supts.

Pastors cannot possibly reach all the pulpits in the Conference by Thanksgiving, so we give you below the letter which we are anxious to have reach each congregation. Someone will please see that the substance of the letter is presented to the people in each local church before Thanksgiving. You do it, or see that it is done.

Some Thanksgiving offerings are already coming. Watch for our report next week.

Our Dear Fellow-Workers:

We greet you in the name of our dear Lord, whose we are and whom we serve. Thanksgiving and Christmas are just ahead, that period when God's faithful ones stop to give thanks and to rejoice. And because God blesses us in our happy homes with our unbroken families, we also pause to make Thanksgiving and Christmas free-will offerings to His needy ones. God blesses us, so out of gratitude to Him we make our humanitarian gifts and thus help Him to bless others less fortunate.

In connection with your giving of this nature, we are again asking that you remember the dependent children gathered in your own Methodist Protestant Children's Home. We very greatly appreciate the fine spirit of helpfulness manifested in other years, and we believe that you and your people will gladly help again in this worthy cause.

We stand in great need of money to help meet our obligations and to tide us through the winter. Creditors are pressing and we are anxious to pay, but we have no source from which to get money except from Methodist Protestants and their friends. If you could just drop in on us and see our big family, and see our needs, then we know you would gladly present our couse to your people. Pause for a moment and think of a Christian Home with 107 children in it, who must be fed, clothed, kept warm, sent to school and to church. Then remember that they are your very own and that you would like to have them cared for properly and sent to school and to church in clothing which will not embarrass them. Tell your people about these children, and ask them to help with a free-will cash offering at Thanksgiving and Christmas.

If all Methodist Protestants outside the North Carolina Conference will send us one annual offering, and if the North Carolina churches will do as their Conference asks them to do, and make a special offering of As Much As a Day's Income at Thanksgiving, and will then send their regular monthly offerings, a great burden will be lifted from the hands and hearts of your workers here. We believe you will do it and may God richly bless you in all your work for Him. "Our expectation is from the Lord."

We thank you kindly for your prayerful consideration of this plea representing the stretched out hands of the little ones in this Home. God bless you and yours and give you good success. Please send all offerings to A. G. Dixon, Superintendent. Thank you and God bless you.

Yours in His service,
J. M. MILLIKAN, Chairman,
A. M. RANKIN, Treasurer,
A. G. DIXON, Superintendent.

COMMITTEE REQUEST

To the Pastors and Churches in the North Carolina Conference; Beloved in the Lord:

May we wish for you a happy and successful new Conference year.

The time of holding your Annual Conference session made it somewhat difficult for you to join in the campaign for World Service, which began on November 5 and will continue until December 17.

In your correspondence with your president it was agreed that any plans we made for North Carolina would not become operative until after the adjournment of your Conference. Now that your Conference is over, and you are beginning your work for another year, may we ask you to join with us in securing the pledges of 200 churches to endeavor to pay in full this year their General Conference apportionment for World Service. North Carolina is our Mother Conference and ought to lead the way for her children in every good work. Send us your pledges.

A. N. WARD,

WOULD WORK TO PRESERVE FRUITS OF VICTORY

To the Editor of The Journal and Sentinel:

There is great rejoicing in North Carolina. The temperance people are happy because they won an overwhelming victory at the polls November 7.

But there is danger ahead. The danger is that we will "think the victory won and lay our armor down." We cannot reap much benefit from the voting of last Tuesday unless we follow it up with work, work, work.

The splendid majority of voters who stood on the dry side can, if they will, see to it that prohibition is well enforced. In the first place, we must elect officers that do not drink liquor. From the governor and legislators down to the constable, we should not tolerate any who drink. To enforce dry laws we need dry officers.

Next, they must be patriotic men, who will enforce the law because they love their country, not for the sake of money. Lastly, they must be capable, shrewd men, able to do their job well. We should turn down every candidate who does not meet all three of these requirements. We must demand and secure swift punishment of offenders and such punishment as will effectively prevent their continuance in the liquor business. A man who shows a determination to continue his violations can be kept permanently in a chain gang, where it will be impossible for him to make or sell liquor and he will be compelled to earn his board.

People will tell us we cannot do all this. We can do it. Where there is a will there is a way. Shall an army of near 300,000 voters give up whipped?

To do it we must have a strong permanent organization of the dry forces of the state. The rank and file must support the organization. And we must be everlastingly at work.

Let us each one "do our part."

R. G. LEVERING.

Why Thanksgiving Day?

A noble Giver walks the earth
To save the world from wasting dearth;
He drives the wolf from every door,
In painful want gives even more.

With lavish hand He gives to men,
He comes and gives and gives again:
He gives so oft, He gives so much
That men are hardened to His touch.

They fail to see His love and care,
They do not know that He is there;
Ignoring God, they fail to say
The words of thanks due every day.

Just once a year they set a day
To give our thanks and also pray.
One yearly meal God might decree:
But what a joke on you and me!

Still Quoting Lyman Abbott

The following extract from one of Lyman Abbott's books was sent us by one of his admirers for publication. Dr. Lyman Abbott was Henry Ward Beecher's successor in Plymouth pulpit, Brooklyn, and was a man of distinguished ability, but does not rank among the infallibles. Let us examine some of his statements. The extract immediately follows in quotation marks:

''It is extraordinary to what extent the law of taboo has found its way into the teaching of the church despite the teaching of its Master. * * *

''The church has urged fasting and discouraged feasting; Christ did not fast and never declined an invitation to a festivity.

''The church has frowned upon fiction; Christ was a past-master in the art of story-telling.

''The church has prohibited thinking; Christ habitually provoked men to think for themselves, sometimes calling on the questioner to answer his own question: 'Who ,thinkest thou, was neighbor unto him that fell among the thieves?' Sometimes by putting questions to his congregation and inviting their answer: 'What think ye of Christ? Whose son is he?'

''The church has often prescribed rules for the regulation of conduct. Jesus Christ prescribed no rules; he inculcated principles; and he inspired his disciples with a new spirit of life. Rules are temporary; principles are permanent; and the spirit of faith and hope and love is eternal. It knows no limitations of time and space.

''The minister is continually asked today, 'Where shall I draw the line?' The answer of Jesus would be, 'There are no lines.' He would not teach that knocking balls around a green lawn is right because that is croquet, and knocking balls around a green table is wrong because that is billiards. He would not teach that cards are right if you have historical names on them and wrong if you have spades and hearts on them. He would not teach it is right to have a tableau or a charade in a church sociable and wrong to see a play given by professionals in a theater. He would not teach that it is wrong to wear precious jewels and right to wear precious flowers.

''He would teach this: No enjoyment is right that does not help to develop manhood and womanhood. What is luxury? A comfort that enervates. What is comfort? A luxury that does not enervate. The life is more than meat; the body is more than raiment. Personality is more than things. All things are right which contribute to character; all things are wrong which deteriorate character.''—Lyman Abbott in ''I Am Come to Give Life.''

Notice Mr. Abbott says Christ did not fast. But the New Testament says he fasted forty days in the wilderness when tempted of the devil. And this was no formal affair. He fasted because his mind was engaged with spiritual interests. There may have been other occasions in his life when he fasted from similar cause. We read of one other in John's gospel. It was at Jacob's Well. Jesus was left there while his disciples went to buy food. When they returned with a supply Jesus was busy teaching the people of Samaria and would not stop to eat, telling the disciples that he had food to eat that they knew not of. His evident meaning was that he was fasting to accomplish a spiritual purpose. There may have been other fasts in his life of spiritual devotion.

Dr. Abbott says Jesus never declined an invitation to a festivity. Where is the evidence? There is no reliable testimony. The probability is that he declined many such invitations. He spent two days in a Samaritan city on the urgent invitation of the people who were convinced that he was the Messiah. Is it not probable that he received more invitations to dine than he could accept in two days? It seems so to us.

Notice what Dr. Abbott says about fiction. Can he see no difference between the stories of Jesus, every one of them with a high moral purpose, and the blood-and-thunder stories of the Jesse James order? Surely he is quibbling.

Mr. Abbott seems to take the position that the church should prescribe no rules because Jesus prescribed none. It does not follow. Jesus himself was under rules while he was subject to his parents.

Note what he says about croquet and billiards. It does not seem to occur to him that outdoor air and exercise may justify one and not the other.

He puts precious jewels in the same class with precious

SOME THINGS WE MAY LEARN FROM RUSSIA

Dr. Harry F. Ward, of Union Seminary, New York, recently gave in Washington a most interesting and informing address on "Some things we may learn from Soviet Russia."

Professor Ward has made three visits to Russia — one while the Czar was still on the throne, and two since the revolution. The last visit was an extended one in 1932. He speaks out of a well-informed mind, a heart full of passion for the rights of struggling humanity, and an intelligent appreciation of the plans and achievements of the Russian people under the present regime. What I am setting down is from memory, aided by brief notes. I think I am fairly representing the speaker. The two paragraphs at the end are my own reaction.

It should be noted at the beginning that there are three things that Russians like about Americans.

1. They like us because we still believe in work. This distinguishes us from the usual run of the aristocracy and intelligentia of old Europe. Russians understatnd that we in America have subdued the wilds of a new country and reached our present wealth and eminence through hard work, and they are expecting to bring the resources of their own vast territory into subjection by means of the same heroic measures.

2. They like us because we believe in democracy, the rule of the people. With that they emphasize the well-being of the people.

3. They like our mechanical technique. They realize that we could make such exceptional progress as we have only because of our inventiveness. They are becoming more inventive since their minds have become free and able to use the scientific method. For automobile tires and for making the balloon for their recent notable rise into the stratosphere, they use synthetic rubber that was developed in their own laboratories. They are glad to acknowledge their indebtedness to America.

There are many things we may learn from Soviet Russia—especially in the field of human relations. They think Americans are nice people personally and socially, but so ignorant politically. To us politics has largely to do with getting and holding office, and developing what we call political machines —such as the Tammany machine in New York, the Vare machine in Philadelphia, the Mellon machine in Pittsburgh. With the Russians politics is concerned with the joint management of the common things of life. Because of this different conception all their people are interested in politics, while usually less than half of our qualified voters trouble themeslves to go to the polls. Their boys and girls, as well as the men and women, are deeply interested in politics—the joint management of the common things of life.

We may learn that the incentives of the profit system are not necessary—are, in fact, often a real hindrance—to industry and progress. Health and education, we are accustomed to think, can be carried on without the profit element, but not the things of the common life generally. There are in Russia what they call "drifters" who go about from job to job without stability, "idlers" who do not want to work at all, and "snatchers" who have the hand held out for "pay" as the most important thing with which they have to do. But these individuals are comparatively few, and they are not in good standing. The great majority are loyal to each other and seek the common good. They recognize common ownership, a common interest, and work for the common welfare.

They find difficulty in getting some of their people away from the old systetm and establishing them in the principles and practices of the new. So, for a time, they allow differential pay—that is, some are allowed higher pay than others in order to bridge the space between the old and the new—gradually weaning them from what has been thought of as an essential incentive for good work.

They strive against poor quality in goods produced. Defective workers, bosses, and departments are exposed—their names attached to their inferior products, thus shaming them into better work. Our own entrance into the modern factory system was not without great loss and confusion. Multitudes of children worked 12 to 16 hours a day for insignificant wages—as did also many mothers. The results in weakened motherhood have not even yet been eliminated from our population. Russia does not propose to waste her people in developing her industrial system. The unwilling are weeded out.

Concerning the proper treatment of minority groups—especially racial groups—we may learn something. Russians cannot understand why we treat Negroes as we do. They have absolutely no racial prejudice. Under the Czar Jews were terribly mistreated from time to time. The Jewish problem has now entirely disappeared.

To sum up: We may learn from the Soviet Union the value of social purpose. We Americans lost our dream of democracy because we did not give it a social and economic spirit.

We raced for the material good things of life, every fellow for himself. As a result, we have produced a few outstandingly wealthy people, many others who live comfortably, while a large and increasing proportion of the population live in poverty—or, at least, on the verge of want, and under the shadow of dreaded unemployment.

Whether or not the present plans of the National Recovery Administration—with many necessary modifications—will bring us to the desired goal, it is too early to say. If it does not, something else will be tried. We will not for long continue as we are. There is so much vitality in the mental, moral, and physical fiber of our people that we may be expected to find a way, or to make one.

DON'T DECEIVE YOURSELF

Translated from the French by I. B. K.

Many people understand the truths of Christianity, and profess a certain popular faith in Christ. They are seen in regular attendance at church; they do certain acts of charity; their moral life is irreproachable, people of kind disposition, very generous to the poor, and with all this they have never seriously asked themselves, "Am I truly a Christian?" They think themselves better than others, confessing God publicly and no one can accuse them of moral wrong. In consequence their conscience is at rest; they have a very good opinion of themselves and they hope in case that anything more than strict morality is required of them to become good Christians sooner or later. They may believe they are such now.

No one can live in a more dangerous state than this; and the saddest part is that the man or woman is not in the least alarmed and glides smoothly along until they slip into eternal ruin. They think themselves on the road to heaven, and never realize their error until they fall into hell.

To live thus, "Almost a Christian," and to die in this condition is to have your lot among the lost—for before God there are only two classes of people—those who are in Christ and those who are not.

Those who are in Christ are saved; but those who are not are lost.

When God sent His judgment on the earth in the days of Noah, each one was found in one of two places—either he was in the Ark or he was out of it; a man could be very near it, but if he was not IN the Ark he was lost.

Also, when the judgment of God fell upon Egypt, all the inhabitants of the land were in one of two conditions. Either under the blood of the Lamb (by which God chose to deliver them), or they were not. If the Angel of Death saw not the blood on the door posts and the lintel, the judgment of death fell upon that house.

Now, dear friends, apply these examples to yourselves. Are you still exposed to judgment? Are you in the Ark of Salvation, Jesus Christ, or out of the Ark? It is absolutely sure you are in one place or the other. There is no half-way. There are no half-Christians; but men can believe in Christ as the Son of God without giving Him their confidence, or their hearts. One can hope to be a Christian some time in the distant future, but that time may never come.

To become a real Christian you will not be content with a hope or an intention—you must have known your danger and have taken refuge in Christ.

And are you in Christ? You may ask, dear friend, how can I know? If you ask that question with the true desire of knowing the truth, here is your answer from God's own Word:

1st. A Christian is one who has peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. (Rom. 5:1.) He has learned what the nature of sin is; he knows that God is infinitely holy, and cannot lightly overlook evil; he knows that nothing unclean may stand before His Presence; he knows that a sinner cannot present himself to God as righteous. However, he knows himself guilty and casts himself in the arms of the Savior, "Whose blood cleanseth from all sin." (I John 1:7.)

2nd. The Christian loves God; he believes that God so loved him that He gave His Son to be the propitiation for his sins; so he loves God as his Father, and trusts Him as his Almighty and Eternal Friend. (I John 4:10.)

3rd. The Christian loves the Lord Jesus Christ as his Savior. When he thinks "Who loved me and gave himself for me" (Gal. 2:20), his heart goes out to love Him in return. He tries to please Him in all his ways, in thanksgiving for His wonderful grace and forgiveness.

4th. The Christian is a man born of God (John 1:13); he is a new creature (II Cor. 5:17); his soul is the dwelling place of a divine power that makes him hate sin and love holiness. He has new interests and new affections, and as he loves God his Father, he is drawn towards the children of God because they are His children (I John 5:1). His heart goes out to sinners longing to bring them also to the loving Savior.

Reader, with this test are you a Christian?

May this help you to see your true position before God. May He save you from deceiving yourself any longer about a question of such infinite importance, and bring you to Himself.—Free Tract Society, Inglewood, Calif.

THE ROCKEFELLER LIQUOR REPORT

"Toward Liquor Control," by Raymond B. Fosdick and Albert L. Scott, with a Foreword by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is the most pretentious effort yet made to provide an alternative to national prohibition. The fact that this proposal bears the imprimatur of so important a personage as Mr. Rockefeller will incline many citizens to support the proposal without subjecting it to that critical analysis which it would otherwise have to undergo. There are indications that the report has already influenced state commissions seeking a solution to the liquor problem. Under the circumstances the drys feel that certain facts in the report should be pointed out and given careful consideration.

1. The report breaks squarely with prohibition as a method of solving the liquor problem. It would divest the federal government of all control over the traffic, except that which can be exercised through taxation. It believes that statewide prohibition will be subject to all the evils alleged against national prohibition. It allows local option, but destroys the force of the method by insisting upon a wide variety of options in each election.

2. The report apparently regards the moderate use of liquor, especially of liquors of moderate alcoholic content, as harmless, if not socially desirable; at any rate, as inevitable. It advocates the "frank acceptance and treatment of beer of not more than 3.2 per cent of alcohol as a non-intoxicating beverage." For purposes of distinction between "intoxicating" and "non-intoxicating" it proposes "the natural and convenient division between fermented beverages and distilled liquors." Such a proposal ignores all scientific data upon the subject and would legalize with little restriction 96 per cent of the pre-prohibition liquor trade.

3. The report proposes a "State Alcohol Control Authority," to monopolize the retail distribution of liquor within the state. It would be empowered to operate retail stores, warehouses, blending and processing plants and such other facilities as might be needed. It would have complete authority to regulate the business, even to subpœnaing of witnesses and making binding decisions. Its operation would require a sizable corps of executives and employes.

4. The chief merit claimed for the Plan is that it removes private profit from the liquor business. It should be noted that the Authority Plan relates only to the heavier liquors, so that beers and wines up to 12 per cent alcoholic content would be exempted from control and left to private exploitation. Nor does the report indicate that the manufacture of the heavier beverages shall come under this provision. Applied to the pre-prohibition liquor traffic, averaging about 2,000,000,000 gallons annually, this plan would have taken the private profit out of the retail sale of less than 200,000,000 gallons of distilled liquors and heavier wines.

Without discounting the excellent intentions of Mr. Rockefeller, this reviewer is unable to accept its underlying philosophy or to agree to the solution it proposes.

PAUL'S THOUGHT IN THE EIGHTH OF ROMANS

Condensed and Paraphrased by Luther K. Long

"Gold-mining in the 8th chapter of Romans" was announced as the topic for the prayer-meeting. The minister called attention to nuggets of gold found in various verses of that familiar and notable chapter. Opportunity was then given for others to speak. While the chapter was conceded to be rich in material, some felt that it was involved and difficult reading.

For my own satisfaction I later condensed and paraphrased the chapter, retaining in brief compass the essential values.

The following Sunday morning I read the results to the men's class. They were interested; so I am presenting it to the readers of THE HERALD. Here it is:

For those who have come into spiritual union with Jesus Christ there is no longer a sense of guilt. We Christians are free to turn from sinful desires and actions and to follow joyously the leadings of God's good spirit.

Those who are led by the spirit of God are children of God; in contrast to those who follow the desires of the flesh, seeking gratification and mere material good. As God's little children we use the familiar, endearing name, Abba, in addressing our newly-found Heavenly Father.

Brethren, I suppose that the sufferings of this earthly life—great as some of us are finding them to be—have no comparison in intensity with the great glory that is to be seen in God and in our own developing personalities, both in this life and in the world to come. While we are hoping for and increasingly realizing this glory, why should we not patiently await its full manifestation?

We are at a loss, now and again, how to pray and what to pray for. Be assured, beloved brethren, that the spirit of God, the spirit of Jesus, the spirit of Life and Love, knows us and understands our thoughts. That good spirit helps us to moderate our desires and to pray for appropriate things. When we are in harmony with this spirit, we shall know that God—in ways that we may not understand—is causing all things to work together for good. If God, then, is for us, what if some others are against us? He gave his Son for us; shall we not expect him to give us freely all other needful things?

What shall separate us from the love of God? Shall tribulation, or difficulties, or persecution, or hunger, or lack of clothing, or danger, or the sword? No, indeed. I am convinced that neither death nor life, neither angels nor powers, neither anything present nor anything to come, nor any force, nor heights, nor depths, nor anything else in creation, shall be able to separate us from the love of God manifested in Christ Jesus our Lord.

WE LIVE IN A WORLD OF LOVE

To interpret the course of Evolution without this (law of sacrifice) would be to leave the richest side even of material Nature without an explanation.

Retrace the ground even thus hastily traveled over, and see how full Creation is of meaning, of anticipation, of good for man, how far back begins the undertone of Love.

Remember that nearly all the beauty of the world is Love-Beauty—the corolla of the flower and the plume of the grass, the lamp of the firefly, the plumage of the bird, the horn of the stag, the face of a woman; that nearly all the music of the natural world is Love-Music—the song of the nightingale, the call of the mammal, the chorus of the insect, the serenade of the lover; that nearly all the foods of the world are Love-Foods—the date and the raisin, the banana and the bread-fruit, the locust and the honey, the eggs, the grains, the seeds, the cereals and the legumes; that all the drinks of the world are Love-Drinks—the juice of the sprouting grain and the withered hop, the milk from the udder of the cow, the wine from the Love-Cup of the vine.

Remember that the family, the crown of all higher life, is the creation of Love; that co-operation, which means power, which means wealth, which means leisure, which therefore means art and culture, recreation and education, is the gift of Love.

Remember not only these things, but the diffusions of feelings which accompany them, the elevations, the ideals, the happiness, the goodness, and the faith in more goodness, and ask if it is not a world of Love in which we live.—From Professor Henry Drummond.

MAKE YOUR PROGRESS SURE

Devote your time chiefly to essential things. Make common sense your constant guide. Cultivate the friendship of helpful, progressive, worthy people. Utilize the little spare moments, usually wasted, to improve your mind. Develop clearness of judgment, dignity, seriousness, and a sense of the profundity of life. Try to make everything contribute to your physical, mental, and spiritual progress. Rid yourself of every retarding thought, every undesirable acquaintance, habit, or other influence. Make this day count in a significant way in advancing your highest and best interests. eB eager to receive and apply helpful suggestions from any source. Seek the guidance of God in morning and evening prayer.—Grenville Kleiser.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

I was unable to get a letter in the HERALD last week because of the press of other duties. Briefly, let me make a few suggestions:

Plans for the Year

I want to be in your quarterly conferences whenever in your opinion my visit there would help you; otherwise, I may not visit your quarterly conference this year.

As to my visits on your charge, I want to visit every church possible, but I want to visit these churches on Sunday or at an appointment when I might have the privilege of speaking to the membership.

Group Meetings

We found last year that the group meeting was quite helpful. I wish these might be continued; that there be not only a district meeting but that large circuits have a meeting in which several of the churches of the charge shall participate, or wherever possible enlist as many churches as are close enough to take part, to join in this meeting.

At these meetings we should inform our people of the new financial plans and try to enlist them in the methods to be used for carryig out these plans.

Stewards' Area Meetings

These meetings were quite helpful last year and we recommend that they be held this year. We think that the chairmen in each sub-district can arrange for these meetings, select the place, arrange topics and find the speakers for the meetings.

Stewardship Committee Report

The Committee on Stewardship made to our conference some splendid recommendations. We shall present them through the HERALD in a short time and hope that they shall receive a cordial reception and a faithful try-out. Likewise the recommendations of the Committee on Evangelism. We must not fail to remember all the time we are trying to raise money, to perfect our church orgnizations, etc., that the object of the church, therefore, the real purpose of doing these things, is that the unsaved be brought to Christ. The saving of the world is our task, and while we shall spend much time and energy in trying to perfect these plans, the plans are not ends in themselves; they are but means to the great end that people shall be brought to Christ by us and that more shall find Him because of our better preparation.

The New Financial Plan

There has been a change of our methods for raising the money for the Annual Conference interests. Instead of setting them up in a single budget each interest constitutes an item and the people should know when they make their contribution what their money is to be used for. Item one is to pay the expenses of runing the Annual Conference. The expenses are as follows: President's salary and traveling expenses, Treasurer's salary, Secretary's salary, Statistician's salary, interest on the President's parsonage, etc. This is totaled and distrbiuted to every pastoral charge. Then a special committee divided up all the pastoral charges into eleven groups and gave each group a month when they should raise the expenses of this column, if they have not done it before. The following churches have been given the month of December: Asheboro, Grace church, First, Burlington, Concord, Enfield, Whitakers, First, High Point. You can see what your assessment is by finding your charge in the report of the Budget Council in this week's HERALD. Begin at once to make your plans to raise the amount in that report under A. C. expense. As soon as it is in hand send it to Mr. J. H. Allen, Reidsville, telling him it is for this interest and this task will be done.

Group 2, for January, has the following charges in it: St. Paul's, Graham, Gibsonville, Welch Memorial, Spring Church charge, Charlotte, English Street, and Tabernacle.

What About Other Interests?

What about Superannuates, Church Extension, Annual Conference indebtedness, High Point College and other specials? We suggest that you make a calendar and allot each interest a month or a Sunday and take the offering on that day. As to World Service, it should be the duty of the pastor to see that the special days set apart by the General Conference be observed. A program should be prepared and special emphasis to the collection should be given. It ought to be made clear that the offerings will go to missions or education as the case may be and that the membership be urged to make their contribution just as large as possible.

The Children's Home

The same plans as last year are to be continued. Special offerings in the Sunday schools, special gifts from friends, donations from churches of provisions, etc., and Thanksgiving let every one make an offering equal to a day's earnings, if possible, or make it even more, if you will; the cause is worthy of your best.

The Herald

We understatnd quotas will be set for subscription this year as last and that there will be allotted to each church an amount for deficit in running expenses. Let all churches join in and make this year the best in the life of our M. P. HERALD.

Let Us Be Hopeful

There were some tokens revealed in the conference just closed to cause us to hope. The superannuated ministers rceived more than the year before. The interests in the A. C. B. received more than the year before. A majority of the churches refused to reduce pastor's salaries in the last quarterly conference. Five or six increased the salaries for the new year. There was a fine spirit in evidence. We think there is an increasing solidarity in the ranks of the workers. A recognition of an interdependence of pastor and people upon each other. One can't do it alone; the work can go forward only as we work together. And may there spring in every heart a new spirit of consecration which shall bring victory to those who are faithful.

Let Us Pray

We must be much in prayer. Many things are coming between us and may separate us; but they cannot come if we are earnestly urged in prayer for each other and for the success of the work.

Seagrove M. P. Church Cornerstone Laid

I had the happy privilege of directing the laying of the cornerstone of Seagrove M. P. church Sunday. The building is brick, 38x60 feet, eight Sunday school rooms, basement for furnace. It is situated in a beautiful grove, large lot, just off the highway to Troy. There was a large attendance, groups from several of the nearby M. P. churches assisting by singing. The correspondent from there will doubtless report the event fully. We congratulate Pastor George L. Reynolds and his loyal little group in their faith and works.

R. M. Andrews.

THE GREEN PASTURES

I have been glad to see by the papers that "The Green Pastures,", Marc Connelly's 1930 Pulitzer Prize Play, has gone south. Reports are that at Greensboro, N. C., where Richard B. Harrison, who takes the part of "De Lawd," was at one time a teacher, the players were given a wonderfully sympathetic reception and hearing.

When they were in Washington last winter I met Mr. Harrison and had two interesting conversations with him. He gave to a full house in the First Congregational church an excellent summary of the play, and a group of men and women from the Angel Choir sang a half dozen of the leading choruses.

Following an afternoon performance at the theater, Mr. Clarence Jacobson, the company manager, kindly took me back-stage and explained the complicated equipment. There was the system of lighting, the scenery, the furnishings—especially the Lawd's office in heaven—Noah's ark, the big square drum that makes the thunder, the arrangement and working of the metal bowling balls that produce the shock and noise at the miracle of creation, at the death of the first-born in Egypt, and the trembling and final crash at the fall of the walls of Jericho.

Mr. Jacobson and the fourteen others who manage the stage work are all white men. He told me that it seemed strange at first to be working with colored players, never having done that before. But the strangeness, he said, had soon worn away. His helpers—used to working about theatrical people—had been accustomed to hearing and using more or less objectionable language. After a day or two he no longer heard anything out of place from his men, and he had never heard anything of the kind from the colored folks. He found that the players took their parts seriously—even religiously. After these explanations I was prepared to enjoy very much more my second witnessing of the play, though the first time had been entirely satisfactory.

My contacts with colored people, both the better educated and the more common among them, convince me that the Negro race has much to contribute to the life of both races in our country. In music and the drama, in elements of our common religious experience, in industry and the professions, and in the philosophy of living, we may share many things to the advantage of both races. All sorts of religious and race prejudices are doing deadly work all over the world. It behooves us as Christians to do what we can to stay the tide.

REV. J. F. MINNIS' RETURN

The Board of Missions has been running behind with its obligations to its missions and missionaries. The matter was discussed at our last Executive Committee meeting and it was finally decided that the Eexcutive Secretary should write to our missions at home and abroad apprizing them of the situation and stating that probably a further reduction would have to be made, leaving with them as to whom and what part of the work should be affected. Upon receiving the replies another meeting of the Executive Committee would be called to consider their communications and decide whether or not further reductions could be made, and if so the Executive Committee would make final decision. I have not received their replies yet.

I presume the India Mission upon receiving our communication decided that Rev. J. F. Minnis and his family should return home. We were cabled to that effect; whereupon our North Carolina friends decided to support Mr. Minnis as a special contribution toward missions. We cabled Mr. Minnis to remain in India, that North Carolina has guaranteed his support. He cabled back to the effect that he was packed up and was coming home.

This explanation is made that no one might get a wrong impression about Mr. Minnis' return to his home church and conference.

G. W. Haddaway, Executive Secretary,
Board of Missions.

THE CONFERENCE JOURNAL

All copy, excepting the report of the Conference Treasurer, which he assures me will be sent in as soon as the books are audited—probably this week—has gone to the printer; in fact, was mailed out Friday of last week. So I have done my part in trying to get the Journal out promptly. (I wish to acknowledge my indebtedness to Bro. J. L. Trollinger for his fine assistance.)

Ten charges made no requests for Journals. I am adding a hundred copies to those definitely ordered, which ought to be enough to take care of it. If your charge did not order, I wish you would tell me how many to send. If I do not hear I shall allot by last year's requests.

Now, brethren, won't you make an effort to send in the amount due from your charge for Journals promptly? Send it in ahead of time and enable me to pay a good part of the cost of the Journals early in the year. It isn't fair—nor honest—to make the printers wait a whole year for their pay. And we certainly haven't much right to demand that they be prompt in printing them if we are not going to be equally prompt in paying for them.

Address me at 906 Carolina Ave., Winston-Salem, N. C.

C. W. Bates, Secretary.

OUR STORY PAGE

IN JUST A MINUTE

It was Sunday morning and breakfast was called. All the family was up, for breakfast on Sunday morning is usually served later than on any other morning of the week. For some time the young daughter of the home had been seated in the easiest chair in the house before the window reading.

When the call for breakfast came she sat and read on. All the rest of the household gathered around the table. "Come, Sister," said the Mother, "we're all here and ready to eat."

"In just a minute," came the reply. As there was no hurry, all sat down and waited. One minute, two minutes passed, without any stir in the big chair.

"That minute has passed and more," said Father.

"Well, since you have waited and not fussed about it, I'll come," said the daughter. "I've just begun a chapter and can't finish anyway."

"Nearly five perfectly good minutes wasted," growled big brother who had left his book on the library table at the very first call.

"In-just-a-minute" is a tyrannical little imp which wastes more time than one can imagine.

"In just a minute," says Susan, and to wait for her the entire family must be late to church. "In just a minute," cries Bob, and good-natured dad to humor his son misses his train to the city. "In just a minute," lisps the baby, and mother burns the toast in her effort to attend to matters needing attention caused by the baby's indifference and delay.

There is but one way to get rid of the imp which cheats us out of much time and pleasure and that is by prompt obedience. Jump at the first call and "In-just-a-minute" will have no chance at all. Affairs of the day will pass off according to schedule and all troubles caused by delay will be avoided.—Our Boys and Girls.

HE ANSWERED THE CALL

A little Scotch boy was lying one day in the heather beside a mountain stream. He was looking up at the fleecy clouds and soon fell asleep. As he slept he dreamed and this wsa his dream. He saw above him a glorious light and from it came a wonderful golden chariot drawn by horses of fire. Down the sky it came faster than the lightning and stopped suddenly at his feet, and although he saw no one he heard a voice that was as sweet as the music of the mountain brook and it said to him, "Come up hither, I have work for thee to do."

The lad rose up to follow the golden chariot, but when he stood upon his feet he awoke, and then he knew it was a dream. But God sometimes speaks in dreams, and the boy never forgot that call from the golden chariot, "Come up hither, I have work for thee to do," and in his waking hours he answered the call and found the work.

This is how he answered the call: One day he went to his room and locking the door he kneeled down beside his bed and said to God: "O Lord, Thou knowest that silver and gold to give to the missionary cause I have none; what I have I give unto Thee. I offer myself; wilt Thou accept the gift?"

God did accept the gift, and Alexander Duff, the Scotch lad who had heard the voice calling from the golden chariot, found his work, and became one of the greatest preachers of the missionary Gospel the world ever heard, and one of the first and finest missionaries to the great land of India.—The Wonderful Word.

BARBARA'S FAITH

Little Barbara lived in the country. One day when her mother was away she evaded the nurse and wandered away into fields and down into the strip of woodland adjoining the meadow. She was not missed for some time, and she had a delightful frolic in the woods. She gathered flowers, dug in the sand, watched the birds and chipmunks, and, crowning delight, she indulged in the pastime of wading the water of the tiny brook. Of course she got wet, and after a while the sun went down and the air began to get colder. Little Barbara wanted to go home where there was some one to wrap her up warm and cuddle her. She had forgotten the way home, and fear came upon her. She did not weep, but out of her childish faith she looked up into the darkened sky and announced, "I need an angel to take care of me, Lord; please send an angel to take me home." She looked up in confident expectation of seeing the heavens open and the angelic guide appear. Had not this very thing happened in Bethlehem on that night when "there were shepherds abiding in the field"?

Barbara had not had her innocent beliefs scoffed away, and this was the first time she had ever needed anything from the Lord. Before this mother had been all-sufficient. She waited, and a grieved look came into her eyes. Just as she was about to weep in despair, there was a rustle on the banks above her, and there came her loving mother to gather the wanderer into her arms and carry her back to safety and the comfort of home. When Barbara was cuddling down in her bed, she said, "He didn't send any angel, Mamma, and I needed one."

Then in answer to her mother's questions, she told the story. She had a wise mother as well as a loving one, and the incident was not laughed away.

"Which would you rather have had to take care of you then, the angel or mamma?"

"I'd rather have you, Mamma. But I didn't s'pose the Lord could send you, 'cause you were at town."

"You see, the Lord knew what you needed, my dear, and He sent mamma. The Lord always knows best, and He doesn't always give us just what we ask for. Do you remember when baby wanted pap's razor when he was shaving? Why didn't we give it to him? Of course, because we love him, and didn't want him to get hurt. We gave him bells instead. So, the next time you just ask the Lord to take care of you, and let Him do it in His own way. He loves you, and doesn't want you to get hurt.''

''He was a good Lord,'' said Barbara, reflectively, as she lay down. And she went to sleep with her childish faith strong within her.—Publisher Unknown.

HER "GOOD MORNING"

It was a chilly day, and the wind blew cold on that particular corner.

The blind man had sold very few papers that morning. He sighed.

The wind blew colder. The hurrying crowds surged by, but no one spoke, and then, at his elbow, a sweet, young voice said suddenly, ''Good morning.''

The man turned his sightless eyes in the direction of the speaker. ''Who is it?'' he said quickly.

The young girl in the plain hat and modest suit, who had stopped to speak to him, was silent a moment.

''It is I—Marjory Dean,'' she said gently. ''I work in the Hampton Studio in the Graham Block. I thought I'd stop and say 'Good morning' to you.''

The blind man nodded. He no longer felt the cold wind that had so chilled him. He forgot his own helplessness and the fact that he had sold so few papers.

Out of the darkness that shadowed him, a sweet voice had spoken. His loneliness was gone. The world was a friendly place, after all. Some one had stopped to say ''Good morning.'' He smiled.

''I'm so glad you did,'' he said softly.—Unknown.

THE CHANGED PARTNERSHIP

The story is told of a Buffalo man who had a dishonest partner who almost wrecked the business of the firm by his questionable financial methods. The only way to win seemed to be to buy out the scamp's interest, and get a more reliable partner. But even after this was done the business did not pick up. One day an old business man came along, and the remaining member of the firm complained of the way that fate had used him.

''Well, I can explain that,'' said the visitor. ''You have not let the world know that you changed partners. They still think that Smith is in the firm. The old sign still hangs over the door. You must take down 'Smith and Jones' and put up 'Brown and Jones'.''

The old sign came down and the new sign was put up. A notice was also put in the windows and on the doors and in the newspapers. It read about as follows:

''John Smith and George Jones have dissolved partnership, John Smith retiring from the business. Charles Brown has been admitted to the firm and Brown and Jones will continue at the old stand.'' Everybody read it, and trade picked up.

Have you let the world know that you have renounced the devil and all his works? It must be done. Then hang out your sign. Put on the armor of light. You have broken parnership with the devil, who was running your spiritual interests, haven't you? Then why not take down the old sign?—The King's Business.

"LET THERE BE LIGHT"

A Beautiful New Pageant-Drama on the Bible

A skilful combination of music, hymns, Scripture passages, tableaux, and episodes, by Elliot Field, showing the significance of the Bible and having unusual dramatic possibilities. So flexible in arrangement that either large or small churches can present it. Just the thing for Univrsal Bible Sunday.

This Pageant-Drama, a volume of 88 pages, merits a place in the working library of every Christian leader, as its scope and literary style make it a distinct contribution, not only to Christian literature, but to the list of available Christian dramatizations. Excerpts can be made from it which will commend themselves to ministers who may wish to give dramatic sermon-readings.

One copy, including production privileges, will be sent upon receipt of 25 cents in stamps or coin. Five copies will be sent for a dollar, or, if one is purchased for examination and more are wanted, four additional copies will be sent on receipt of 75 cents additional.

Address communications to American Bible Society, Bible House, Astor Place, New York, N. Y.

LIFE'S WEAVING

My life is but a weaving
  Between my God and me;
I may not choose the colors,
  He knows what they should be;
For He can view the pattern
  Upon the upper side,
While I can see it only
  On this, the under side.

Sometimes He weaveth sorrow,
  Which seemeth strange to me;
But Iwill trust His judgment,
  Whatever it may be—
'Tis He who fills the shuttle,
  He knows just what is best.
So I shall weave in earnest
  And leave Him with the rest.

At last when life is ended,
  With Him I shall abide,
Then I may view the pattern
  Upon the upper side;
Then I shall know the reason
  Why pain, with joy entwined,
Was woven in the fabric
  Of life, that God designed.

flowers for personal adornment. Is he ignorant of the difference of cost in labor?

Time fails to tell of all the fallacies that appear in this brief extract. We cannot regard Lyman Abbott's thoughts as safe guides for those unable to think for themselves.

A MOTTO WITH A MENACE

There is a phrase of the schoolboy and schoolgirl of today which has a hidden snare and sting. The aim and ambition of perhaps the majority is represented by the motto, "Getting by." This means, being interpreted, a passing mark in examinations, recitations and the year's work. It means doing just enough studying and hard work to be allowed to go along with one's class and eventually to graduate. There is in it no thought of doing one's best, no thought of the honor of the school or one's own honor.

The measure is often the test of a man's work in a factory or on a farm—just doing enough not to lose his job or his pay. It is all a big mistake, because the student, the factory employee and the farm-worker are cheating themselves even more than they are cheating the school or factory or farm. They are standing in the way of their own advancement.

The only way to get the most out of life is to put the most into it. The only real test of any work is, "Am I doing my level best?" On the walls of a large industry there hangs another motto, practical and yet prophetic: "Here Only the Best is Good Enough." Hang that motto in your mind or in your den or in your school!—Publisher Unknown.

Poems That Heal

By GRENVILLE KLEISER

LEAVE IT TO GOD

Does the path seem rough and steep?
Leave it to God.
Do you sow, but fail to reap?
Leave it to God.
Yield to Him your human will,
Listen childlike and be still,
Know that Love your mind can fill:
Leave it to God.

Is your life an uphill fight?
Leave it to God.
Do you struggle for the right?
Leave it to God.
Though the way be drear and long,
Sorrow will give place to song,
Good must triumph over wrong:
Leave it to God.

If in doubt just what to do,
Leave it to God.
He will make it plain to you:
Leave it to God.
Serve Him faithfully today,
He will guide you all the way,
Simply trust Him, watch and pray:
Leave it to God.

HEALING PRAYER

Healing mind of Christ supreme,
Be Thy thoughts my daily theme;
Teach me how to do Thy will,
Know the truth, and just be still.

Healing power of Christ profound,
More and more in me abound;
From self-seeking make me free,
Build my life alone in Thee.

Healing Love of Christ divine,
I would make thee fully mine;
Dwell within me now, I pray,
Keep me strong and brave today.

Healing word of Christ so dear,
Speak to me that I may hear;
Let my daily life express
Truth and love and righteousness.

A PSALM OF PRAISE

To Thee, O God, we render thanks
For all thy mercies sure;
Thy tender love environs us
And will through life endure.

Teach us to know thy perfect will
And truly humble be;
May we in gladness praise thy name
Throughout eternity.

Thou art our refuge and our strength,
There is no other power;
When sudden danger threatens us,
We find in thee a tower.

To Thee, O God, we render thanks
And call upon thy name;;
A psalm of praise to thee we sing,
Thy wondrous love proclaim.

GOD CARES FOR ME

The way I may not Always see,
But this I know:
God cares for me.

It matters not
What seems to be,
Since this is true:
God cares for me.

Though tempest rage
On land and sea,
I'm safe because
God cares for me.

From doubt and fear
He keeps me free;
My surety this:
God cares for me.

THE DAWN WILL COME

Though black the night,
And fears benumb,
Cling close to God,
The dawn will come.

And when the day
Shines forth anew,
Do well the task
He gives to you.

Though changeful life,
In storm or stress,
Know God is here
To help and bless.

STAND PORTER!

Stand porter at the door of thought;
Let not base evil in;
Guard well the sacred citadel;
Cast off intrusive sin.

Stand porter at the door of thought;
Shut fear and failure out;
Disease and dread are impotent
When swiftly put to rout.

Stand porter at the door of thought;
Choose well your mental guests;
Bid every form of strife depart;
Obey Love's true behests.

MY FATHER KNOWS

My Father knows
His children all;
He even notes
The sparrow's fall.

My Father knows
The deeds of men;
He oft forgives,
And gives again.

My Father knows
The perfect way;
He likes to hear
His loved ones pray.

My Father knows
Just what to give;
He teaches men
How best to live.

GRATITUDE

Father, I give thanks for this:
That I have useful work to do
To fill the golden hours with joy
And in it all to serve Thee, too.

Father, I give thanks for this:
That Thou hast given Her to me,
She of true and loving heart,
My constant counsellor to be.

Father, I give thanks for this:
That I have opportunity to give,
To humbly serve and cheer,
And help some pilgrim how to live.

PEACE, BE STILL!

Peace, be still! Obedient be,
Seek to do God's will,
Dwell within His love today,
Hear His "Peace, be still."

Peace, be still! Be confident,
Sorrow not nor fear.
Walk in sweet serenity,
Know that He is here.

Peace, be still! Courageous be,
Listen to His call.
Rest in peace and quietness,
Know that God is All.

RADIATE!

Radiate health!
Think and act your best.
Inspired by grateful heart,
Do everything with zest.

Radiate joy!
Smile along the way.
Say a word of cheer;
Spread happiness today.

Radiate love!
Some daily kindness do.
The help you freely give,
Will bring new joy to you.

GOD STILL SUPREME

Bleak though the night,
Soon dawns the day;
Banish base fear,
Love lights the way.

Be not dismayed,
Though tempest-tossed;
Right will prevail,
All is not lost.

Be strong of heart,
Joyously sing;
God is not bankrupt,
Christ is still King.

HEALED

O thou who art the Lord my God,
In great distress to thee
I cried aloud with earnest voice,
And thou hast healed me.

Children's Home Week

Conference set apart this week as Children's Home Week. You are asked to pray for us, talk about us, and give for the support of the Home. Stop and breathe a prayer for us, then talk to somebody about us, then both of you, or all of you, plan to send us a gift of money as God may direct.

Also please gather and mail to us every coupon possible between now and December 28th.

Thank you and God bless all of you.

Faithfully,
A. F. DIXON, Supt.

FIRST DISTRICT GREETINGS

I am very happy to be located for another year within the bounds of the First District. This embraces the following charges: Creswell, Enfield group, Greensville, Halifax, Littleton and Spring Church. To the new pastors of the District I am saying that the chairman welcomes you and your families into our midst. The same kindly feeling is hereby expressed to the pastors and their families who were returned. The chairman covets your co-operation, and pledges his for a No. 1 District.

The pastors and their families who leave us merit mention of their service and co-operation during their sojourn here.

Wm. H. NEESE, Chairman
First District.

Pleasant Hill, N. C.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

SPRING CHURCH MISSIONARY NEWS

During the Missionary Night at Conference the pastor of this charge said that his work would be responsible for six calendar months in raising Rev. J. F. Minnis' salary. We wondered just how it could be done, but we thought it would be done some way. This is how the months were divided: Spring Church Circuit Auxiiary is taking two, Lebanon Auxiliary one, Pleasant Hill Christian Endeavor Society one, Mrs. H. E. Vassar one, and Mrs. R. M. Robinson's Sunday school class is taking one.

Now for some good news. This morning the writer presented the matter to the Sunday school at Spring Church and in a few minutes one of the Circuit Auxiliary Calendars was filled. The Pleasant Hill C. E. Calendar is also filled and we have $2.75 pledged on another one. Others are working on their calendars but we don't know just how much they have pledged, but we are confident that Spring Church Charge is going to do her best.

We are proud of our ladies down here and of the good work they are doing along missionary lines and we are very proud of the privilege of working with them for another year.

Some time ago I said that our Circuit Auxiliary adds to its budget by buying print and making dresses and selling them. The orders in this section had all been filled and we were wondering how we could sell any more, when one of our good members who lives over in Halifax came to our rescue and said, "You make the dresses and I will sell them for you down here." So our sewing ladies got busy and made 12 dresses and Mrs. H. S. B. Thompson has sold them for us. Mrs. Thompson is too far away to attend the meetings, but she is interested in the work and is proving her interest by doing all she can to promote the work. We appreciate her help and are looking for orders for more dresses.

Just before going to Conference a number of the ladies gave the writer cash donations to help out her wardrobe. This was appreciated very much and we again say, "Thank you."

MRS. Wm. H. NEESE, Reporter.

—We are sorry to report the continued illness of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Magee. Mr. Magee has been in bad health for a number of years, and about three weeks ago Mrs. Magee was taken ill. These are loyal members of Pleasant Hill church, Spring Church Charge. We ask all former pastors and friends to join us in prayer for their recovery.—Mrs. W. H. Neese.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

First Church, Thomasville.—We are very glad that Conference saw fit to return our pastor for another year.

Ou pulpit was filled last Sunday with visiting ministers of our Conference. In the morning service we were fortunate to secure one of our former pastors, Rev. E. O. Peeler, to preach for us. He preached on the subject, "Chist in the Lowly Places." Rev. C. P. Morris, a young and alert minister, very ably taught the Young Men's Bible Class and the Baraca Class combined, while Mrs. Bates taught the ladies' classes combined. We thoroughly enjoyed having these people visit our church while in our city.

In the evening service, Rev. J. M. Morgan preached a very able sermon. Among the visitors to hear him were Rev. and Mrs. G. L. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Boswell, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cline and family, Mrs. Brittain, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Payne and others. We were glad to have them worship with us and a welcome is extended for their return.

The Christian Endeavor Society held a very interesting service Sunday evening with Ishmael Dorsett as leader. The topic was "Avoiding Shams and Pretenses." At the beginning of the service two cakes were placed in view. After the devotional service the leader appointed one of the members to cut the sham cake. Of course, the would-be cake cutter caused much merriment when she failed in her mission. The two cakes gave a very unique illustration of what we should be. Rev. J. Clyde Auman made a very interesting talk on "Avoiding Shams and Pretenses." We are always glad to welcome Bro. Auman to our church. The Jarrett Quartet sang while the "good" cake was served to the 49 members present.

Friends will be interested to know that Ivy Austin Teague, Jr., is recuperating from his recent illness.

Clunette Westmoreland is sick with flu, we are sorry to note.

Mr. Burgess Morris, father of Mrs. W. G. Myers and Mr. Joe Moris, was suddenly sticken ill last Sunday morning.

Our church has secured a church bulletin, which carries with it the order of worship, announcements, etc. This is prepared each week by the pastor.

MRS. T. A. LLOYD, Reporter.

Welch Memorial Church.—We have just closed one of the most successful year's work that we have ever had in our church. We sent the pastor to conference with salary paid in full and a creditable amount paid on the Conference budgets. Our people are paying to the church more according to their ability now than ever before. One dear old lady whose husband had not only been unable to get work but had had a serious illness of months' duration, grew flowers, sold some of them, and did some quilting and paid the money to the church. And she walks a mile to attend church and Sunday school regularly. With such a spirit of faith and loyalty as she has Welch is bound to go forward. Our people have sacrificed much this year to carry on. They love each other and love the church and are much interested in its welfare.

New officers installed at the last of the year are as follows: Stewards, O. W. Brown, chairman, C. H. Lambeth, Mrs. W. R. Bracket, M. L. Vuncannon, Mrs. J. W. Mitchell, Mrs. D. G. Hiatt, Mrs. C. W. Hoover, Mrs. Dan Joyner, R. L. Briley, S. E. Caldwell, Howard Vuncannon, W. W. Frye; class leaders, C. W. Hoover, chairman, E. T. Seagroves, L. M. Teague, T. L. Jackson, Wade Coggins, M. M. Hicks; parsonage trustees, D. G. Hiatt, chairman, W. B. Delk, J. R. Cox, R. L. George, J. M. McDowell; church trustees, G. E. McDowell, chairman, Banner Leach, J. W. Mitchell, L. F. Cassell, J. W. Greenway; ushers, S. E. Cashwell, chairman, Ralph Eldridge, Vee Sechrest, William Smith, Walter Vuncannon, A. L. Dupree, Chalmers Osteen, Guy Kinney; pianist, Mrs. W. L. Edwards; assistants, Mrs. R. B. Harrison, Mrs. D. B. Eldridge; choir-leader, W. W. Frye; assistant, W. B. Delk; treasurer, J. T. Morgan; reporter, Mrs. J. M. Morgan; Sunday school superintendent, W. W. Frye; assistants, O. W. Brown, R. L. Briley; secretary and treasurer, Floyd Vuncannon; assistant, Roy Medlin; choir leaders, W. W. Frye, John Easter; pianist, Mrs. R. B. Harrison; assistant, Mrs. D. B. Eldridge; reporter, Walter Vuncannon. Some of these have served before in the same capacity for which they were elected this year and were very efficient, and we believe the new ones will do just as well.

We were glad to have Bro. A. L. Hunter preach for us Sunday night of Conference. It speaks well for him that so many whom he had served in other days and who had moved away were back on that night. And also a large delegation from Pinnacle came over to hear him. We were glad to have them enjoy him with us.

Sunday began our new Conference year. We appreciate so much having our pastor returned to us. We all think so well of Dr. and Mrs. Williams that we can't think of giving them up. One lady said she thought we ought to keep them as long as they live. We intend to stand by him and try to held up his hands in all he undertakes with us.

Flat Rock.—We have been kindly received as pastor of Flat Rock Charge for the coming year, and greatly appreciate the privilege of laboring for and with the people of the charge. The first service for the new Conference year was at Flat Rock church last Sunday morning. There was a good attendance in the Sunday school and also for the church service. After the service the pastor was invited to the splendid home of Bro. M. W. Thomas, where a good dinner was enjoyed with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and their daughter, Virginia. Miss Iva Friddle was a guest in the home for dinner.

The second service was at Bethany church at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Here we had a fairly good number present for the service, and we have not spoken to any congregation that was more attentive than the people who composed the congregation. This is one of the oldest churches on the charge, located in Rockingham County, being only ten miles from the parsonage, and the farthest church from the parsonage.

The pastor and family are now comfortably located in the parsonage at Stokesdale, Guilford Countp, 20 miles from Greensboro, and 20 miles from Winston-Salem. We moved from Lexington to Stokesdale last Thursday. Some of our church people were at the parsonage waiting for us. The women had prepared a good supper for us, which was thoroughly enjoiyed. A new cook stove was placed in the parsonage and a good supply of stovewood given by Bro. N. W. Gordon, of Bethel church. The different churches are to raise the money for the purchase of the new cookstove. Some of the men were present to assist in unloading our household goods and helped place them. A close neighbor, not a member of our church, is giving us rich milk and butter.

On Friday night about 7 o'clock we heard a knock at our front door, and when we investigated, discovered about 32 visitors, composed of members of four of the churches. The door was opened and they marched into the dining room where their packages and bundles of various kinds of gifts were placed on the dining table. It was a real pounding, the kind which a pastor and family enjoy receiving and appreciate. We thank each one for the gifts, and appreciate the spirit in which they were made. We have already seen evidences of a spirit of love and appreciation on the part of the people of Flat Rock charge. It shall be our purpose to render the best possible service for the promotion of the Kingdom of God during the coming year.

Announcement was made at both services last Sunday that the first quarterly conference for Flat Rock charge will be held at Bethel church on Saturday before the third Sunday in December, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. We are expecting a good attendance of the members of the conference and others also. There will be important business to transact, so please be present.

The same plan of appointments which have been in effect heretofore will be followed by the present pastor. These appointments are as follows: First Sunday, Bethel, 11 a. m., Gideon's Grove, 3 . m.; second Sunday, Gideon's Grove, 11 a. m., Flat Rock, 3 p. m.; third Sunday, Palestine, 11 a. m., Bethel, 3 p. m.; fourth Sunday, Flat Rock, 11 a. m., Bethany, 3 p. m.; fifth Sunday, Palestine, 11 a. m.

Now, let's all work together for a successful new Conference year for the promotion of the Kingdom of God in the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Our former pastor, Rev. J. L. Love, was with us Sunday morning for his farewell sermon. As usual, a splendid discourse was heard. Afterwards the congregation stood and sang "Tell It to Jesus" and "God Be With You," while everyone who felt they'd been in some way benefited by Mr. Love went and gave him his hand and wished him Godspeed. This included the whole congregation. In the short time it seems Mr. Love has been with us he and his family have become very endeared to us, and we are saddened and disappointed to have to give them up. They will not soon be forgotten here, and we wish them much success in their new field of work.

We are looking forward to having our new pastor, Rev. Robert Short, with us December 10. We are hoping and praying for a very successful year.

Our Sunday schoo is moving on nicely, but there is still room for improvement here as well as in everything.

We were indeed glad to have with us the first Sunday the Miller sisters from Greenville. Their singing was enjoyed very much by all present, and we are hoping they can be with us again soon.

The Ladies' Aid is continuing to work faithfully under the direction of the president, Mrs. R. T. Bennett. The November monthly meeting was held at the home of the president on November 15. Their topic was "Home." The subject for December is on "The Birthday of the King."

Our Christian Endeavor is still striving to climb higher in service for the Master. Some interesting programs have been given recently under the leadership of our president, Miss Lottie Harrison. Sunday night an interesting program was given on "What Have We to Thank God For?" led by Miss Lula Pearson. Third Sunday night the Juniors met with little Lois Burnette as leader and a splendid program on the topic of "Counting Our Blessings" was given. The Juniors are few in number, but with each one taking his or her part they are doing splendid work.

Best wishes to the Herald and its many readers. REPORTER.

Winston-Salem, First.—Well, if any minister in the Conference received a pounding any earlier in the Conference year than this one did his people were surely on their marks. Late Monday afternoon, after adjournment of Conference we arrived at the parsonage. After supper we saw that several cars had parked in front of the home of our neighbor, Mr. B. K. Millaway, but as people have a right to park there any time they want to we did not go to ask them what they were there for. Presently we heard talking and in a few minutes the house was filled with people carrying packages of almost every description. We soon found that this was a part of the welcome which the people had planned for their pastor and his wife at the beginning of the new Conference year. As the appointments did not reach the evening paper here in time for that afternoon, many of our people did not know until they arrived at the home of Bro. Millaway that we were not returned to them for another year. But in so far as we know, no one took the package back home. When this pastor had regained his equilibrium he tried to express his gratitude not only for the gifts of the evening but also for the loyalty of the people during the three brief years spent here. So what was intended as a welcome really turned into a farewell. Anyway, it was a splendid gift—more than a barrel full of good things to eat of the finest variety.

As this will likely be my last letter from this place let me say the people have been mighty fine. After spending three years here there was not a single vote for change of preachers in the congregational meeting. Now that Conference has spoken and we are to go we sincerely trust that Dr. and Mrs. Bates may love these people just as much as we do. Our prayers and our best wishes will follow them. J. E. PRITCHARD.

Thomasville.—The Community Church was delighted at the opportunity of entertaining the Annual meeting of the Methodist Protestant Conference, beginning Wednesday, November 15, and continuing through Monday, November 20.

The High Point College Glee Club and the church choir rendered attractive programs of music during the Conference sessions. An impressive setting for the Conference was effected by the use of autumn flowers and greenery, arranged by the decorative committee.

Dr. George R. Brown, pastor of Reidsville church, preached the ordination sermon on Sunday morning before a large congregation. Dr. L. W. Gerringer, of Hendeson, preached the evening sermon.

The Calendar Plan was adopted by the Community Church to raise funds to be applied on the salary of J. F. Minnis, on which funds $20.00 has been collected.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Community Church made an outstanding record in its work during the past year, it was revealed by recent reports, and the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society, organized prior to Confeence, has a membership of 20.

The attendance at Sunday school on Sunday, November 26, was much larger than usual, and lacked only seven of meeting the church record.

This church will participate in the Union Thanksgiving service to be held at the Main Street M. E. Church, at which time Rev. M. O. Alexander, pastor of the First Baptist Church, will be the speaker.

Liberty.—On the fourth Sunday morning the general routine of church services was carried out. The Sunday school under the direction of Mr. R. L. Elkins, superintendent, is growing rapidly. Everyone seems to be showing loyalty and co-operation.

Money has been raised to put a new roof on our church, and also plans for the Thank-Offering to the "Home."

We feel very grateful for the return of our good pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, and his good wife, who is a very efficient worker in all phases of church work and so pleasant visitor in our homes.

Mr. Love gave us another good sermon Sunday morning from Matthew 7:24: "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock." Are we building on the principles of Christ? If we are we will be able to stand when the storms of life come, depressions and disappointments, temptations and trials. Hope on! Though all seems lost, and storms beat high, have faith! Be still and know that God is nigh."

May this be a year of loving service. May we trust the Great Shepherd to guide us.

Our Christian Endeavor, under the leadership of Miss Margaret Shepard, president, is endeavoring to train the minds and hearts of a large number of boys and girls. Mr. Grier Lineberry led the meeting the second Sunday evening, Miss Katherine Underwood the third Sunday, and Miss Mary York the fourth Sunday evening.

Miss York had charge of the Thanksgiving program, using as her subject, "What Have We to Thank God For?"

Each Tuesday night we have choir practice, and each Wednesday night prayer and praise service.

Mrs. Newton H. Isley entertained the Philathea class recently. Games and contests were engaged in under the direction of Mesdames Boyd Reitzel and Lawrence Brown. The hostess then served delicious refreshments, assisted by her daughters, Misses Helen Dorothy and Annie Dare Isley.

Circle No. 2 will meet with Mrs. John W. Curtis Wednesday p. m. On Friday afternoon Circle No. 1 will meet with Mrs. Joe Swaim.

Quite a number of our people attended Conference at Thomasville last week.

Miss Nettie Stewart attended "Home-coming" at High Point College, November 25th. She was accompanied by Mrs. Stella Ray, who visited her sister, Mrs. P. S. Kennett.

Miss Mary Bowman Shepard, of High Point College was the guest of her mother, Mrs. F. A. Shepard Sunday.

Rev. and Mrs. Fred R. Love and Mr. and Mrs. John Holt were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shepard on Wednesday, November 22.

C. A. Shepard and family, of Greensboro, Route 4, were guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shepard, Sunday.

Miss Alta Hudson, teacher of Salisbury, will spend Thanksgiving with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Hudson.

Tabernacle-Julian.—No moving at Tabernacle this year, and thanks to the Good Lord and the other powers that be. Plenty of time to feel good and get down to work without any lost motion, with the hope of making this the best year yet. The pastor came home from Conference and on the same day made some visits and went to mill, thus taking a good start.

On our first Sunday we had a fine service at Tabernacle. Dr. and Mrs. Dixon brought a group of the fine children from the Children's Home and helped us have a fine Harvest-Home service. The program rendered by the children was fine and talks by Dr. and Mrs. Dixon were impressive. After the program an offering was taken which amounted to more than $22.00 in cash and a large contribution of produce from our farms and canned goods from our homes. We regard it as a great day for our church and we are glad to do what we could for the Home. After the service, dinner, picnic style, was served on the grounds. We are to have a service of worship at Tabernacle on the morning of Thanksgiving and we believe at that time the contributions will be enlarged.

The Harvest-Home service at Julian is to be on the evening of Thanksgiving day. We know that these good people at this time will do their part. They always do.

The good people have already shown themselves thoughtful of our welfare. Nice things have come into the parsonage in the way of fruits, vegetables, milk and fresh meat. These have come from the homes of Bro. W. T. Hanner, of Julian, and J. E. Hanner, T. R. Surratt, Purvis Neese, P. A. Hardin, and C. H. Kirkman, of Tabernacle. To these we acknowledge our appreciation and extend our thanks.

Bro. William Kirkman, one of our oldest Tabernacle members, is suffering becouse of a paralytic stroke which occurred some days ago. Since he was strick his condition does not seem to change to any great extent. The prayers of good people are requested that this good brother may recover.

GEO. L. CURRY.

Bellemont, Mount Hermon Charge.—We are indeed glad to have Rev. Mr. Mabry back with us for another year. We are thankful that we have this good Christian man for our pastor.

On Sunday morning, November 26, Pastor Mabry gave us a most appropriate and touching message on "Thanksgiving." He took his lesson text from Psalm 107: "Give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, His mercy endureth forever." The pastor told us that we always think of Thanksgiving beginning in Virginia in the time of Governor Bradford, but it really began back in David's time. In the 16th chapter of I Chronicles David and the people of Israel were giving thanks unto the Lord. These people were just common, ordinary people, just as the Pilgrims were, and they were giving thanks for the common, ordinary things of life. Without the great hand of our Father we would not have these things to be thankful for. We would not have the privilege of giving thanks for them. We should not wait until Thanksgiving Day to be thankful. We ought to recognize God every day, and give thanks unto Him for His manifold blessings. Thanksgiving Day is a great day for the Christian, but it is a sad time for the grumbler. Pastor Mabry centered his thought around five great things for which we should be thankful. First, we should thank God for His goodness. His goodness is shared by everyone, the just and the unjust. God sends rain upon the just and the unjust alike. How thankful we should be for the material blessings of God! God is an inexhaustible supply of goodness. When we receive the blessings of God there are still more blessings to receive when we are ready and qualified for them. The speaker told us that if we are not bigger Christians this year than we were at the same time last year, we are smaller ones. Second, we should thank God for His mercy. God never changes. How much He loves us and how great is His mercy toward us! We are too forgetful of His mercies. "His mercy endureth forever." Third, we should be thankful for His loving kindness. God is loving and kind. He has no other plan except through us.

Fourth, most of all, we should be thankful for His salvation. If we forget everything else, let us not forget to be thankful to Him for saving us from our sins. There is no better way of showing our love for Jesus than by winning some other soul for Him. Last, we should be thankful for all the blessings of God. In conclusion, Pastor Mabry begged us to protect our homes by building a bulwark of religion around them.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Mount Hermon church on Saturday afternoon, December 9, at 2 o'clock.

Prayer meeting will be held on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. Pastor Mabry will conduct the meeting.

The board of stewards of the church will meet on Tuesday night, December 5, to make out the assessment cards for the coming year.

The following Sunday school teachers have been elected for next year: Beginners, Miss Carrie Nicholson; No. 1, Miss Margaret Pickett; No. 2, Mrs. Clay Holt; No. 3, Mr. Reid Brown; No. 4, Miss Ramah Shoffner; No. 5, Mrs. Sidney Russell; No. 6, Mr. Roy Sharpe; No. 7, Dr. J. A. Pickett; No. 8, Mr. Edgar York; No. 9, Mr. Wayne Curtiss.

Our Sunday school is planning to have a Christmas tree on Saturday night, December 23. The program will be in charge of Miss Ramah Shoffner, Miss Margaret Pickett, and Mrs. Edgar York.

There will be an oyster supper at the schoolhouse on Saturday night of this week. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the Christmas tree. Everyone is urged to come.

The Boy Scouts will meet at the church on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Sisters class held its regular monthly meeting with Miss Beulah Barbee on Thursday evening, November 23.

First Church, Burlington.—We have just begun our new journey and am hoping that we can do even better next year, although our budget was up to date this year, for which we are very grateful.

We are very much pleased to have with us another year Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Paschall, who have worked so earnestly and faithfully for the Church and God, and we feel confident that they will continue this good work. We enjoy having them in our midst. It is indeed a pleasure.

The attendance was very good yesterday at both services. All organizations seem to be running along smoothly so far.

Several of our members are sick, some critically. We pray and sincerely hope that God will bless them if it is His will, and restore them speedily to their normal strength. May all of our church members pray for them.

Since our year has just begun, there is not so much to report; probably next week we will have more news. REPORTER.

First Church, High Point.—An enjoyable event in the form of a musical tea, sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary, was held last Tuesday afternoon, November 14, at the beautiful home of Mrs. C. C. Robbins, south of the city. This pleasing affair was given under the direction of Mrs. Richard H. Shaw, secretary of Missionary Education, assisted by Miss Mary E. Young. The lovely home was attractively decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums. The guests were greeted at the door by Miss Young, and the receiving line was composed of officers of the Auxiliary and others: Mrs. C. C. Robbins, Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer, Mesdames J. C. Whitesell, C. L. Whitaker, J. S. Pickett, R. M. Andrews, W. C. Feree, R. H. Gunn, and Ralph H. Vance. When all the guests, including several out-of-town men and women, were seated in the living-room, the mission study book, "Eastern Women Today and Tomorrow," was admirably presented by six ladies, as follows: Miss Mary E. Young, Mesdames R. M. Andrews, G. I. Humphreys, L. R. Peacock, P. E. Lindley, and Minnie P. Harrell. A delightful progam of music was then given by Miss Anne Robbins, daughter of the hostess, Miss Margaret Neese, Mesdames J. H. Allred, and J. C. Whitesell and Miss Alma Andrews. Mrs. J. H. Walker received in the dining room and from a beautifully appointed tea table, which was centered with a bowl of lovely chrysanthemums with tall tapers in silver at intervals, Mrs. L. J. Diffee and Mrs. W. P. Pickett poured tea, which was served with dainty sandwiches, mints and salted nuts by Mrs. Lewis E. Teague, Miss Anne Robbins, and Mrs. Gorrell Payne. About 75 guests enjoyed this delightful afternoon.

At the Sunday morning worship period the congregation was much pleased to hear Dr. J. E. Pritchard, of Winston-Salem ,who was sent to us from Annual Conference at Thomasville to speak from the pulpit at this hour. He delivered a very practical and timely sermon on "Going Forward," from the text in Hebrews 6: "Let us go on unto perfection." He said that churches as well as individuals must go forward or fall into stagnation. He held up the Bible as the rule of conduct for all Christians, and stressed the importance of more thoughtful study of the Holy Book, and advised all to have a stated time to search the Scriptures, preferably early in the morning when the mind is fresh instead of late at night before retiring when one is half asleep. He was intoduced by Dean Lindley of the College as one of the outstanding ministers of the entire denomination, and the congregation greatly enjoyed the visiting minister's splendid effort. At this service, W. C. Feree, Jr., sang a pretty solo. At the same hour the pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, occupied the pulpit of Grace church, Greensboro. There was no evening service, but a large number of the membership went to Thomasville Sunday afternoon and evening to attend Conference.

High Point people are much gratified because the Annual Conference did not disturb the pastorate of the four churches in the city, and Rev. R. I. Farmer is returned to First Church after five years of commendable sevice; Dr. J. D. Williams will again serve Welch Memorial, Dr. S. W. Taylor is returned to Lebanon, Mechanicsville, for the second time, and Rev. C. H. Hill will again be pastor at English Street Church.

The Woman's Auxiliary held an enthusiastic and well attended meeting on Monday afternoon in the C. E. room, there having been 41 members present. The president, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, was in the chair, and Mrs. J. H. Allred, secretary, read the minutes. A very lovely devotional sevice was conducted by Miss Mary E. Young of the College on "The Hands of Jesus." After Miss Eleanor Capps, student at High Point College, sang very sweetly, "The Touch of His Hands on Mine," Miss Young made an inspiring talk, read a lovely poem, "The Master's Touch," and related a touching story of the painter, Durer, whose friends performed hard, menial toil such as scrubbing floors, in order that he might enjoy the advantages of good lessons and who in gratitude for this secrificial service painted a lovely picture of his friend's hands raised in prayer, beautiful and majestic, though knotted and roughened by toil for love's sweet sake. An interesting feature was the report of the different circles, which revealed 136 visits made and attendance of 44 last month. The treasurer, Mrs. Wade Marlette, reported that the sum of $1,113 has been raised for the first half of the fiscal year. Mrs. Ross Davis and Mrs. J. A. Gray were appointed a committee to secure a Heatrola for the assembly room. Many activities in the circles were announced; members of Circle No. 4, Mrs. C. C. Robbins, chairman, are salting peanuts for sale the latter half of this month, and Mrs. W. C. Feree's Circle will sell Brunswick stew Thursday. As November is Children's Home month, the Auxiliary will make sheets and send them to the Home.

Sincere sympathy is expressed for Mrs. R. D. Bodenheimer and Mr. A. F. Moore on account of the loss by death of their brother, Mr. Alfred A. Moore, which occurred Sunday afternoon at his son's home at 143 W. Lexington Avenue. He was 72 years of age, and for 22 years had been employed at Beeson Hardware Company. Quiet and unassuming by nature, he won the confidence and esteem of a large number of friends and neighbors. Funeral services were conducted at Spring Hill church Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. R. C. Boyd had the misfortune to be hurt, but not seriously, in an automobile accident last Friday near Asheboro, while following the funeral procession of her brother-in-law, Mr. W. W. Martin. A car in the rear bumped into hers and threw her against the steering-wheel with such force that she sustained a severe cut on her upper lip, which was closed by three stitches. Her friends are pleased to learn that she is out of the hospital and able to attend to her usual duties at home. Her daughter, Hazel, who underwent an operation for appendicitis there weeks ago, is also improving at home, but will not be able to go back to school until after January 1.

We congratulate a sister denomination, the Friends or Quakers, upon the celebration of their 50th anniversary, which was fittingly observed last Sunday. This interesting occasion brought to this city two of the nation's outstanding scholars, Dr. Rufus M. Jones, professor of Philosophy at Haverford College, and Dr. Henry J. Cadbury, of the faculty of Bryn Mawr College, Penn., who delivered addresses. The first meeting-house, which was completed in 1883, was located at the corner of Jones and Lindsay streets in what was then known as the Quaker Woods. About 20 years later the present Central Friends church was built on South Main street, and in 1924 the congregation had grown so much that the Annex was necessary. Today this group numbers 695 members and an enrollment in Bible school of 450. Rev. Tom Alderman Sykes, an Englishman, is the popular and scholarly present minister who is prominent and outstanding in the spiritual life of the city.

James Montgomery, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Montgomery, formerly a member of Troop No. 4 of the High Point Boy Scouts and now a member of Eagle Scouts Club of the University of North Carolina, is assisting in the building of a Scout cabin at the University.

On the honor roll of Junior High School last month appear the names of 85 boys and girls, among whom are Hobart Ferree, Jr., Joseph Farmer, and Emory Gibson.

Little Miss Anne Whitesell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, celebrated her third birthday on November 4, and her mother made it a red-letter day by giving a party for her and several small friends.

Home-coming Day will be observed at High Point College next Saturday, and large numbers of Alumni are expected and will be heartily wecomed. Chief among the entertaining features will be a football game between the "old boys and the present students. Charles Robbins, Jr., is leader of the Alumni team, and is expecting several former stars to take part.

Miss Dorothy Rankin played a leading role in the production of the comedy, "The Boston Fireman and the Beacon Street Heiress," sponsored by the American Business Club and presented in the Junior High School auditorium last week.

First Church, Charlotte.—We are grateful to have our good pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, return to us, for he is indeed a good pastor and a splendid preacher as well. He is a spirit-filled man, held in high esteem by every member of the church and church school; even the small children love him dearly and enjoy hearing him preach. He is not only beloved by his own congregation, but by the community as well, as is evidenced by the number of visitors from other churches who attend, especially the Sunday evening services. The vote for the return of Bro. Hendry was unanimous.

We are proud of the good year's work which Bro. Hendry and his good wife have done and we are looking forward to an even greater year. Their coming here has been a blessing to our church and community. May they remain with us for many, many years.

We were glad to have Mrs. C. B. Bruton back in her accustomed place after several weeks' absence owing to the seriou sillness of her husband. Mrs. Bruton holds an outstanding record for faithful attendance, having been absent only one Sunday in six years. She is teacher of the Wilma Shaw Bible class, and was greatly missed during her absence.

Our Young People's Christian Endeavor Society is getting off to a good start for ehe new year with the following officers, which were installed by the pastor at the Sunday evening prayer meeting: President, Miss Gray Stiles; vice-president, Louis Garmon; secretary, Miss Mary Shaw; treasurer, Miss Mary Neal Yandle; ushers and welcome committee, Miss Rachel Tadlock, Louis Garmon, and Fred McCall; lookout committee, Robert Stegall, Miss Dorothy Threatt, and Sigsby Tadlock; social committee, Grady Tadlock, Miss Helen McCall, and Miss Margaret Dellinger; publicity committee, Miss Rachel Tadlock and Miss Mary Neal Yandle.

While we do not have a missionary rommittee, missionary programs are given from time to time with talks by returned missionaries or by members of the Woman's Auxiliary.

The executive board of the Young People's Christian Endeavor Sosiety will meet with the pastor to pan goals for the coming year. The society has done good work in the past year, but expects to do more and greater things in the coming year.

We are proud that our pastor takes so much interest in our young people's work.

The Mecklenburg County Union of Christian Endeavor will hold the regular mass meeting in our church on Friday evening, December 1. About two hundred and fifty Christian Endeavorers are expected to attend. Our society, with Miss Gray Stiles, presiding, will have charge of the worship program, and Chester Morrison, president of the Union, will preside at the business session. Officers of the Union will be installed at this time.

A Junior Christian Endeavor Society has been organized with Mrs. Calvin Beatty as superintendent.

The mid-week prayer service will be held on Thursday evening of this week and will be a Thanksgiving service to the glory of God and to the good of the Children's Home. Gifts and offerings will be brought to be sent to the Children's Home.

The Wilma Shaw Bible Class held its regular monthly meeting last Thursday evening with Mrs. Leon Blake at her home on Matheson avenue.

The Woman's Auxiliary met with Mrs. Hendry at the parsonage on last Tuesday afternoon. The topic, "Prayer and Missions," was used. Mrs. B. W. Little spoke on "Our Children's Home," and urged each woman to do her part toward this important phase of our work.

M. D. Frink has been elected church school superintendent to succeed J. C. Penny, who resigned. REPORTER.

JOURNAL PRAISES DR. J. E. PRITCHARD

The following editorial recently appeared in the Winston-Salem Journal:

"Dr. J. E. Pritchard, pastor of the First Methodist Protestant Church of Winston-Salem for the past three years, has been transferred by his Conference to Calvary Church, Greensboro. He is succeeded by Dr. C. W. Bates, who was pastor of Calvary Church in Greensboro for six years.

"Dr. Pritchard is a very useful minister and citizen. He is president of the Winston-Salem Ministers' Association, chaplain of Post B. P. T. A., and a member of the executive committee of the local chapter of the American Red Cross. He is interested in all sorts of community enterprises and civic movements.

"Dr. Pritchard did a splendid work in his own chuch in Winston-Salem and is influential in his denomination. A student and thinker of ability, his alma mater recognizet him by conferring upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. A man of dignity, yet winning friendliness, he was very popular in Winston-Salem. He made many friends both as a minister and as a citizen. Indeed, his character as a citizen was the outgrowth of his deep spirituality and splendid moral life. His many friends in Winston-Salem will wish for him a continuance of his useful career as he goes to the neighboring city."

OBSERVAATION

Several months ago I visited a large cemetery just out of Petersburg, Va. I was told that this city of the dead has a greater population than the city nearby. Inside the cemetery on the west stands the historic Blanchard church. This is no longer used except by passersby. A book and pencil lie on a table. In this book I wrote my name, passed on and forgot.

Many church members are just like that. They record their name in a book, pass on, and forget. Wm. H. NEESE.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Miss Ruth L. Welch of High Point

1892-1933

"To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die."

When we bid the last farewell to our loved ones, at first we are dazed and overwhelmed with our sense of loss, and through tear-wet eyes we see the world forever changed by the sudden shock of grief and loneliness; but later there comes to our minds the memory of their sweetness of life and the influence of their character. As the remembrance of the gentle, sweet-spirited friend who left us suddenly a few weeks ago, comes in retrospect, we realize that first of all she lives and will live for aye in the hearts of her three sisters, Mrs. Geo. T. Penny, Mrs. Allie W. Foister, and Miss Elizabeth Welch, and her brother, J. C. Welch, Jr., to whom she was devoted and unselfishly gave her time, thought, and consideration. They relied on her and her good sense and judgment, for she possessed an active mind and fine business sagacity. She was domestic in taste and loved to make home attractive and comfortable for her dear ones. The bond of brotherly and sisterly love and affection was very close in this family.

She lives and will live for many years in the hearts of her teachers and schoolmates here in her home town where she attended the local graded school under Dr. George H. Crowell, having been a member of the Class of 1899, and later at Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md. She was a close student and obedient pupil.

She lives and will long live in the hearts of the A. M. Idol Philathea class, of which she was a faithful and loyal member, giving unreservedly of her time and attention, always co-operating with her teacher, and making many plans for "going about doing good," for the relief of the poor and unfortunate and comfort and sympathy to those who sit in the shadow of sorrow.

She lives and will live for aye in the hearts of the pastor and members of the First Methodist church and countless friends of other denominations for her bright, cheerful outlook on life, her unfailing courtesy, and her faithfulness to duty. She was loyal to her pastor and generous in her support of all the activities of the church, always taking enthusiastic pride in the work of her circle of the auxiliary. Her family was prominent in the founding and support of First church, she having been a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., the latter having been a charter member. Her father was a well known liveryman and large real estate owner in the early days of High Point, and was a member of a prominent pioneer family, whose ancestor, William Welch, Sr., came from Maryland about 1790. Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., was before marriage Miss Mary Johnson, also a member of a pioneer family. She and Mr. Welch were married in December, 1884, and Ruth grew up in their first home on Rankin street (now Wrenn), and lived there until her parents moved to the present commodious home on North Main street.

She underwent a heavy operation last March, from which she had not fully recovered, and being greatly weakened by the shock of grief at her mother's death in September, she succumbed to a second operation performed ten days before her death on October 19 in Guilford General Hospital. We pause before this great mystery, the setting of a sun in the morning; but out of the heartbreak and longing "for the touch of a vanished hand, and the sound of a voice that is stilled." There comes the happy assurance that she "has crossed the bar and met her Pilot face to face."

"O rare, sweet soul, so early passed beyond,
What sights are to thy raptured vision given?
What fruits supernal of thy hopes so fond
Are thine in that far country we call Heaven?

"How fares it with thee? 'Tis but a day
Since in these earthly ways thou didst tread;
Now, sudden thou hast gone so far away
We cannot reach thee. Whither art thou fled?

"Hast thou forgotten all thou here didst love?
The flowers of spring, the thrush's mellow song?
Is there no tender yearning thought above
For those whose lives were bound with thine so long?

"O strange, deep mystery! Sudden from our sight
Thou passest like a shadow—all in vain
Our questionings and grief; for us the night,
For thee the day where suns unsetting shine."

Clary

Dorothy Baker Clary, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Clary, of 1221 Redding street, High Point, was born January 25, 1928, and died November 21, 1933. After being sticken with diphtheria, she lived from Sunday until Tuesday when the death angel passed by and her soul went back to Him who gave it.

Dorothy was a sweet little girl, loved by all her playmates and all others who knew her. Besides the parents are the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Clary, of High Point, and Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Blake, of Eagle Springs. Her funeral was conducted by the writer, the pastor of English Street church, and one of their neighbors, Mrs. Carter. The flowers were many and beautiful. Her little body now lies in Oakwood cemetery, High Point.

May the Lord give grace and strength to the bereaved parents and grandparents.

Lashley

Benton Lashey died November 22nd. The funeral services were conducted by the writer on November 23rd, at Chestnut Ridge church.

Bro. Lashley lived to be more than 63 years old. He had been a member of the above church for several years.

A large congregations was present for these services.

He leaves his companion and one daughter, besides other relatives and friends to mourn their loss. May God's blessing be upon them all.

CORRECTION

It seems strange that the Hollister reporter made a mistake in reporting the quarterly conference at Bethesda. Possibly it was due to inattention or to a misunderstanding of what was being done. The report stated that there were two votes taken on the question of the pastor's return. I wish to say that I was present every minute of the meeting, as were others who wish me to make this correction, and on no question were there two votes taken. Three votes were taken during the pastor's absence from the church—one as to whether the vote should be by ballot; another as to whether certain people, not official members of the conference, should be allowed to vote, as they were attempting to; and the third as to whether the pastor should return. It seems to us best that this correction be made.

CASUAL AND VIGILANT

If all who could take the Herald would take it and patronize, the help would be to all of us; but it is not so.

Rev. Mr. Long is able to write and to help the good causes very much—and there are casuals, too, that come in. The vigilant is that all who are able will continue to urge for the temperance cause.

I would urge for Bro. Long to help us all he can—and, of course, he will do so.

There is no "liberty" connected with intemperance. Give us liberty.

MAGAZINES

Many of you got the price list at Conference. See page 84 for special Christmas rates.

Let's have a price list in every church in North Carolina. If each pastor will write me just how many he needs I will mail them to him.

The magazines will cost you no more. Our Children's Home will benefit by the commission. Let's push this.

Where Is God?

Men have tried to locate God
In the sky or 'neath the sod;
He's not here and must be there
If indeed He's anywhere.

Dark in mind and short of sight,
Men can't see in brightest light,
Seeking for some favored spot
Where man is and God is not.

Feeble-minded creature he,
Man ignores the Deity,
Trying to banish Him from space,
Leaving Him no proper place.

God is here and God is there!
His dwelling-place is everywhere!
Soothing thought that God is near!
Blessed thought that God is here!

Need of Study of Religion

Observers have seen a change comng over the thought of the times. This writer noticed it 40 years ago and chose for his graduating thesis "The Present Religious Revolution." Changes of doctrine have been noted in the pulpits of a number of denominations. Calvinists and Arminians are now pretty thoroughly intermingled in a number of different denominations. Grounds for heresy charges are numerous. Yet there are few heresy trials: those who live in glass houses cannot afford to throw stones. Men whose beliefs do not tally with their impressions must carry about in their bosoms a very uncomfortable feeling. Some are seeking to relieve themselves of painful schisms, by church unions, eliminating from all church bodies grounds of controversy. Some are so weary of discord that they are almost ready to seek relief by going back beyond Luther and finding rest in one universal church, however organized.

But it is not rashness that the times are calling for; it is not indifference to the truth; it is not a disavowal of all religious conviction; it is not going back to a life of worldliness. The thing that is needed is the truth, for the truth could make us free. And the way to find the truth is by way of earnest study. Error prevails because men do not think enough.

The church is divided up into schools of error. Religious men are distinguished by their errors, their prominence, their offensiveness or their absurdity. A very painful chapter in human history is this long chapter of religious errors. How widely and deeply does it affect practical life! Human destiny in the eternal world is believed to depend upon it. Certainly destiny in this world depends upon it. The urgent pursuit of the truth is stimulated by the conviction that the truth commands destiny. Men cannot afford to be indifferent as to the truth. Religious books are in much demand on the part of those who wish "to buy the truth and sell it not."

The ardor of religious warfare has somewhat abated as compared with a few centuries ago, but still there are authorities in command of warring camps and the fight continues. Perhaps strategy is now more relied upon than force and there is still hope of triumph. The worst elements of human nature are enlisted and called to do service in the unfortunate conflict. All this makes a painful sight. How much better it would be if the war of religious forces were turned into a school of enquiry, all studying to discover and know the truth that makes men free.

Men ought to come to agreement as to who Jesus was and what He accomplished, and what He still labors to accomplish. They ought to come to an agreement as to what men must do to avail themselves of the benefits secured by the intercession of Jesus. In particular, they ought to understand Repentance, Saving Faith, and the means of Growing in Grace, and the attainment of Christian Perfection.

As it now is in the world of Christian thought, there is not agreement as to what religion is, there being two radically different definitions in use among religious writers. Let us think of these things.

—Rev. J. E. Pritchard held the first quarterly conference of Calvary charge on Tuesday night; there was good attendance and good interest. He proposed as two goals for the year, "Every member contributing" and "Fifty-two new church members for the year." Bro. Pritchard is constitutionally in earnest and his people soon learn that he thinks of a church as a working organization.

—Preachers' moving expenses have been reduced in the last quarter century. One preacher found ten dollars sufficient this year to pay for transportation of household goods by truck, whereas the service of a freight car formerly cost about two hundred dollars.

—Thank God for the good Sunday weather we are having this winter.

WHAT DOES THE CHURCH OWE THE PEOPLE?

By LUTHER K. LONG

It is quite the custom to speak of the great debt the individual and the community owe the church.

We are told that the church ministers salvation, that without the church no one can be saved, that the issues of life and death are in the hands of the church and its ministers—especially that in the Pope, the head of the Roman Catholic church, is centered all the authority and wisdom and power of that great organization, and that he is the authoritative vicar of Christ. Hence, to the great minds of such church auhorities, the outstanding virtue of a Christian is obedience, submission to those whom the Lord has set over the church.

But the people from time to time have risen against the church and its authority. The Protestant Reformation in the early part of the seventeenth century was a complete break with the church authorities in Rome. Later, France, while still remaining Catholic, threw overboard the temporal authority of the Pope. Not many years ago the Mexican government sent away foreign priests, and dictated as to the number of priests that would be allowed to minister in a certain population. The people, as a rule, continue in the Roman church, but, having become disgusted with the vast accumulation of wealth by the churches while the people continued in poverty and misery—and not liking the interference of the priests in civil affairs—the government decided to put a stop to this meddling.

More recently Spain, that ancient monarchy that had for long been a stronghold of the papal power, has had a revolution. The monarchy is gone, the republic has taken its place. And with these political changes have come changes in the church. Much of its property has been taken over, and a considerable part of its power has been destroyed. The Spanish people are still, in the main, adherents of the Roman Catholic faith; but they propose to do more of their own thinking and take a larger part in the administration of religious affairs.

The time may not be so far away when the people will demand decided changes in the administration of the Protestant churches in our own country. I have heard members of the three kinds of Methodist churches in Harford county, Maryland, express regret that there are so many competing churches of these denominations in that county. Furthermore, they are ashamed that their denominational leaders seem unable to do anything to remove the scandal. At least half of these churches could be closed to advantage. More than half of all the churches of all the denominations in that county could be closed without injury to religious conditions. And yet nothing effective is done about it.

Recently I attended the annual convocation of the School of Religion at Howard University. Among the interesting things on the program was an address by Mrs. Edward S. Hope, director of the Southeast Community House, in Washington. Her subject was "The Contribution the Church Can Make to Social Welfare." She spoke of the great need in many homes—not merely for food and clothing and fuel—but for ideas and ideals, for knowledge of how to use leisure time, for co-operation in dramatics and other forms of community activities and enjoyments. She told of the astonishingly large sums of money the people—very poor people, many of them—give to the church for maintaining the building and for current expenses.

Then, with deep feeling in her voice, she said: "The church owes something to these people in return for their money and devotion. Young people must have something worth while for the time and devotion they are expected to give to the church, something that meets their real needs." Those words thrilled a sympathetic audience. Some one is likely to respond: "The church is already ministering to the highest needs of its people. What can be more important than the salvation of one's soul?" Can't you hear some one whose soul is being sought, calling out impatiently: "Please forget my soul for awhile, and consider me!"

Church doors are open for a short time each week. Too often the things talked of and the directions given to the young are far removed from the realities of life. Then they are turned loose for another week—in some places it is a whole month—to find entertainment and occupation as they may be able. The Y. M. C. A., the Y. W., Boy and Girl Scouts, vacation camps, clubs and other organizations, are usually outside the churches; and sometimes are regarded as seriously competing for the interest of the young.

Well, what does the church owe the people?

1. Service. "I am among you as one that serves" should be the spirit in which the church faces its task. The church is not here to exalt itself, but to lift up humanity. Self-seeking on the part of the church or its ministers and administrators is utterly out of place. The kingdom of God is divine, the church is a human organization. It is dangerous to overemphasize the divine origin of the church and the inspiration of its human leadership. See what that has done for the Roman Catholic church and its exclusive ministry! And how about Protestant organizations that claim to be the only true church and its ministers the only ones duly authorized to administer baptism and the Lord's Supper? As a human organization the church must submit to criticism and be ready to revise its statements of belief and to change its methods of work. The local church is to be free and responsive to the needs of its constituency—without too much over-lordship from denominational heads.

2. The church owes it to the people to keep open the paths to God and Truth. God is not handed to the people by the church and its ministers. Each individual must seek Him and find Him for himself. iHs value to any person consists largely in that person's knowledge of Him and personal fellowship with Him. Truth is not the written words of a creed or confession imposed upon the people by the church and its administrators. Nor is it the contents of a book written by men inspired and directed by the Holy Spirit. Truth is Truth to you only as it finds you, gets you, and is found by you in your own experience. The church and the ministry owe it to the people to keep this way to God and Truth open, and so to instruct and guide both youth and age that they

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

GOAL FOR THE NEW YEAR

Membership Gains of 10 Per Cent

This gain does not look large, but when we consider that a net gain of 3,000 members to our church in the North Carolina Conference is more than we have made in any single year, it will not appear so easy to reach.

Re-enlistments 10 Per Cent

All pastors know that every church register carries on it the names of many who have lost interest in the church; they have ceased to attend its services, or to pay to its support. In fact, they are no more to the church than the tens of thousands who never darken the church door. What we need to do is to find these members and try to win them back to the church. We have set a goal of ten per cent of those on your membership roll who have ceased to take interest in your church. Win them.

All North Carolina Budgets Paid in Full

This means that we shall pay the A. C. Expense, Church Extension, Superannuates, A. C. debts, etc. When these amounts are included we will see that the total is not an insignificant figure, but it is not an impossible one for us to raise. Twenty-five per cent more for World Service than was raised the past year. See that all special days are observed, that collections are taken for education, missions, etc., when the service is held and include what is raised by the Women's Auxiliary and when it is all added, raise 25 per cent more for this budget than your church raised the year just closed.

Herald Subsidy

There is to be an allotment for the Herald this year as last. Many of our churches raised their allotment, some did not, but enough was raised that made us see that if all had done their part, the deficit in printing the Herald would have been quite small. Let's do our part whole-heartedly this time.

Herald Subscription Quotas

The same subscriptions for this year as last. Try to reach them. Your members need the Herald, and the Herald needs the support of the people.

Start Now

Many churches fail because they do not begin in time. They wait until the fall before they really start to pay the conference claims, or do much for the pastor's salary. That is why so little is often done. Try beginning during December. Pay off one of the assessments in December, A. C. Expense or Church Extension or Superannuates, the nbe ready for another when January comes. And when conference comes you will find your finances in the best shape they have ever been in.

Pastors Exchange for World Service

President Broomfield asked me to work out an exchange by which the World Service Budget be presented in a dozen or fifteen of our churches. I did it and the following plan has been submitted to him for December 17:

S. W. Tylor at First church, R. I. Farmer at Lebanon church.

T. G. Madison at Community church and H. F. Surratt at First church.

R. C. Stubbins at Winston and C. W. Bates at Asheboro.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer and Mrs. H. C. Nicholson at Welch Memorial.

F. W. Paschall at Graham and J. C. Auman at First church, Burlington.

J. E. Pritchard at Grace and J. Elwood Carroll at Calvary.

J. M. Morgan at Kannapolis and C. P. Morris at Concord.

W. M. Loy at Mt. Pleasant and J. W. Braxton at Saxapahaw (taking one or more churches).

N. G. Bethea at West End, Greensboro, and T. J. Whitehead at Gibsonville.

Appointed Pastors

Bro. Aubrey Smith, supply pastor for Spencer church.

Bro. O. B. Williams, pastor Kernersville charge.

When Your Church Should Raise A. C. Expense

December—Asheboro, First church Burlington, Concord, Enfield, Whitakers, First church High Point.

January—St. Paul Greensboro, Graham, Gibsonville, Grace church, Spring church charge, English Street church, Tabernacle charge, Welch Memorial.

February—Community church Thomasville, First church Thomasville, Haw River charge, Kannapolis, First church Lexington, Randolph, Lebanon, High Point.

March—First church Winston, Mebane, Lincolnton, Henderson, West End Greensboro, Glen Raven, Denton.

April—Forsyth, Fallston, Albemarle, Asheville, Flat Rock, Reidsville, Mt. Hermon.

May—Orange, Mt. Pleasant, Randleman, Siler City, Shiloh, Saxapahaw, Granville.

June—Alamance, Anderson, Bess Chapel, Fountain Place, Charlotte, Draper, Calvary, Yarborough.

July—Cleveland, Connelly Springs, Creswell, Davidson, Friendship, W. Thomasville, Vance, Weaverville.

August—Why Not, W. Forsyth, Rockingham, Roberta, Richland, Pleasant Grove.

September—Pinnacle, N. Davidson, Mocksville, Moriah, Midland, Littleton, Democrat.

October—State Street Lexington, Mecklenburg, Midway, Kernersville, Halifax, Guilford, Greensville.

Orange Circuit, Rev. B. M. Williams, Pastor

I attended the first quarterly conference of this charge last Saturday afternoon. There was a good attendance, good interest, and there were accepted the budgets of the conference and plans made to raise during December the one thousand dollars still due on the parsonage. Success to them. The pastor is beginning his tenth year on Orange. Congratulations to both of them.

Welch Memorial, Rev. J. D. Williams, Pastor

I spoke at this church at the morning worship hour. The attendance was fair. Pastor Williams is popular with his people and they are expecting to have a much better year than last in finances and spiritual interests as well. Welch really has a better future than its leaders realized. We are hopeful that they are now entering a larger field of service in the city of High Point than they have ever enjoyed.

Appointments

December 10—11 a.m., Reidsville; p.m., Midway church.

I shall be glad to hold any quarterly conference the pastor may want me to hold, and to take any service I can. After December my appointments will doubtless be made out for several weeks.

Cordially yours,
R. M. Andrews.

What Does the Church Owe the People?

will follow on until God and Truth are experienced and known.

3. The church is under obligation to be interested in the entire life of the people, young and old. If we are not obsessed with the foolish notion of having so many church buildings and preachers we could have more money and workers to direct the play life, and to supervise the industrial and social activities of the young. A large part of the lives of the people should never be touched by the divisive sectarian spirit—and the other portions of life would be better off without its meddling interference and narrowing results.

The Orthodox Greek church in Russia is down and out because it lorded it over the people—was not willing to be among them as a humble servant. In answer to a question, I heard Prof. Harry F. Ward say that he did not blame the Russian people for repudiating that church. He believes that, in time, the heart of the Russian people will find a religious faith that will serve them and satisfy thei rspiritual and social aspirations. Many of them now talk against God, against religious ceremonies—but they are rejecting the God and ceremonies imposed upon them by their Czarist oppressors. In doing this they seem to reject God and all religion. But we may hope that in due time God and religious truth will be experienced and known by them.

THE GREAT EMPHASIS

Such phrases as "God is faithful," "The Lord is faithful," "This is a faithful saying," are often found in the New Testament. If our hearts will only rest upon His faithfulness we shall find in it not only the most exquisite joy and assured peace, but also the ground of our perfect confidence that He will accomplish His purposes in us, and glorify Himself in our lives.

To be occupied unduly with self in the matter of holiness is to become self-centered, morbid, and weak; to be occupied with God is to be restful, strong, confident, and ever growing in grace.—Unknown.

DONATIONS TO HIGH POINT COLLEGE LIBRARY

New editions are being contributed to the College Library through the generosity of our people.

Rev. C. H. Whitaker contributed twenty-two volumes. Dr. C. W. Bates contributed eight volumes, Dr. R. M. Andrews eight volumes. A number of volumes were received, being contributed from the late Dr. C. L. Whitaker.

There are thousands and thousands of good books lying idle upon the shelves of Methodist Protestants, and many that would be of service to students and faculty at High Point College. It is hoped that all readers of this article will immediately go to their library selves and take those books which they could spare for use here.

Just drop the undersigned a card, stating the number of volumes which you will spare and sometime in passing we will pick them up.

Any good book, whether religious, historical, scientific, literature, fiction or otherwise can be used and will be very much appreciated.

THE ONLY WAY TO WIN

It takes a little courage,
And a little self-control,
And some grim determination,
If you want to reach a goal.
It takes a deal of striving,
And a firm and stern set chin,
No matter what the battle,
If you're realy out to win.

There's no easy path to glory,
There's no rosy road to fame,
Life, however we may view it,
Is no simple parlor game;
But its prizes call for fighting,
For endurance and for grit,
For a rugged disposition,
And a "don't-know-when-to-quit."

RESTING WHILE SWIMMING

I learned to swim in boyhood, but it was only this summer that I achieved complete mastery of myself in the water. For thirty years I had assumed that I must constantly put forth effort to keep from sinking. One day an expert swimmer watched me for a few minutes, then cried: "Stop fighting the water and trust it to hold you up. Use your strength to get somewhere." Under his direction a few moments sufficed to convince me he was right. I lay flat in the water without moving hands or feet, and to my delight it held me up. Then I struck out, using my strength to forge ahead. Then what a revelation! Why did not some one tell me that years ago? So many constantly struggle to be Christians, when if they would only trust Christ they would be kept. How suggestive is that advice when applied to the Christian, "Stop struggling and trust God to keep you. Use your strength to get somewhere."—Unknown.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE CONFESSION

The work of the forenoon having been done, and dinner cleared away, Marjorie, as was her established custom, retreated to her room for her secret devotions. These were special times in her life when the Savior drew very near and blessed her, and she received strength to go on triumphantly. She took her Bible, which she was reading through, for the second time, and turned to Leviticus 6. Kneeling at her bedside she thanked God for this, His Word, and implored Him that the Spirit direct her thoughts and apply the Word to her heart as she read it.

Then came to her mind a beautiful dish, but it was in several pieces. She hadn't thought of it for a long time, but now she remembered. Her mother had told her to take it to Aunt Anne, who had asked to borrow it. In her eagerness to reach her aunt's house, Marjorie had tripped on the sidewalk as she stepped from her own yard. The dish was wrapped but when it fell it broke into several pieces. Marjorie hastily picked them up and ran back into the house, where she put them on the table. She then went to the library where she buried herself in a chair to read.

How her conscience hurt her, for she was not given to lying, but she felt still worse when mother said, I'd rather have had any dish in the house broken than this, because it was a wedding present from Grandma.''

As she did not question Marjorie any further concerning the matter, the little girl soon forgot about it. Several years had now passed.

A voice was saying to her now, ''Do you not think you should confess to Mother?''

''Lord, I did wrong, and I am sorry, but I can't tell Mother, I just can't. It would be too hard.''

''But I will help you then, just as I have always helped you since you came to Me.''

''But Lord, what would Herbert say? He would laugh at me more than ever. Oh, I just can't.''

''Christ was laughed at, even slain for no good reason whatsoever. Surely you could bear such a small amount of ridicule for Jesus' sake.''

''But this happened so long ago, seven years ago. They have forgotten it by now.''

With that she tried to dismiss it from her mind and endeavored to pray. But she could not. She had bumped up against something, it seemed, and she could not go any farther until it was out of the way. Arising from her knees, she went to the sewing-room. She soon found that she couldn't sew either, so she went to the kitchen. All this time a battle was waging in her soul between God's will and her will. With her alone rested the outcome thereof.

When Herbert came in he said, ''Why the sudden change in countenance?''

Marjorie only replied, ''I am thinking seriously.''

''Really!''

For a whole week the battle went on. Sometimes she forgot about it and was quite cheerful, but always when she wanted to pray it would come up before us, until she was beginning to realize that her spiritual life was endangered by that obstacle.

One day, when the pressure was especialy hard, she said in her desperation, ''Have Thy way, Lord, I will.'' Then followed a sweet rest and calm on the battlefield. Marjorie knew that she would keep her promise to God, but each time she thought of it her heart went thump-thump, until she could almost hear it.

One, two, three opportunities slipped by, and still she hadn't confessed. She tried to, but it seemed as though the words just wouldn't come. Finally she said, ''Lord Jesus, if Thou wilt help me, I will say it while we are at the supper table.''

She wished to say it to all of them, because it had been her Father's dish quite as much as her Mother's, and, deep down in her heart she felt she would show Herbert that being a Christian was not a weak thing to do.

During the evening meal she felt rather excited and nervous, and more than once felt Herbert's look of inquiry upon her face. The verse came to Marjorie with comforting reassurance, ''I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me.''

Suddenly she felt herself saying, ''Father—Mother—Herbert—there is something I want to tell you''—and she related to them the story of her terrible deceit and was freely forgiven. She also said that she was going to buy another dish for Mother as nearly like that one as possible.

When a moment later she went to her room to thank the Heavenly Father for helping her she felt as if a great weight had been lifted from her conscience.

After a while Marjorie went to the library to read. Herbert also was there and as she selected a book and relaxed in the chair to read he looked up and there was a serious look on his face.

''Marj, that was great of you.''

The girl said nothing, but there was a look of mingled surprise and gladness in her eyes.

''I mean it, you know I have always thought that religion was for just sissies and weaklings, but I have found out different. The way it looked it took real courage and lots of it to say that to all of us.''

''But,'' interposed the girl, ''I never could have done it if Christ hadn't helped me.''

''True. But just the same, you had to put forth some effort yourself. And, Sister, I have decided to become a Christian too.''

''Thank God,'' was all she could say.

Although the enemy often tried to make fun of Marjorie, and tried to make her wish she hadn't confessed at all, she was never sorry that she had taken that step. She knew that God on His throne was looking upon her heart with approval. And when, just two weeks after her decision, she witnessed her brother bow in prayer and meet Him who forgives sins, her joy knew no bounds.—The Missionary Worker.

DON'T YOU KNOW BETTER?

Don't you know better
Than to sit down and complain,
If you want those brighter days
To come your way again?
Gambling will not do it,
Shirking makes it worse,
Doubting is a drawback,
Worrying just a curse.

Don't you know better
Than to speculate in stocks,
And some black day, minus money,
Be left stranded on the rocks?
Buy gilt-edge bonds and mortgages,
Avoid the quick-rich bet;
Don't throw away your money,—
Better safety than regret.

Don't you know better
Than to squander golden days?
Be wise today and realize
That shirking never pays.
Work on with earnest purpose,
Push on through storm and stress;
Know that earnest labor
Will some day bring success.

A PRAYER FOR INVALIDS

For those on beds of sickness,
Or fettered by dread fear,
We ask Thee, loving God,
Our meek petition hear.

We pray that Thou wilt help
All those bowed down by grief,
That Thou in tender love
Wilt send them swift relief.

Give courage to the frail,
And strength unto the weak;
Hear those afflicted ones
Who peace and respite seek.

Dear God, we humbly pray,
That Thou good health wilt give,
To all Thy children dear,
And show them how to live.

—Grenville Kleiser.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Pinnacle.—We held our regular services Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The congregation welcomed with open hearts our former and new pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Hunter.

The following officials for the coming year were recently installed: Trustees, Messrs. S. P. Jones, T. O. Mickey, E. F. Stone, T. C. Jones and R. I. Culler; stewards, Messrs. W. B. Watson, I. N. Hunt, Jim Posey, T. O. Mickey, and Roger Spainhour; class leader, Mr. Lefi Watson; Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Kermit Wall; assistant superintendent, Mr. Ralph Hunt; church treasurer, E. F. Stone; church pianist, Mrs. Iris Wall; Sunday school pianist, Miss Blanch Wall; Sunday school secretary, Wesley Watson; assistant secretary, Tom Jones; reporter, Pauline Watson.

Sorry to note that Mrs. S. P. Jones is seriously ill.

There will be a Christmas tree and entertainment given at this church Friday night, December 22. Everyone is invited to come and enjoy the Christmas spirit with us.

PAULINE E. WATSON, Reporter.

West End, Thomasville.—Mid-week prayer meeting was held Wednesday night in the basement of the church at 7 o'clock.

Friday night, November 24, the Ladies' Aid met with Mrs. R. L. Binkley on More street at 7 o'clock. After the meeting the hostess served delicious refreshments to 24 old members and one new member and one visitor. The next meeting which will be the Christmas meeting, will be held at the home of Mrs. Tom Hamm on Myers street.

The people of West End were glad to get Rev. H. W. Bell back with them for another year. Mr. Bell brought a very interesting message Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He used as his text "I Sit Where They Sit."

First Church, Lexington.—We are delighted to have our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, return to this work for the sixth year. The people are unanimous in praise of him as pastor.

The Sunday school seems to be starting the new year right. Records show that the attendance was increased by 34 Sunday. At this service Mr. J. C. Russell was elected assistant superintendent of the Sunday school to succeed Oscar Koontz, who recently moved to Georgia.

The Ladies' Auxiliary, under the leadership of Mrs. O. F. Johnson, continues to do good work for the church and the community. Saturday evening they will serve a fish and oyster supper. The public is invited to take supper with them.

We regret very much to report that Mr. B. F. Everidge and family are moving to Kernersville. The Everidge's have been with us for the past eight years and have endeared themselves to each of us. Not only will we lose four good church members, but also a steward, an usher, and a pianist. Miss Lola Mae McCulloch will succeed Miss Jessie Everidge as pianist.

Saturday morning the residence and house furnishings of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Barger were completely destoyed by fire.

Miss Electa Jarvis has been confined to her home for the past several days suffering from an infected foot.

Fountain Place, Burlington.—Rev. N. G. Bethea began his fifth year at this church Sunday, November 26, with a sermon at 11 a. m We have one preaching service every Sunday

Conference found our treasurer's report in much better shape this year than last. We are hoping that it will be even better for the coming year.

Several of our members attended one or more services of the Conference at Thomasville.

Some time ago a Tither's League was organized in our church. It had its beginning in the Auman Bible Class. At the present there are about 25 members, and their aim is to get every person in the church to join Each person keeps his own individual record but meetings are held from time to time to discuss problems which come up and to keep all members interested.

We are very glad to have Miss Diadama Richards move her membership to Fountain Place. She comes to us from the Saxapahaw church.

The Christmas program committee, headed by Mrs. Lee Black, has already started working.

Miss Juanita Amick and her friend, Miss Harris, of Greensboro, were visitors here Sunday.

Haw River, Glen Raven Charge.—Mr. Pegg filled his regular appointment here yesterday, both morning and night. We are very glad to have him with us for another year. We are trying to start the Conference year off in such a way that we will be able to give a good account of ourselves at the next Annual Conference. The writer had the pleasure of attending the Conference and I think it was one of the best I have ever attended. I think it should be the motto of every church to do more for the interest of the kingdom this year than we have in the past.

We are glad to report that Mrs. C. P. Suits, who has been confined to her home for several weeks, was able to be at church yesterday.

Winston, First Church.—Our church is still unconscious from the blow received when it heard that Dr. and Mrs. Pritchard were being sent to Greensboro. They have been in our midst these three years, not as two individuals filling a vacancy, but as real soldiers; working hard, making friendships that will never end, leading a people in the right direction, and helping to make Winston-Salem a better place in which to live. These untiring efforts have sown good seed, the harvest is in its infancy, compared to the abundance of good results that will come from the splendid work of these two beloved persons. Good seed sown today may not bring results today, but to morrow will bring an abundance of results that may last forever. There are no words to express the loss we feel and the sorrow that comes to us in their going, but we pause to say good luck and kind remembrances from those of us left behind. We congratulate Calvary church, Greensboro, on having such a splendid incoming pastor, and we know they will welcome him and his copartner into their hearts and homes.

The little six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Ayres passed away Sunday afternoon. She had been ill about five days with diphtheria. We extend heartfelt sympathy to these parents.

Dr. and Mrs. Bates came to Winston-Salem Sunday afternoon and Dr. Bates delivered a splendid message at the 5 o'clock vesper service, this being his first sermon to the congregation of his new charge. Dr. Bates' theme was "Patience." Many helpful and interesting facts were brought out on this trait. Dr. Bates said "Ye have need of patience," speaking to his congregation and himself. If patience is exercised there's no reason why we shouldn't go forward under his guidance in the coming year. We welcome Dr. and Mrs. Bates and their family into our midst.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—Our hearts were made glad at the return of our faithful pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, who spoke to us Sunday p. m. on "Gratitude to God for Our Many Blessings." I often think of that wonderful song, "Count Your Many Blessings." I wish all our churches could use this song more, as it touches upon the truth so closely. Our church attendance has been very good

Our pastor has called a business meeting at the church Sunday at 8 p. m. (December 3). Hope all who are interested in the progress of God's work will be there. Our young people's society will also give a Missionary dialogue at 11 a. m. Sunday, December 3, entitled "Aunt Polly Joins the Missionary Society." We will have the president of our Woman's Work, Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer, to speak to us after the program. We are sincerely hoping for a large attendance.

Our Auxiliary has paid all dues up to March, 1934.

Mr. Burton Lashley was called to his reward November 22. Funeral services were held at Chestnut Ridge November 23 with a good congregation present. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones.

Bethel, Randolph Circuit.—We are very glad indeed to have Bro. Suits, who has been our pastor for the past three years, returned to the work for another year. His work is of a high standard. His messages are earnest and forceful. Our people appreciate his services and are glad to work with him. His sermon of November 26 was based on Genesis 5:24, "A Walk With God." It was organized as follows: Spiritual exercise, progress, nearness to God, knowing God, consciousness of God knowing us, His approval and a glorious terminal to life, or God taking us home. Certainly it was a very fine subject for us to consider at the beginning of a new year's work.

Our Sunday school has a very good attendance and there is much interest manifested. The Adult class is one of our largest. We find the separate rooms for our classes help in holding the interest at the class period. We have heat in all our classrooms but one, and are planning to heat that in some way before long.

Mr. Paul Pugh and Miss Allie Fogleman were married recently. We are glad to have Mrs. Pugh in our Sunday school.

Mrs. C. A. Anderson has been elected as treasurer for the Children's Home for our church.

The first quarterly meeting of our charge will be held at our church Saturday before the third Sunday in December.

We are hoping and expecting to have both a pleasant and profitable year's work.

Graham.—Due to the fact that our pastor, Mr. Auman, was suffering from a bad sore throat, Rev. G. W. Holmes filled our pulpit at the 11 o'clock service Sunday morning. He delivered a most inspiring message, which was enjoyed by a large congregation. We are always glad to have Mr. Holmes with us.

We feel that we are very fortunate to have Rev. and Mrs. J. Clyde Auman back again this year, and we greatly appreciate their faithfulness and hearty co-operation during the past three years.

In former years it has been a custom for the churches in Graham to join in a union service on Thanksgiving. But this year each church plans to have its individual service. Our service is to be held at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, the order of service to be wholly devotional.

We are looking forward to a successful year with the hope of loyalty from all members May everyone do his or her part!

Piney Grove, Denton Charge.—Our new pastor, Rev. J. T. Bowman, graduate of High Point College and a S. T. B. of Duke University, delivered his first message at Piney Grove last Sunday in a very impressive manner to a very attentive congregation. He chose as his subject one of the prize quotations of the great Missionary, St. Paul: "God liveth in me." This subject was handled in a very efficient and touching manner. If we will follow the teachings of St. Paul, as explained by our pastor, I believe God will live within us all.

We regret very much the leaving of our former pastor, Rev. Robert Short, and family, but our Heavenly Father always has an open field for His children. Though we regret his leaving, we feel that we are fortunate in having as his successor our young and able preacher, Rev. J. T. Bowman.

Orange Charge.—We arrived home from Conference Monday p. m., November 20th. That night the parsonage was stormed by people from Hebron church, who left for us many useful articles. Since then we have been remembered with fresh meat and other articles of food; for all of which we are deeply grateful.

We have been kindly received for the 10th time in succession. The work is starting off nicely. Have visited each church and held Thanksgiving services. Offerings have been taken for our Children's Home.

The first quarterly conference was held Saturday, December 2nd. President Andrews was present and presided over the conference. He gave us some helpful instruction. We were especially pleased to have him with us.

We are now in the midst of a campaign to clear up the parsonage debt of $1,000 during the month of December. This proposition has been approved by the parsonage trustees, also by the quarterly conference. It now goes to the churches with a definite amount to be raised by each church. Meetings are being held and plans adopted by each church for raising its part, all to be gathered together and brought to the Efland church December 31 at 11:30 a. m., where a public service is to be held and the parsonage mortgage burned.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

* * *

Gray's Chapel, Randolph Charge.—Our pastor filled his regular appointment Sunday morning and brought to us a very helpful sermon, using the 103rd Psalm for the Scripture reading, his text being taken from Deut. 1:6: "Ye have dwelt long enough in this mount."

We are glad to have Bro. Suits and his family back with us for another year, for to know them is to love them.

Sunday school and church attendance seem to be holding its own very well; however, we do not have the attendance we wish for.

Officers and teachers have been elected. We are now entering a new Conference year. I hope we may all be filled with a keen desire to press onward and upward to bigger and better things and make this one of the best years in the history of our church.

The Sunday school gave a thank-offering for the Children's Home Sunday. We hope this will be a benefit to the children even though it be small.

The first quarterly conference will convene at Bethel church on Saturday afternoon, December 16th, at 2 o'clock. All the official members are urged to be present.

MRS. HOBART LINEBERRY, Reporter.

English Street.—We are indeed glad to have Rev. C. H. Hill and Mrs. Hill back with us. We have learned to love them and would have regretted to give them up. He has returned with more determination than ever to make this one of English Street's most successful years, and we are all planning for it to be. The Sunday school has set its goal for 400 enrollment before the end of the year, and under the capable leadership of our new superintendent, W. T. Kennedy, we expect to reach it. Our pastor has promised a supper to the firs t class that secures 100 members. On last Sunday Kathleen Embler was elected as Herald reporter and Callie Loflin, Herald solicitor. We are going to try to put the Herald in every member's home. Our pastor brought us a good message Sunday morning, using as his text "Welcome Words That Comfort." He said that words fitly spoken were like apples of gold in pictures of silver. Words fitly spoken, or comforting kind words, do much to draw us closer to our brother. He also stated that words not fitly spoken, or evil, unkind words, could bring much destruction and would often wound our brother. He urged us all to try to speak kindly of our brother, overlooking his mistakes and ever cheering him on with a kind word.

On next Sunday the Chisolm girls will be with us, both morning and evening services. Also, on the following Sunday the pastor will preach to the children and will treat every one of them under the age of 15. The Senior Christian Endeavor will distribute baskets to the needy of the city on Thanksgiving morning along with other Endeavorers of High Point. There will also be a sunrise service at the Friends church that we plan to attend.

Our hearts have been made sad recently, for three of our members have been taken away: Mrs. Shary Clary, Miss Kate Phillips and little Dorothy Clary. The church feels a deep loss in the parting of these friends, but our loss is surely heaven's gain. Friends and relatives of these three have our most heartfelt sympathy.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Our new pastor, Rev. Mr. Vickery, preached for us yesterday at the 11 o'clock service; he brought us a very inspiring message. We are glad to have Mr. Vickery and his family on our charge, and we feel that if the people will co-operate with him this will be one of the best years on our work. We were very glad to have Rev. and Mrs. Bingham worship with us yesterday, and as they are moving away this week, we wish for them the very best of luck in their new home. We have learned to love Mr. and Mrs. Bingham and their dear little boy, and our hearts were sad to tell them good-bye.

Our delegate to Annual Conference, Mr. B. F. Morris, was taken to the hospital on Monday before Conference opened on Wednesday and operated on for appendicitis. He didn't get to go to Conference. We are very glad to have him back home and getting along nicely. His brother, Henry Morris, went to Conference in his place.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Littleton church Saturday, December 16th, at 2 o'clock. We hope every official member will be there to help lay plans for the year's work.

We were very glad to have Mr. Tom Carter, from Vaughan church, worship with us yesterday.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Asheville.—We were very sorry to lose Rev. J. Elwood Carroll as our pastor, but we congratulate Grace Church, Greensboro, on securing him as their leader. We hope his work there will prove even moe successful than here. A surprise Bachelor Shower was given him recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis Eller; a large number of friends and members of the church attended and enjoyed the evening with him.

A large audience was present Sunday, November 26, to welcome our new pastor, Rev. H. W. Maier. We feel we are fortunate in having him and Mrs. Maier as our leaders. We were very sorry the illness of Ms. Maier's mother pevented her being with us Sunday, and are hoping she can be with us soon.

A most interesting program was presented at the opening of Sunday school last Sunday by the Intermediate class, taught by Miss Margaret Fawcett. "A Thanksgiving Fantasy," written by members of the class, was given. The characters were Jack, aged 18, James Clouse; Jean, his sister, aged 16, Polly Gentry; a living picture of John Alden and Priscilla, Howard Charnock and Betty Marlowe. Jack and Jean were dissatisfied with their Thanksgiving, and had a dream in which the figures in the picture came to life, showing them that they had much to be thankful for, things that they had formerly taken for granted.

The evening service was conducted by the Woman's Auxiliary as their Thank-Offering service, with Mrs. J. S. Williams leading Special music rendered by Miss Fanny Miller, Miss Frances Rhodes, Mr. Howard Carter and Mr. Jarvis Eller, was enjoyed. A debate on "Resolved, That Missions are needed more at home than abroad," was debated, with Miss Adele Biebinger, of the M. P. church, upholding the affirmative and Mr. Paul Hyatt, of the First Presbyterian church, the negative. Miss Rhodes acted as chairman. The decision of the judges was two to one in favor of the negative. Pastor Maier talked for a few minutes about the workers in our Home and Foreign Mission Fields. When he had finished we felt as if we had been personally introduced to each of them.

The November Auxiliary meeting was held at the home of Mrs. H. L. Hanner with a good attendance. Mrs. Baker, president, conducted a most interesting and helpful meeting.

The Young Woman's S. S. class held their regular business and social meeting Friday evening at the home of Mrs. D. L. West. Mrs. Robey Wilson, vice-president, took charge in the absence of the president, Miss Mildred Younginer. Plans for the coming year were discussed and a pleasant social hour followed.

The Senior C. E. Society recently elected Miss Margaret Fawcett, president; Mr. Jarvis Eller, vice-president; Miss Mildred Younginer, secretary, and Miss Elvira Bryson as treasurer. The society is completing its plans to help in the entertainment of the Southwestern district C. E. Convention which meets here December 1-3 at the Christian church.

The Intermediate Society has chosen James Clouse president; Betty Marlowe, vice-president; Polly Gentry, secretary, and Adele Biebinger, as treasurer.

The installation service for the church officers was conducted by Rev. J. E. Carroll November 12, Mr. J. R. Moore was installed as church treasurer, succeeding Mr. G. M. Foster, who has given years of service in this capacity. REPORTER.

First Church, Thomasville.—It is with much sorrow that we record the tragic death of Mr. Ellis Jackson, who shot himself at his home on last Sunday afternoon about 2 o'clock. He was the father of Mr. Finch Jackson, a member of this church. Mr. Jackson is also survived by his widow and two other sons, Marvin and Lloyd Jackson, of this city. Funeral services were conducted from New Hope M. E. church in Randolph County. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Communion service was observed on last Sunday morning with 44 persons participating. A large per cent of these were young boys and girls.

For the evening service Pastor Madison chose as his subject, "Does It Pay to Be a Christian." Attendance was unusually good despite the rainy weather and they were well rewarded with an inspiring message from the pastor.

We are sorry to note that "Grandma" Loftin is not very well at this time.

The Thomasville Township Christian Endeavor Union met at the Hidelberg Reformed church on Thanksgiving morning. This was made all the more enjoyable by bringing something to be given to someone in need. Quite a large offering of produce was collected and given to help make the day brighter for others.

The 10 o'clock service, which is an annual event, was held at the Main Street M. E. church. Rev. M. O. Alexander, pastor of the First Baptist church, preached the Thanksgiving sermon. Practically every church in the city was represented.

Midweek prayer service was held last Wednesday evening with Mr. Ishmael Dorsett as leader. He gave the Sunday school lessons of this quarter in review. Members of his class were assigned a lesson to discuss. This was enjoyed by all present. Plans have been made to increase the attendance at the prayer services. It was suggested that each class be responsible for the order of worship, therefore attendance is necessary to give a worthwhile program. This seems to be helping quite a lot.

First Church, Charlotte.—We were delighted to have Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon, Miss Margaret Curry and a group of girls from the Children's Home with us on Sunday morning. The program given by the children was very sweet and impressive. These children, though small as they were, have certainly been well trained, as was evidenced by their ability to recite Scripture, sing songs and give recitations. Mrs. Dixon made a very interesting talk, which was supplemented with a few words by Dr. Dixon.

Dr. and Mrs. Dixon and Miss Margaret Curry are doing a wonderful work with these childen, a beautiful service for Him, who said "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto me." Every loyal Methodist Protestant should be proud of them and their good works and be inspired by their example to do all we can to help them carry on this great work and thus share their "joy of service." May every Sunday school in the Conference send at least a monthly contribution to OUR Children's Home.

On Thursday evening a very appropriate and well attended Thanksgiving service was held. Verses of Scripture on thanksgiving were recited by a group of small children, bearing the letters, THANKSGIVING, after which the pastor spoke brieby on "Why We Should Be Thankful."

J. C. Penny, one of the trustees of the Children's Home, spoke on "Some Needs of Our Children's Home," and urged us to give as liberally as possible to this great work. An offering was taken and gifts were brought forward to be sent to the Children's Home.

After this service, while the pastor and his wife were being detained in the church, cars were being unloaded and groceries, fresh and canned vegetables, fresh and canned fruit, jellies, preserves, pickles, towels, and an order for a turkey to be delivered the next day were being carried to the parsonage. Rev. and Mrs. Hendry were agreeably surprised and Bro. Hendry, out of his great, fatherly heart said, "Now, I hope this hasn't kept the children at the Home from receiving as much as they would have." After having been assured that these gifts had not diminished the contribution to the Children's Home, he expressed his grateful appreciation. Mrs. Hendry, in her very gracious manner, expressed her appeciation for these and for all that had been done for them during the past year.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor Society was hostess to the Mecklenburg County Union of Christian Endeavor last Friday evening. The local society gave the devotional program, one feature of which was a splendid talk by Miss Maryon Muse on "How Christ Meets the Needs of the World."

Chester Morrison, president of the Union, presided at the business session. With a beautiful and solemn candle-light installation service, officers of the Union were installed by the Rev. B. F. Yandle, pastor of St. Andrews Presbyterian church. After the meeting was adjourned a social hour followed and refreshments were served in the Junior Department of the church.

The Sunday school is going forward with increasing interesting and attendance. The Baraca class of 30 men, with R. M. McKennie as teacher is one of the outstanding organizations of the church school. Mr. McKennie, a devout Christian and a capable teacher, is doing a great work with this group of men. They have made great improvements in their classroom, by having it wired for lighting and have painted it. Through the efforts of our music director, J. W. Thomas, a piano has been purchased for the Baraca classroom. We appreciate the good work that is being done by this class.

The Young Men's Baraca class, with Grady Tadlock as president and teacher, has also made great improvement in its classroom by having it papered and the woodwork painted.

The Ever Ready Philathea class, with their most faithful and efficient teacher, Mrs. J. H. McCall had an almost perfect attendance record yesterday by having 17 out of 18 members present. This group of young women lives up to its name and is ever ready to serve the church whenever called upon to do substitute teaching, play the piano, or to serve in whatever capacity they are called upon to do. Many of our teachers and some department superintendents have gone out from this class. They have had their classroom papered and the woodwork painted and purchased new curtains for the windows, making theirs a beautiful and attractive room.

The Junior Department, with Miss Mary Shaw superintendent, is having very interesting devotional programs. By memorizing verses of Scripture for each letter of the alphabet the pupils take great interest in finding new verses and are thus encouraged to read their Bibles more.

We are very proud to note a much-increased attendance in this department. One class, with Miss Delores Penny, teacher, had six members two months ago. The class now has 17 members on roll, with 16 present yesterday.

Salem, Saxapahaw Charge.—As we start out on the new Conference year, we are very glad indeed we have Rev. W. M. Loy with us for another year. We are hoping that this will be the best year for us in our church work we have ever had. When everyone gets the idea in his head unless he does his part to make the church work a success it will be a failure. Then it is when we will get something done.

The new church officers have already been elected and each one is making a good start in his work.

Sunday school work is moving along nicely; attendance is fine.

Plans are being made in regard to a Christmas program. The date has not been set yet.

Since our last report two of our young people have married, Mr. Charlie Bradshaw and Miss Christine Tapp. The young couple was united in marriage by the pastor, Rev. W. M. Loy. We wish for them all the happiness life affords.

One of our old members, Mr. James M. Paris, is in Salisbury hospital. We trust he may soon be with us again.

Best wishes to the Herald.

Lexington, State Street.—State Street church has experienced a good many changes since the last report to the Herald. Dr. and Mrs. Maier have gone to their new work at Asheville and Dr. Johnson has entered into the work here.

Death has broken our ranks for the first time and taken a loved member, Mr. J. W Lindsay.

Many changes have been made among officers and teachers in the Sunday school and church.

We feel that in the going of Mr. Lindsay one of the best and most faithful of the members has gone. He was a charter member of the church and the first superintendent of the Sunday school, which office he filled well until his health gave way, and for that reason he resigned and was made superintendent emeritus and was superintendent emeritus until his death.

We feel that the going from among us of Dr. and Mrs. Maier means a great loss to the town of Lexington and great gain to the city of Asheville. These splendid people are so well known all over the Methodist Protestant denomination that it is not worth while to write at length concerning their worth. To say that we are grieved because of their going would express the sentiments of many hearts here.

Denton Charge.—I have visited all the churches on this charge except Mount Ebal, and in every one I have found a warm welcome and a splendid spirit manifested. My first appointment was with Canaan on the fourth Sunday morning in November. These good people gave me such a warm welcome that I immediately felt as if I had been with them for a long time. The attendance was fine for a rural church and I was deeply impressed with the large number of young people present for Sunday school and church services. There is no doubt agreat future is in store for this church. I was delightfully entertained in the home of Mr. Jeff Ward for dinner that day.

In the afternoon I attended Sunday school at Piney Grove and filled my appointment there also. Here the attendance was good also, with a very unusually large group of older people attending Sunday school and church services. These people seemed to be very much interested in Christ's work and were very attentive and responsive to the message given. I enjoyed spending Sunday night with Mr. Joshua Morgan and his family.

On the first Sunday in December I was glad to attend Sunday school and the morning and evening services at the Denton church. I was present at the Christian Endeavor service also. These are lovely people and have certainly given us a warm and hearty welcome in their midst. I find them deeply interested in the work of the church and are anxious to go forward in the work of the Kingdom. Large crowds attended the four services held at this church during the day. They were very attentive to the messages and manifested a splendid spirit. The men and women at this church are wide-awake in making their church and grounds beautiful. They have already done much work and have plans for doing much more This is a beautiful church and gives a splendid atmosphere for worship. These men and women have been very helpful and thoughtful in coming to the parsonage and helping us get furniture set up and things arranged ready for use. My wife and I are very grateful for the many deeds they have done.

On the first Sunday afternoon I filled my appointment at Cid church. Even though this is one of the smallest churches on the charge and in spite of the fact that it was raining Sunday afternoon there was good attendance for the service. I was deeply impressed with the fact that there were so many out and that such a good spirit prevailed among these people. They are planning to have a Christmas service and tree Saturday afternoon, December 23rd, at 2 o'clock.

I have visited all the churches on the charge except Mount Ebal, and am very anxious to visit there, but it will be two weeks before I get there. Am looking forward to meeting with these people the third Sunday afternoon in December.

An offering has been taken at some of the churches for the Thank-Offering for our Children's Home, and one will be taken at the other churches in the near future. We are hoping for a splendid response from all.

We feel that we couldn't have been sent to work with better people, and we are delighted to be here and labor for Him and with these good folk. May God abundantly bless and help us all in our efforts to forward His work here on earth. J. T. BOWMAN.

Spring Valley, Vance Circuit.—On the fourth Sunday night, Rev. J. W. Braxton, our beloved former pastor, preached to a large congregation, and as usual he preached a very helpful semon. Bro. Braxton has made many friends and is held in high esteem by all who know him. The members of Spring Valley church will always remember him as a loyal pastor, faithful friend, and cherished loved one, and regret very much that he was not returned to us for another year.

Rev. D. D. Broome, who comes to us from the Guilford Charge, moved on last Tuesday into the parsonage on North Garnett street, Henderson, N. C. Bro. Broome succeeds Bro. Braxton as pastor of Vance Circuit.

On Thursday morning at 7:30 o'clock we held a very impressive Thanksgiving service at Spring Valley. We were glad to have Bro. Braxton and Bro. Broome attend this service.

The young people of this community gave Mr. Braxton a social on Tuesday night at the home of Mr. Britt, and this was enjoyed by about 40 young people.

Misses Annie and Elizabeth Harris and C. B. Baskett entertained for Mr. Braxton on Thursday night at the home of the Misses Harris.

On Friday afternoon Bro. Braxton said farewell and left for Mount Pleasant Circuit, his new work. May God's richest blessings be upon him and his work.

Rev. Mr. Broome took up his duties as pastor on the first Sunday, preaching at New Hope at 11 a. m., Flat Rock, 2:30 p. m., and Spring Valley at 7:30 p. m., and was given a hearty welcome at all the churches. His sermons were enjoyed by all who attended.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely; also Christian Endeavor Society and Woman's Auxiliary, both doing splendid work.

May we use every effort for the advancement of the work of the Master and make this the best year in our history.

Friendship, Mount Hermon Charge.—We are delighted to have Rev. Mabry with us for another Conference year. We feel that we have closed a successful year's work with Pastor Mabry as our pastor. We feel that we are very fortunate in having him for another year. We ask God's richest blessings upon him fo the coming year.

Pastor Mabry opened the new year's work Sunday, December 3, by asking faithfully God's blessings upon the year's work. The Scripture was read from Acts 11:22-26. Text: "The disciples were called Christians first in Antioch." Acts 11:26. What is a Christian? Could you give a definition for a Christian that would fit your own life and at the same time involve the lives of others? There is a great difference in believing on Jesus Christ and in believing in Jesus Christ. It takes more than being a member of the church to be a Christian. When we believe on and in Jesus Christ we are willing to risk our lives in His hands. The faith of your mother will not save your soul. You may know all the vows and yet not know God. It is an individual decision for you. We must do a lot of living to show to the world that we mean to live right. Why were they called Christians in Antioch? Because their daily life among the people made them think of Jesus Christ. Therefore, they were nick-named Christians and mocked. Today the nick-name has passed and we find Christians to mean the best. Let your life so be that it will show to the world that you are a Christian. Sin is sin anywhere you come in contact with it. You must hate sin and love the right before you can be a Christion. What must I do to be a Christian? Is the question to ask yourself. Turn back to the nature of Jesus Christ. You have accomplished a lot when you can stand by your neighbor and say, "I am your friend." What are you and I doing to bring the world to the foot of the cross and accept Jesus Christ? Jesus Christ is your leader. May we so live that people will know that we are following Jesus Christ. A Christian, then, is one who believes on Jesus Christ. May God bless you in all of your thinking and acting throughout the coming year, is our pastor's prayer upon us through Jesus Christ our Lord.

We feel that this sermon was successfully heard. May God add His blessings to the preaching of His Word.

We are planning to have a Christmas tree. We trust that each and every one will have a merry Christmas.

The church is putting on a drive to raise Rev. Mr. Minnis' salary. The Missionary Society has taken the month of December. They have asked that one woman take the month and pay 50 cents, four take weeks and pay 25 cents, and 30 take the days and pay ten cents. This seems to be working very successfully.

We invite your attention again to the first quarterly conference to meet at Mount Hermon church Saturday, December 9, at 2:00. The purpose of the conference is to arrange tht financial program for the coming year. Everyone is urged to be present.

We are still doing work to improve our parsonage environment.

BEULAH COBLE, Reporter.

Worthville.—We are indeed glad to have Rev. Joel B. Trogdon and Mrs. Trogdon with us for another year. We feel that he has done us lots of good throughout this past year.

Our Sunday school met December 3 with an attendance of 98. A special Thanksgiving offering was taken for the Children's Home which amounted to $20.00. The attendance Banner and the Collection Banner went to the kiddies, which made them very happy.

Our church and Sunday school seem to be running along smoothly. We are having mid-week prayer meeting each week. We hope to do more good work during the coming year than we have in the past.

MRS. LEONARD WARD, Reporter.

Caroleen.—Our Sunday school is getting along very nicely.

We are very proud because Rev. J. D. Morris was returned to us for another year.

The business board of the church met last Satuday night. We had a good attendance and a good report. We are planning on painting the church inside and out. We have already raised $18.00 on painting within the past three weeks. We are looking forward to a successful year.

S. C. TATE, Reporter.

Siler City Church.—We are at the beginning of a new Conference year, trusting we may all do our part and make this the best year in the history of our church. We are truly grateful to our delegate and the Annual Conference for sending our old pastor back to us for another year. He was with us the fourth Sunday night, but was too hoarse to talk much. Rev. F. B. Peele, of the First M. E. Church, was in the congregation and came to his aid by kindly consenting to make a short talk. This was a fine talk and was enjoyed by us all.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the church on Wednesday afternoon, the 22nd, with 10 members and two visitors, Mrs. Clarence Durham, this city, and Miss Bettie Smith, of Liberty. The meeting was in charge of the president, Mrs. L. L. Woody. After a short business meeting Circle No. 1 presented a program on Thanksgiving. After reading the 118th Psalm in unison, Miss Minnie Cooper told the story of the first Thanksgiving. Several pieces were read by other members, after which Miss Bettie Smith read a story, "This Thanksgiving." Mrs. Woody closed with an appropriate prayer. We were very glad to have the visitors with us.

In the absence of our pastor, who was sick with a cold, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Curtis, of Belmont, conducted our mid-week prayer service Wednesday night, the 22nd. Mr. Curtis had never been with us before and he was very much impressed with the goodly number present and I'm sure we were very glad to have him with us, and each one enjoyed his talk very much. We hope they can come again. Wednesday night before Thanksgiving Mr. and Mrs. Isley were with us and we were favored with an appropriate Thanksgiving message. A thank-offering collection was taken at this time for the Children's Home; also the first Sunday a collection was taken for same amounting to $22.62.

The third Sunday was a good day for us. We had 93 in Sunday school and all officers and teachers were present. Mr. Isley was with us with another of his inspiring messages; also our delegate to Annual Conference, Miss Kara Andrew, was present and gave us a splendid report on the Conference proceedings. She gave a brief outline of every service and this was told so vividly we felt like we had been there. We feel very gateful that we could send our pastor and delegate to Conference with all claims paid in full, thus putting us on the honor roll.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Will Andrews, of Bonlee, in our congregation Sunday.

Miss Alice Tally and Mrs. A. E. Holleman, of Bonsal, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Tally. We were glad to have them worship with us in Sunday school and church service.

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Stone and son, Hubert, went to Richmond last Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving with their son, Evans, returning Sunday.

Mrs. R. B. Campbell is on the sick list. We hope she may soon be restored to health. Special prayer was offered for her Sunday.

MRS. J. A. COOPER, Reporter.

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—On last Sunday we were glad to welcome our new pastor, Rev. Mr. Grant, who gave us a good impression of himself in his first sermon. He gave us a wonderful message on the subject, "Evidences of An Abundant Life," using for the Scripture John 15:1-5. There are many evidences of the abundant life. You may know of it by the true Christian life of a person. A person who is a Christian from the inside and not just on the outside. Then in the life of an old Christian you can see the life hereafter. Love presents one of the greatest evidences for the eternal life. Such suggestions as these Rev. Mr. Grant gave for the evidences of an abundant life.

The Ladies' Auxiliary is seating the church. More than half the church has already been seated and the other benches have been ordered. We are thankful to everyone who contributed toward the getting of them.

On the Sunday before Thanksgiving a Thanksgiving program was given by the two small classeses as follows: One-hundredth Psalm, Grace Hayes; Prayer Song, Aileen Swaim; First Thankgiving, Janie Jewel Craven; November, Catherine and Donna Swaim; Repeat Thanksgiving, Junior McDaniel; Thank the Lord, Wandsa Garner; Keep Pressing On, Evelyn Swaim; Song, Little Payne sisters; Thank God, Ruth Murphy; Be Thankful, Murlene and Mary Grace Cecil; Thanksgiving Is Here, three boys; Thanksgiving Day, Allen Swaim; A Psalm of Thanksgiving, Evelyn Smith. Thirteenth Chapter of First Corinthians, Annie Lee York; Thanksgiving, Lois Swaim; Song, Craven Twins; A Good Thanksgiving, Mary Ellen Payne; Reading, Mrs. Byerly; Benediction, Grace Moore.

A Christmas program is being prepared. It has not been decided just when it will be given.

REPORTER.

Concord.—We are glad to have our pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, back with us again, and we hope that everyone will co-operate with him in making this his best year.

We had 314 present at Sunday school, showing a slight gain over last Sunday.

Our preaching services are always good, and well attended. The Lord's Supper was observed at the close of the 11 o'clock service.

The evening service was conducted by Rev. J. L. Love.

A very impressive Thanksgiving play was presented last Sunday evening by the Intermediates.

The Young People's class is having an oyster supper at the church Thursday, and everyone is looking forward to having a good time.

The Beginners Department is having a birthday and farewell party for little Ann Lippard, who is leaving for the orphanage. We are sorry to give little Ann up, but we know that she will be happy in her new home with her little brother and sister, who have been there for some time.

MRS. RALPH WADDELL, Reporter.

Halifax Charge.—We moved to the parsonage on our new work Wednesday before Thanksgiving. Having arrived late Wednesday evening made Thanksgiving day a rather busy day for us, though not too busy to remember our Heavenly Father in thanksgiving for the many blessings received during the past year. Enough kindness was shown us Thanksgiving day by the people of Brinkleyville to cause us to be merry and thankful that God had sent us among such kind and hospitable people. Brother N. M. Harrison and family were visiting at his mother's, and they were among those to show to us such gratuitous kindness. We shall always be grateful to all these good people for our kind reception to the Halifax charge.

The first Sunday in December we went to our first appointments. The morning appointment was at Eden. There we found a pleasing congregation who received us in the spirit of brotherly love. This church appears to be blessed with competent leaders, which means so much to the growth and progress of any church. We went home and dined with Brother J. D. Hardy and family. We enjoyed being in their home very much. They are very loyal Methodist Protestants.

In the afternoon we filled our first appointment at Union. The congregation there was gratifying considering that they have but a small membership. The ptople there were attentive listeners, and an inspiration to the pastor. There were many evidences that the people of this church are greatly interested in their Master's business.

When we left North Davidson charge we left a good people who stood by us even at the cost of great sacrifice. They were never so perplexed by the trials and hardships of the past two years to forget the needs of their pastor and family. We shall never forget them, and we pray God's richest blessings upon them and their new pastor.

Even though we enjoyed our work very much on the North Davidson charge, yet we feel sure that we are going to enjoy our new work with an equal degree of pleasure. We found the parsonage in a very desirable place to live, and in a fairly good state of repair. The members of the charge have already assured us that they will do what they can to improve, beautify and supply whatever is needed in the way of furnishings for the parsonage. This we appreciate very much.

May our endeavors here mean added strength to our charge and growth to the Church Invisible, is our prayer.

O. C. LOY.

Lebanon.—Our new Conference year is starting hopefully. Attendance is good; our various organizations are functioning well; and a general spirit of co-operation and progress prevails.

Our Thanksgiving service was held this year on Wednesday night. We joined our Baptist neighbors of the North Main Street church in a union service held in their church. The church was well filled and the service was pleasing and edifying.

We will make our Thanksgiving offering to the Home on next Sunday. Previous announcement has been made, and our people will come prepared to make this offering.

On Wednesday night of this week our board of stewards will meet to make plans for handling our budget for the new year. A weekly budget is being talked. This seems to be possible for this church. If our stewards succeed in putting this into operation, it is a safe guess that they will have no deficits to make up at the end of the year. That would certainly be a very gratifying experience from many angles. At any rate, I am going to turn prophet, and predict that Lebanon will be an honor roll church next fall.

For a number of years our congregation has been thinking and talking "Hut." The need of this housing addition to our church plant seems to be recognized by everyone. Some money for this purpose has been accumulated already, and the indications are that our people have a mind to go forward at once with this enterprise. From a physical standpoint nothing could be more promotive of our work.

We should like to compare notes with the brethren on "poundings." The Lebanon folks know just how to do it. If any pastor wants a proof of this just let him link up with this church. But please don't do it for a few years.

Well, they came, a whole congregation of them, on last Wednesday night, and left us with a most generous and varied supply of just the things that a pastor's family needs, ranging from money to matches. And it did not stop with the first installment. Important and appreciated additions have come in at different intervals since.

Of course we can not give names nor items. We wish that were possible. But it was a generous pounding, and was participated in by a large number of our people. And to say that we are grateful mildly expresses our appreciation. May the Father of us all graciously reward these friends, and help us to show our appreciation in service.

The pastor and his family are grateful to the Conference, and to this church, for the privilege of continuing another year in this pastorate. We enter upon the work with hopes high for a good year.

It was a pleasure to have the Mechanicsville Lodge, J. O. U. A. M., worship with us in a body last Sunday night. We shall welcome their return.

S. W. TAYLOR.

New Salem, Randleman Charge.—Another Conference year has passed. We can not change its record, but we can probably make a better record for the year of 1934.

We are indeed glad to have our same pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, assigned to us for another year. We are fortunate to have the service of this good man. I am sure that we as member of his churches can show our appreciation of his service much more the ensuing year than in the past. We can, above all, attend every one of the sermons, and we might also bring a friend with us. Let's try it.

Our Sunday school is doing very well, and I think much good is being done. However, our attendance is too small.

We still hold our prayer services every Sunday evening.

One of our members, Mr. J. H. Skeen, who underwent a serious operation at the Clinic Hospital in Greensboro, returned home a few days ago very much improved.

Theron Jarrett, one of ou Sunday school boys who underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Randolph Hospital, Asheboro, is able to be out again.

Mr. Albert Hinshaw and Miss Ruth Varner were married recently in Danville, Va.

Since our year has just begun, there is not so much to report; probably next time we will have more news.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. R. F. WARD, Reporter.

Shiloh C. E. Society, Shiloh Charge.—The C. E. Society of Shiloh is still a wide-awake organization. Our attendance is not near so good as it was during the summer months, but we are hoping to continue to do the work set before us the best we can. The lessons for this quarter have been very helpful and well discussed by the members and their leaders.

Our C. E. Society, with the able leadership of its president, Mr. Protus Koonts, and our ex-president, Mr. Ray Leatherman, reached it goal financially for the past Conference year. We feel proud of a group of young people who are so enthusiastic about the work of the church. We congratulate each and everyone of them who have helped to make the past year so successful, not only in a financial way, but in a spiritual way also.

We were indeed glad to have some of our former members with us Sunday and Sunday night. We say former members, because they are not able to be with us every Sunday, but we still feel as if they are one of us, because we know they are interested in the work here. They were Mr. Fred Berrier and Mr. Clifford Shoaf, both of Richmond. Fred and Clifford, we're always glad to see you; come whenever possible.

In this, the beginning of a new Conference year, we are experiencing something that we haven't experienced in nine years—that of giving up our beloved pastor, Rev. Mr. Troxler. Mr. Troxler, we will miss you and your family. You have meant much to us, but every cloud has a silver lining. Even though we regret to give up Bro. Troxler and family, we welcome our new pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, and family into our community and church. Our prayer is that we will go forward co-operating with him and he with us as we have formerly done. We hope that the C. E. Society will not be the least bit below his expectations. May I say, we the C. E. Society of Shiloh church heartily welcome Rev. and Mrs. Ridge and their family into our meeting? May we be united in Christ, because "where there is unity there is power."

Guilford Charge.—We have been received very kindly by the people of this charge, and feel sure we will like here. Mr. Williams filled two of his appointments last Sunday morning, Vickory at 9:45 and Fairfield at 11 o'clock. We had good congregations at both places. After the services we were invited to the home of Bro. John Suits for dinner and there we enjoyed a wonderful feast.

Mr. Geyer, a neighbor and an M. E. member, gave us a nice chicken for our Thanksgiving dinner, which was very much appreciated.

T. A., Jr., our 11-year-old son, had two very serious heart attacks the day we moved and we were advised by High Point doctors to keep him out of school and that we must sit around and rest. I want to say that he is a great reader and if any of you who read this have any good books for a boy of his age, when passing through Jamestown, N. C., please leave them at the post office and your name and address and we will gladly return them. Many thanks.

The same plan of appointments will be adhered to as last year. They are as follows: First Sunday, Vickory, 9:45 a. m.; Fairfield, 11 a. m.; second Sunday, Mitchell's Grove, 11 a. m.; Hickory Grove, 2:30 p. m.; third Sunday, Fairfield, 9:45 a. m.; Vickory, 11 a. m.; fourth Sunday, Hickory Grove, 11 a. m.; Mitchell's Grove, 7:30 p. m.

I feel sure we are going to work together for a successful year for the kingdom of God. I want to say that on Wednesday after Conference Bro. Love and Bro. Hudson, of Roberta, carried Mr. Williams to Charlotte, and dressed him up with a new suit; also gave the writer $4.60. We want to thank each one that took any part in these gifts.

The first quarterly meeting of Guilford charge will be held on Saturday night before the third Sunday at Fairfield at 7 p. m.

MRS. T. A. WILLIAMS.

Pilot Church, Pinnacle Charge.—We are glad to have Mr. Hunter return to this church for another year. Sunday was our preaching day, and Mr. Hunter filled his appointment, preaching a good sermon.

We have had a very successful year in every respect. Of course there is room for improvement and we hope that every member may do his best to make the church stronger in some way. In building up the church we are helping to build up the community and to make it a better place.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. We have had a larger enrollment, but the interest is unusually good, as most revery member is a regular attendant.

We have been doing several things to arouse more interest in our Sunday school. On October 21 we went on a picnic to Guilford Battleground. The children seemed to enjoy the trip very much, and also the older people reported a good time. In visiting a place like the Battleground we hope that each child as he gazed on the monuments of great men was inspired to live lives that will be as a monument that will ever be remembered. We realize we are not as the flower that blooms by the wayside, but that what men do lives after them. We hear much about the depression, but as we gazed on the table that day we were made to forget the things we didn't have and be thankful for the mony things we did have.

Miss Ola Dezarn, teacher of the card class, gave a party in honor of her class on October 14. Miss Ola is a good teacher and always enjoys doing something for the little folks.

Little Annie Mae Allen, a member of our Sunday school who had the misfortune of getting her leg broken by being run over with an automobile, has recovered sufficiently to be removed from the Mount Airy hospital. It will be several months before she will walk again., her many friends will regret to learn. Her classmates miss her and hope she will soon be with them again.

We have bought new song-books for the church and are practicing singing most every Wednesday night.

North Davidson. — Thanksgiving Day brought to us another moving experience, with fine weather. On Wednesday we went over to the parsonage, and found Bro. Loy moving to his new work. We also found a good number of the Canaan folks cleaning off the grounds for a Thanksgiving program and decorating the church for the event. It was a most impressive service. The pastor, when he entered the church, wondered why so many farm products had been brought inside. After one of the best services I ever attended in thanks to God the Sunday school superintendent announced that the pastor would take charge of the products, and they helped carry them to the parsonage. We can't say in words how much this was appreciated. Another deed of kindness was expressed by Mr. Weavel, and Mr. Barrier, by moving us. Several other members were on hand to help place the belongings in the parsonage.

I have filled three appointments: First at Mount Pleasant. Here we had an impressive service and were met with a spirit of co-operation and welcome. The kindness of these people was generous. We are hoping to have a good program Christmas.

The next appointment was at Canaan. Here we found a welcome spirit of friendship. These folks are in earnest about the master's business, as well as the Mount Pleasant folks.

On Sunday afternoon we found a good number in Sunday school at Spring Hill. There was a large audience for the preaching service. Here we found a good spirit of co-operation. Spring Hill will have a Christmas program. So will Canaan.

We are sure that all of the Sunday schools are progressing nicely so far as we can see. It is a pleasure to work with people who are interested as we feel these people are.

Blessings upon the editor and the Herald readers.

First Church, High Point.—A beautiful wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Allison Davis, 232 Woodrow Avenue, on Friday evening, November 24, when the eldest daughter of the home, Miss Willie Davis, and Rev. Donald Williams Conrad, pastor of the Moravian church, Greensboro, were united in marriage, the officiating minister being Bishop J. Keneth Pfohl, of Winston-Salem. Just prior to the ceremony a program of lovely music was rendered by an uncle of the groom, Howard C. Conrad, of Winston-Salem, who sang "Because," and "I Love You Truly," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Clyde Shore, of Winston-Salem. In the living room an improvised altar, banked with ferns and palms and interspersed with white lilies and cathedral candles, formed a lovely setting for the impressive ceremony. The bride entered on the arm of her father, William A. Davis, and at the altar met the groom, who was attended by his best man, Rev. Gordon Spaugh, of Winston-Salem. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Helen Davis, who wore a handsome gown of pink crepe banded with blue fox fur; her flowers were pink roses. The bride was beautiful in her wedding gown of white satin with white fur-trimming, fashioned with a court train. She carried a showed bouquet of Bride's roses and Lilies of the Valley. Following the ceremony an informal reception was held. In the dining room from a beautifully appointed table, with handsome lace cover and centered by pink roses and snapdragons, delicious ice cream, cake and salted nuts were served by Misses Frances Taylor, Diane and Margaret Chandler, Dorothy Dean Davis, Alice Chandler, of High Point, Martha Jane Tugwell, of Greensboro, and Inez Stamper, of Pulaski, Va. After the wedding reception the bridal pair left for a honeymoon trip, and after December 6 will be at home in the Dolly Madison Apartment, Greensboro. The bride is pretty and attractive; she received her education in the local city schools and Woman's College, Greensboro. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Conrad, of Winston-Salem; was educated at George Washington University, Washington City, and at Moravian Theological Seminary, Bethlehem, Penn. Since his graduation he has served as pastor of the Moravian church of Greensboro, and is the author of a recently published book, "The Golden Censer." A large circle of friends here, in Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Kernersville, Greensboro and throughout the state join in happy wishes and joyous congratulations to this popular and consecrated young minister and his charming bride.

On the following Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride on North Main street, another pretty and impressive marriage was celebrated when Miss Elizabeth Reitzel, daughter of late Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Reitel, became the bride of Mr. George Wilbur Urwick, of High Point. The bride's pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, was the officiating minister, and the vows were spoken before an improvised altar of palms, fens, and floor vases of chrysanthemums in the living room. The bride, a tall, slender blonde, was unusually attractive in an afternoon gown of rust chiffon velvet; she wore a small hat and accessories of brown, and a shoulder corsage of gardenias. Immediately after the ceremony the newly wedded pair left for a short honeymoon, after which they will make their home here. Mrs. Urwick is an attractive and lovable girl, the younger daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Reitzel of blessed memory in First church. She was born and reared here, was educated at Salem Academy, St. Mary's, Raleigh, and High Point College, and is a member of the Junior Service League. The groom is a son of Mrs. A. T. Wishart, of High Point, and was formerly a resident of Louisville, Kentucky. He attended school at San Marcos, Texas, and Greenbrier Military School at Greenbrier, West Virginia. For the past year he has lived in High Point, where he is connected with the Gary Beverage Company. These young people have a wide circle of relatives and friends, who extend happy felicitations and sincere good wishes for a long, useful, and prosperous life.

At a pretty party at the home of Mrs. Theodore R. Ballard on Howell street on Friday evening, November 24, the engagement of Mrs. Ballard's sister, Miss Lalah Shepard, to Mr. Oliver Poindexter was announced, the marriage to take place early this month. The party was in the nature of a kitchen shower, and the bride-to-be received numerous useful gifts. The home was decorated with white snapdragons and Bride's roses, and at the conclusion of interesting games dainty refreshments of ice cream in the shape of bridal slippers and lilies in white and yellow were served to 24 guests. The dining room table was artistically decorated with yellow chrysanthemums, Bride's roses, and Lilies of the Valley, with a three-tiered bride's cake in the center. The cutting of the cake afforded much merriment.

A delightful Thanksgiving service was held in connection with the mid-week prayer meeting on Wednesday evening before Thanksgiving Day, when the attendance was large. The minister made a lovely talk on "Thanksgiving in Times Like These," and many personal prayers were made by those present. Several contributions were taken for the Children's Home, and W. C. Ferree, Jr., sang a pretty solo.

On last Sunday morning, after a lovely prelude on the organ by Miss Beulah Moton, the pastor, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered a very hopeful and inspiring message on the theme, "The Progressive Christian," from the text in Philippians 3:13, "But this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." He said that discontent brings progress. When we are willing to sit back in complacency, and take things easy, we are in danger. One of the vital steps for the church is to forget the past with all its blunders, failures, mistakes, sin, and heart-ache, and look forward to the future. Somebody said that making good is measuring up to the expectation of our friends. Is the religion of the Lord Jesus the main issue of our lives? A challenge to this church is morning is to go forward, and a beckoning future awaits us. At this service the anthem, "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee," was rendered by the choir, and Miss Anne Robbins sang the solo part very sweetly.

On Sunday the Every Member Canvas was made, and many members voluntarily went to the pastor's study to meet the stewards and make a pledge for the coming year, while others were called on in their homes between 2 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

The members of the congregation extend loving sympathy to Mrs. W. A. Davis on account of the death of her father, Mr. W. C. Dean, who passed away on Wednesday at his home on Fourth street after an illness of a year. The last rites were conducted from the home on Thanksgiving Day by Rev. W. C. Roach and Rev. R. I. Farmer. Pall bearers were Henry Newman, Paul Davis, Robert Davis, G. L. Webber, Carl Fields and Grady Swiggett. Burial was made in Oakwood cemetery.

The different circles of the Woman's Auxiliary held meetings in various homes on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Circle No. 7 will meet Tuesday evening with the chairman, Mrs. N. P. Yarborough, at the College.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Lawton Hill and charming little daughter, Barbara Anne, of Graham, have returned home after spending the Thanksgiving holidays with Mr. Hill's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Hill.

Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Farmer, Leonard Koonce, John Easter, and Luther Medlin motored to Asheville Thursday. Mr. Koonce and Mr. Easter attended the Older Boys' Conference, while Mr. Medlin and Rev. Mr. Farmer addressed the Northwestern District C. E. Convention. They returned home Friday.

Miss Dorothy Rankin went to Westminster, Md., to spend Thanksgiving at the College, and from there went to New York to visit friends.

From First Church, Winston-Salem, to Calvary, Greensboro.—On Friday morning, December the first, the big moving van pulled out from our home in Winston-Salem and before noon our property was safely housed in Calvary parsonage in Greensboro. Just before noon Rev. T. F. McCulloch came and invited us to his home for lunch. On arriving there we were very much delighted to find Miss Velna sufficiently recovered from her recent illness to go with us to the table and enjoy a good meal. Soon after noon we returned to the parsonage and began to set our house in order. That afternoon Joseph Coble, Calvary's ministerial student who was home from High Point College, came and put up the aerial for the radio and connected it up, so we were soon in touch with the outside world. When we tuned in on the local station we found that that station is a part of the Columbia chain, the same as the station at Winston-Salem, so in this respect we can hardly tell that we have moved. Then, too, we listen sometimes to the morning devotions at Winston-Salem, so again we do not feel so far away. On Saturday Brother Sullivan came and put the big heatrola in place and connected it up and within a short while we had all the inside doors thrown wide open and we were again comfortable. The parsonage here is a splendid house, located just the right distance from the church, and we are expecting to enjoy it immensely.

Sunday was a splendid day with 168 in Sunday school, 136 in morning church service and 70 in evening service, even though it was rainy. There was also a splendid attendance in C. E. Sunday evening. Last evening it was our privilege to attend the Business Women's Circle meeting and there we found 22 members and a few visitors. This evening the first quarterly conference will meet, so we are trying to get an early start. As I mingle with the people here it is a great pleasure to hear the people speak so highly of Brothers Gerringer and Bates, the only two pastors the church has had. Both of them seem to have done good work here and I am expecting to build upon the foundation laid by them.

It was such a pleasure at Winston-Salem to have Rev. C. H. Whitaker in the services. Here we are doubly fortunate in having Rev. T. F. McCulloch, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, and Rev. J. F. McCulloch, our good editor, as a part of my flock. I am sure this will add to the richness of my pastorate.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Kannapolis.—We are starting a new Conference year. May we enter it with a fuller determination to do more for the Lord and His works in the future than we have done in the past. Let us all pause to count our blessings.

Our Sunday school is doing fine, but there are some that could come a little more regularly and when YOU are there that's one more.

We have good church attendance morning and evening, but they can easily be increased, too. It's lots of encouragement to see the interest the young people are taking in the church work and may we older ones help them all we can. We are exceedingly glad that the Conference assigned Rev. Mr. Morris to us for another year. He has been a great help to the church and community. He has sent or will send each member of this church a form letter, as follows:

"Dear Co-Laborer:—Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ. I Cor. 1:3, in whose name I greet you and in the name of His holy church. For the second consecutive year it has been God's good pleasure to call me, through the members of this church, to service among you in the capacity as your pastor. Gladly, yet humbly, do I return to labor with you, and I do earnestly covet your prayers for me personally and for the welfare of the church. The church needs you, and you need the church. These are the days in which the church is being sorely tried and tested. Our church needs your earnest support, not only financially, although this is an absolute necessity, but likewise your prayers and your profound interest. Your presence at all church services is personally coveted by me. Will you prove loyal to yourself, your church pledge, and to God, and place your shoulder to the wheel in order to make this year the best in the history of our church? Last year is a closed book. The present and future are at our disposal for us to accomplish much or to accomplish nothing. Past blessings are not sufficient for the future. Neither will the success of the past year tide us through this year. It is in your hands, largely, to determine the success or failure of our church this year. What will be your verdict? We need your help and co-operation in the various enterprises which will merit our attention from time to time during this year. If you can't pay, then pray. If you can't say anything good, for a particular program, please refrain from criticism. And "I beseech you therefoe, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Romans 12:1.

What should be our aims for this year?

1. To enlist one hundred percent of our members as regular attendants at our church services.

2. To enlist one hundred per cent of our members as financial contributors to the maintenance of our church and benevolent interests.

3. To lead many souls to Christ. This we term evangelistic and is the most important of all.

4. To bring others into church thereby increasing our present membership.

5. To pay all claims in full, both locally, and those of Conference interests.

6. To in some manner provide Sunday school rooms for the use of our Sunday school. These are all worthy aims and should constitute our major aims for this year. They are not beyond our realization if each member will do his or her part. God will crown our efforts with success.

At all times please remember that I am at your service and am anxious to help you in whatever way I can. So don't be afraid to call on me at any time. May God richly bless you and protect and prosper you.

Yours in the service of Christ,

C. P. MORRIS, Pastor.

The Ladies' Aid held their regular monthly meetings on Monday, December 4, at 7 o'clock. Circle No. 1 met with Mrs. J. V. Dwiggins, with 12 members present. After the business hour refreshments were enjoyed. Circle No. 2 met with Mrs. C. E. Gabriel, with eight old members, two new members and six visitors, after the business was transacted a social hour was enjoyed. We had the pleasure of receiving one new member to our church Sunday, December 3, Miss Alma Braswell coming to us from the M. E. church. We gladly welcome her.

Winston-Salem, First Church.—Force of habit almost made me write Calvary, but I did manage to locate myself before I had to scratch out anything. Brother Pritchard and I passed each other last Friday, doing something we had never done before—exchanging pastorates. I hope he is as well pleased as I am. If so, he is happy. I wish him all success.

In his letter from Winston-Salem in last week's Herald, Brother Pritchard said he believed he was the first preacher in the Conference to be pounded since the new year started. It was mighty hard on the folks here to have to do it over again so soon, twice in two weeks. But I believe they did about as well pounding the new preacher as they did pounding the old. And I'm willing to wager these folks are about the only ones who have done that—pounded two preachers within two weeks. And I am willing to make another wager—that I am the only preacher in the Conference that led his own pounding. (The folks caught me unawares while I was attending a Christian Endeavor business meeting at the church, got me back to Bro. Millaway's next door on the pretext that there was a couple to be married—so rare an event in my experience that I got all flustrated—and then made me head the procession.

We are having our first quarterly conference tonight. We are hoping that a good many plans for the furtherance of the work here will come out of our meeting. I have hardly been here long enough to be able to say much about the situation, but I am delighted with what I have seen, and most especially with the fact that there is a fine body of laymen, capable and experienced, who take hold and go forward. Where that condition obtains there cannot but be a successful pastorate. C. W. BATES.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—At the 11 o'clock service last Sunday, our pastor, Dr. Taylor, brought a splendid message to his congregation. His text was "I Am Ready," words of Paul, found in Acts 21:13. The leading thought in this fine sermon was "The Ready Christian," ready at all times to pray, to sing, to work to be instant in season and out of season, always abounding in the work of the Lord. There are certain noticeable qualities in a ready Christian. Paul, a ready Christian, was a new man from the day of his conversion until the last day of his earthly life. An experience of forgiveness transformed his thought. He knew Christ as a personal Savior. He was a Christian with a purpose. Christians don't drift. They don't acquire religious experience by accident. They keep in harmony with the purposes of God. A ready Christian may be counted on for cooperation, financial support of the church, willing service, and individual testimony to the glory of Jesus Christ.

We were pleased to have worship with us in the evening the Mechanicsville Junior Order. Dr. Taylor's subject at this hour was "The Greatest Thing One Great Man Ever Did." This great man referred to was Nicodemus, and the large congregation present to hear Dr. Taylor listened with much interest.

On next Sunday our pastor will read a statement of the transactions of our church, the organiational and financial activities. We trust there will be present as nearly as possible every member of our church. As a matter of pide and in order to be informed regarding church activities each member should know these things. At both services next Sunday a thank-offering will be received for Our Children's Home. Either cash, or substance, is acceptable.

On next Sunday also, the children of the Sunshine Circle will meet in the S. S. room for their memory work and offering. May the parents please take note of this and see that the children attend at that hour.

There will be another treat for the children in the form of a four-minute sermon on the third Sunday at 11 o'clock.

On Wednesday night of last week our people joined the North Main Street Baptist congregation in a Thanksgiving service. Immediately after the service, a goodly number of about fifty persons went to the parsonage and enjoyed pounding the preacher.

The newly-organied Junior C. E. Union of the city held a very impressive candle-light installation service Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the First M. P. church with about 30 members present. Rev. Roy 1. Farmer, who installed them, entered through a door at the side of an improvised platform of ivy and tapers, lighted at intervals in the background. Those to be installed entered from the back of the room. The officers were presented by Miss Myrtle Davis, Junior C. E. superintendent of the city. Martha Hayworth conducted the devotionals. The following officers were installed: President, Eleanor Welch; vice-president, Willie Edwards, secretary, Irene Harris; pianist, Doris Koonce; program chairman, Arlene Leviner; membership chairman, Margaret Lee; social chairman, P. M. Caudle; press chairman, Frances Cappridge.

During the services soft music was sung by a hidden choir. A prelude was played by Miss Doris Koonce, pianist, and Miss Eleanor Welch, violinist. Shirley Welborn and Irene Harris sang a duet. A sweet spirit of love prevailed throughout the service, which was much enjoyed by all present.

On Thanksgiving morning the usual sunrise service took place at the Central Friends church on South Main street. Both our Junior and Senior societies were represented there and took active part. Following this they distributed baskets of provisions to poor worthy families.

These Junior Enedavorers have had their first choir practice, which we report with much pleasure. We are going to expect much from this group. One of them, Ruth King, sang a pretty solo, "The Sweet Story of Jesus," for the opening exercises of Sunday school last Sunday.

Our Woman's Auxiliary will have a chicken supper and bazaar the latter part of next week, probably December 1 th. Please listen for the announcement next Sunday. Those who wish to donate something please call Mrs. S. W. Taylor or Mrs. C. B. Welch for full information.

Graham.—We are indeed glad to have Rev. and Mrs. J. Clyde Auman, who have worked so faithfully in our church, return to us for another year. We hope their time with us will be successful and pleasant.

We were grateful that Mr. Auman was able to preach to us Sunday. His subject for the morning service was "The Price of Gratitude," and for the evening service "A Model Church Service." He was kept away on Sunday, November 2 , because of illness, and Rev. G. W. Holmes brought us a most helpful message at the morning service.

At our Sunday school service Sunday, December 3, we enjoyed hearing Mr. Barrett, a member of the Graham High School faculty, who spoke on Christian Education. He gave us a very inspiring message.

Under the supervision of Don S. Holt, our Sunday school is increasing rapidly, both in attendance and interest. Mrs. Don S. Holt has charge of our Sunday school music for this year. We are indeed fortunate in having one so capable for this work.

The Missionary Circles met Monday; Circle No. 1 with Mrs. N. E. Sykes, Circle No. 2 with Mrs. P. B. Core, Circle No. 3 with Mrs. J. L. Johnson. There were 18 members of No. 3 present at Mrs. Johnson's home and $8.00 was raised by a bargain sale.

Our Auxiliary will give a turkey dinner on Saturday, December 9, at the church hut.

We are finding a remarkable spirit of cooperation among our people both in our Sunday school and church work and we are looking forward to this year as one of the most successful years of our church.

MARRIED

Smith-Kivett

Miss Ruth Kivett and Mr. Weldon Smith were united in marriage at the home of Rev. G. F. Millaway on the 25th day of November.

These young people are well known in the Alamance Church community.

Nichols-Jones

Victor B. Nichols and Nell Jones were married by the writer at the parsonage in Efland, November 29, 1933.

Mr. Nichols is a member of our Efland church; Mrs. Nichols of our Hebron church. They are prominent young people. We wish them joy and happiness through life.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Porter-Martin

Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Martin announce the marriage of their daughter, Ruby Jenkins, to Mr. Eugene Hampton Porter on Saturday, December 2, at Bennettsville, S. C.

The bride was a member of the 1930 graduating class of Rockingham High School. For some time she has been reporter to the Herald from the Rockingham M. P. church.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Porter of West Rockingham.

A host of friends extend hearty congratulations and sincere wishes to these highly esteemed young people.

Henley-Lowdermilk

A marriage of interest to their many friends was that of Miss Nancy J. Lowdermilk to Mr. Earl E. Henley, which was solemnized Friday evening, November 10th, 1933, at 7 o'clock at the Methodist Protestant parsonage in Asheboro. Rev. R. C. Stubbins, the bride's pastor, officiated.

The wedding was a very quiet affair, attended by only close relatives of the contracting parties. The marriage took place in the reception room of the Stubbins home, the ring ceremony of the Methodist Protestant church being used.

Mrs. Henley is the attractive daughter of Mrs. Emma Allen Lowdermilk, and the late Frank Lowdermilk, of this place. She was educated in the local schools and at High Point College, and for the past few years has held a position with the First National Bank. Mr. Henley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Henley, of Mount Gilead. He attended school at Guilford College and at the present time is connected with the McCrary Hosiery Mills of this place.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Henley left for a few days' trip and upon their return will occupy their new home at 318 Worth street.

No cards are being issued.

MY LADY

My queenly lady and the light,
Tranquilly and patiently,
Without a trace of worldiness,
Sweetly she looks down at me.

Through precious hours I daily sit
A silent, humble worshipper,
And all my dreams and happiness
Forever are wrapped up in her.

GET OUT OF THE RUT

(Commended to the Elderly)

Get out of the rut,
  Be done with the past;
Don't talk of old age,
  Hang fear at half-mast.

Get out of the rut,
  And the rocking-chair, too;
Don't be a dull cynic,
  But broaden your view.

Get out of the rut,
  Don't longer delay;
Resolve to make this
  A happy new day.

Get out of the rut,
  Ignore doubt and strife;
Begin something new,
  Get a fresh grip on life!

—Grenville Kleiser.

POUNDED!

A number of the members of St. Paul Methodist Protestant church, with the pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, and Mrs. Garner, brought to us a good supply of nice things for Thanksgiving, which we appreciate very much.

Is Prohibition Dead?

With cruel blow they laid him low
And stretched his body on the ground.
"At last he's dead," with guilt they said,
As fresh blood flowed from every wound.

The world once more as oft before
Here sees injustice on the throne;
But when full day has had its say,
How then will real truth be shown?

Today's events provoke comment,
But cannot show the end to be:
If we would know how things will go,
We read the mind of God and see.

A Modern Jewish Patriot

A story like that of Joseph or Nehemiah or Daniel comes to us as a part of the great story of the World War. A Jew named Weizmann is the hero. He was a chemistry demonstrator in Manchester University, England. The Germans were using on their battleships a bombshell that far surpassed anything the other nations knew about. How was it made? What elements entered into its composition? The English felt themselves in great danger of losing their supremacy on the sea and in the war if they could not find out. They offered a prize to scientists for the discovery of the secret. Weizmann undertook the problem and solved it, discovering the unknown element. British statesmen offered him money and honors, but he insisted on giving his discovery to the British government. He would not accept their prize. When pressed he confessed that he would like to see something done for the Zionist Jews who were then trying to establish a permaent colony in Palestine with a view to restoring the land to the Jewish people. Lord Balfour and other English statesmen were favorably impressed with Weizmann's suggestion and seriously took it to heart. As a result England was given a mandatory over Palestine and in that capacity favored the plans of the Zionists. Weizmann was the Nehemiah or Daniel of the movement, a noble Jewish patriot.

Change of Theological View

Among the earlier conceptions of the relation of God to the world He has created is that of complete separation if not great distance. God is far away and we must climb up into Heaven to find Him. Later students of God rejected this view and came to think of God as very near to us, "nearer than hands and feet," within us and around us. This has been the prevailing view among intelligent people for a long time. But a prominent German theologian is now out with a book in which he argues in favor of absolute separation between God and the world.

It is one of the major theological questions, theoretically if not practically. It has an indirect bearing on the great problem of evil. The tragedy of indirect law enforcement does not seem so shocking as that of direct personal action. On the other hand, when God seems near He seems more dear: we rest in Him more securely, we trust in Him more readily.

In thinking upon theological questions we must ever bear in mind that we cannot deeply understand God. But in whatever form or relationship He assumes we may love, trust and obey Him.

How We Acknowledge Receipt of Subscription Money

Our plan has been in operation for years, but we find that even some ministers do not understand it.

For payments on subscriptions to the HERALD the only receipt thought necessary for the subscribers is indicated by changing the dates on address labels. If you pay $2.00 your date is advanced a year; if you send only one dollar, the date is advanced six months.

In the case of remittance by a pastor or other HERALD agent we make acknowledgement under the heading, "Herald Subscription Receipts," in a column of the HERALD.

If receipts are not acknowledged in two weeks we request the sender to write us about it.

YOUTHFUL CRIMINALS

The New York Evening Post gives some alarming facts concerning law breaking in England by youths under 21 years of age, who were responsible in 1932 for 40 per cent of all the indictable crimes in that country. This is an increase of 11 per cent for the year. Of all England's criminals, 13 per cent were between the ages of seven and fourteen; nine per cent between fourteen and seventeen; and twenty-one per cent between nineteen and twenty-one.

The same writer refers to the parallel growth of juvenile crime and matrimonial discord, and police and welfare workers are finding that the lack of parental control in broken homes thwarts every effort to check criminality, and it complicates the problem of parole, probation being futile when the criminally bent youth cannot be returned to proper custody.

A WELL-TEMPERED DISPOSITION

I have just finished reading for the second time Pride and Prejudice, one of England's finest and most dearly loved novels, by Jane Austen.

It was written between October, 1796, and August, 1797. After revision it was offered to a publisher who declined even to read it. It was not published until sixteen years later, in 1813. Many editions have been printed, and it is still in great demand by readers in countless libraries.

This is a novel of character. Line by line and word by word the drawing and coloring proceed until, by the time the reader has completed the nearly 600 pages, each character stands out distinctly—and he feels himself enriched by his acquaintance with several interesting and desirable persons.

There are misunderstandings and complications—some of which are satisfactorily resolved. Some of the personalities, quite naturally, never become anything more than ordinary. Of five sisters, two—Jane and Elizabeth—become increasingly developed and in every way lovely, Elizabeth being the particularly bright star of the story. Two young men, Mr. Bingley and Mr. Darcy, are the prominent and coming men of the group.

Mr. Bingley and Jane, after a becoming amount of trouble, find each other, and marry. They are well mated, and go on into a happy life together. Mr. Darcy and Elizabeth—because she thinks he is proud and arrogant, and he thinks she is cold and indifferent (and because she is lower in the social scale and others meddle in their affairs)—have a difficult time in coming to an understanding. Elizabeth finally discovers that Darcy is really diffident and the victim of a formal training, while he finds out that Elizabeth is very warm and appreciative and that differences in family and wealth need not matter so much between lovers. When they have achieved union, they believe that no couple could ever be so happy as themselves.

In first declaring his love to Elizabeth, Darcy had greatly offended and disgusted her because of his failure to appreciate her pride and independence. She rejected him with such definiteness and determination that he was left dumfounded and hopeless, though his love for her was not destroyed. Through a complicated course of events they finally reached the goal of mutual understanding and appreciation.

They were talking over the things and circumstances that had hindered their union and the things that finally brought them together. Mr. Darcy said in humble confession: "I have been a selfish being all my life, in practice, though not in principle. As a child, I was taught what was right; but I was not taught to correct my temper." By temper is here meant the disposition. The teaching of right principles—and even their acceptance—is not likely to be of great consequence if the disposition is not so tempered and disciplined as to harmonize with what is right.

He continues: "I was given good principles, but left to follow them in pride and conceit." A college classmate of mine was accustomed to maintain that conversion did not really change a person's nature. "A generous-spirited man would be a generous Christian, a mean-spirited man would become a mean-spirited Christian, a tricky man would be a tricky church member"—these were some of my classmate's contentions. While admitting that there was some truth in his representations, I always maintained that conversion should go to the bottom of one's nature and transform the center of one's being. This may be largely done at once. Usually it is a process requiring considerable time and exercise for its full accomplishing. Meanwhile, it is one of the things frequently observed that a man with good principles lives out his life much too largely, perhaps unconsciously, in pride and conceit.

Mr. Darcy's explanation of how he had been situated helps us to understand his doings. He says: "Unfortunately, an only son (for many years an only child), I was spoiled by my parents, who, though good themselves (my father, particularly, all that was benevolent and amiable), allowed, encouraged, almost taught me to be selfish and overbearing—to care for none beyond my own family circle, to think meanly of all the rest of the world, to wish, at least, to think meanly of their sense and worth compared with my own."

The fact that Darcy was rich and of a well known family, while Elizabeth's situation was humble in material possessions and family and social connections, made it difficult for their minds and hearts to meet. But meet they did, and their happiness was full and complete.

Pride and Prejudice will, I am sure, well repay several readings. It is worthy to become a familiar companion, philosopher, and guide.

A POOR MAN'S WISH

I asked a student what three things he most wished. He said, "Give me books, health, and quiet, and I care for nothing more."

I asked a miser, and he cried, "Money, money, money!"

I asked a pauper, and he said, "Bread, bread, bread!"

I asked a drunkard, and he loudly called for strong drink.

I asked the multitude around me, and they lifted up a confused cry, in which I heard the words, "Wealth, fame and pleasure."

I asked a poor man, who had long borne the character of an experienced Christian. He replied, that all his wishes could be met in Christ. He spoke seriously, and I asked him to explain. He said, "I greatly desire these three things: first, that I may be found in Christ; secondly, that I may be like Christ; thirdly, that I may be with Christ."

I have thought much of his answer, and the more I think of it the wiser it seems.—Publisher Unknown.

"IF MAMA ISN'T"

The wife of a prominent lawyer who had been under deep conviction for several days gave the following account of her conversion at our prayer-meeting:

"Last evening my little girl came to me and said, 'Mama, are you a Christian?' 'No, I am not.' She turned and went away, and as she walked off I heard her say, 'Well, if Mama is not a Christian, I don't want to be one.' And I tell you, my friends, it went right to my heart, and I then gave myself to Christ."—Western Recorder.

CONFERENCE COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

T. J. WHITEHEAD, President
1800 Spring Garden St. - - Greensboro, N. C.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO PASTORS

We are beginning the new conference year, and there is a very important program of Christian Education which we hope to include in the program of the conference for this new year. The most important part of the program for us to consider now is Young People's Day and the series of local Leadership Training Courses which are to come at an early date. If you have not received your copy of the Young People's Day materials, write Rev. F. L. Gibbs, at Seminary Bdg., Westminster, Md. He will rush your copy at once. As soon as you have the material in hand, select a committee to begin making plans for Young People's Day in your church. Remember that this special day is dedicated to our own Dr. C. E. Forlines. We want to observe this day in every church in our conference this year and raise $3,000 for Christian Education. Remember that the offering counts on the World Service Budget. What a wonderful opportunity for your church to make a start towards raising its World Service Budget one hundred per cent!

Some Important Dates for You, Brother Pastor

January 14, 1934—Rally at First M. P. church in Burlington in honor of Dr. C. E. Forlines.

January 15 to February 2, 1934—Series of local Leadership Training Schools.

January 28 or February 4, 1934, Young People's Day.

June 25-30, 1934, Conference Council Leadership Training School at High Point College.

Be sure that you read this page weekly from now on.

T. J. WHITEHEAD

IMPORTANT NOTICE

For several years our denomination has observed as a special day, Methodist Protestant Young People's Day. It has become customary to dedicate the program for the day to some outstanding leader within the denomination who is particularly interested in and has made some worthwhile contribution to the youth of our church. This year the program is dedicated to Dr. C. E. Forlines, a native of this state, an outstanding leader in the denomination, and a lover and benefactor of youth. Since Dr. Forlines is a "Tar Heel" and a member of our North Carolina Conference, we are holding special services in his honor on January 14, 1934. A definite set-up of the program has not yet been arranged, but a committee is at work on such a program. It is hoped that this program will receive state-wide co-operation. A definite set-up of the program will be given at a later date. This notice is simply to bring the matter before you and ask your hearty co-operation. Please mark a ring around January 14th and do not forget the meaning and significance of the day.

FRED W. PASCHALL, Chairman

WHERE RIGHTS ARE MUTUAL

When the Annual Conference is organized there is a lay delegate for every pastor of a charge in that Conference. This delegate is duly elected by the members of the church or charge after his or her nomination by the quarterly conference. So when pastor and delegate vote in Conference, no one has more power or privilege than the other.

When the Stationing Committee is elected at the Conference, ministers and delegates vote, they choose a minister and a layman whose duty it becomes to station the pastors or preachers. This authority which is vested in the Conference becomes final when the report of this committee is approved by the Conference, and there is no provision in the Discipline by which a charge can refuse to accept the pastor as an appointee of the Conference. They may not hear him preach and may refuse to pay him, but those who so act are disloyal to their conference,—they have no right to refuse to accept him as their pastor.

When the Annual Conference adjourns the President of the Conference acts for the Conference in all administrative matters which have been committed to his hands by the Discipline and Conference actions. If a charge becomes vacant, without a pastor, the President is vested with the authority to fill this vacancy. He has no authority to appoint one a pastor of the church who is not a member of the denomination and of those who are only such as are "in his hands" by conference action.

We have a General Conference where the laws of the church are made; this conference is composed of an equal number of laymen and ministers. So whatever actions are taken there are the results of consideration by ministers and laymen sitting together with equal authority and mutual interests. It is in the foregoing that the Methodist Protestant has claimed to be a Methodist church with mutual rights. The method of procedure in pastoral supply by the President is inserted as belonging to this particular phase of church work.

These rights are not always appreciated by our lay members. We have far too few of them who really enjoy the privileges given them. But this fact does not vitiate the inherent advantages stated and should be an appeal to our laymen to greater activity in their church. Neither do these rights, as stated, give layman or minister the authority to act in any way other than as prescribed by the Discipline.

Barnstorming the Conference

A custom has prevailed for many decades—I suppose long before the writer knew this world—of "barnstorming" the Stationing Committee at conference time to compel this committee to accede to the request of the self-appointed committee. It is a shame that this custom has been endured through all the years. It discredits the delegate and the Stationing Committee. It is virtually saying that these people are not competent to do the thing they were chosen to do, and therefore it must be done by a group of self-appointed people, many of whom were not regular attendants at the church now to be supplied. As a result of the commotion caused by this group, who as a rule attend Conference on Sunday to break up what had been wrought in the quiet hours of deliberation until then, the church back home is torn asunder by this action and unready to receive even a better man than they enjoyed before Conference met. I appeal for a greater sanity in this matter, and if ever chosen to serve on the Stationing Committee again I shall abide fully by the resolution adopted by the last Annual Conference.

A HISTORY OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Book Review

A History of the Christian Church, by L. P. Qualben. Thomas Nelson & Sons, New York. 590 pages.

Here is a clear, concise, yet adequate treatment of the history of the Christian Church. The author, Professor at St. Olaf College, has written out of his own classroom experience and practical needs in presenting the subject matter of ecclesiastical developments. The work is readable and easy to follow. Numerous outlines and subdivisions are used in arranging the material which help to simplify the processes at work in any particular period or organization under consideration. One reads Church History without wandering through the bypaths of irrelevant discussions. Even though the study is brought within the limits of one volume, the writer, it seems, has left out nothing of basic importance for an adequate appreciation of the subject.

Christianity is shown in its relation to Old Testament religion; the formative period of the early church is explained; then a study of the Middle Ages and the Reformation brings the work down to modern times. What is of special value, perhaps, for most readers is the interesting development of American Christianity. This section is well treated. Through it one should be able to trace his own ecclesiastical ancestry.

It is a pleasure to recommend this book. It will make an appeal to the general reader and will undoubtedly take its place among other standard contributions to the study of Church History. It is critical enough for the scholar, yet clear enough for the average reader.

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHILDREN'S HOME

High Point, N. C.

Just a brief message to say, Thank you, to our many friends throughout the denomination who have remembered the children here and who are planning to remember them in any way at the coming Christmas season.

We have already sent out an individual list of our children to quite a few friends in response to requests, and from that list we glean the following which may be helpful to others who think of sending boxes for Christmas.

Our children range in ages as follows: One little girl 4, one 5 and two 6; three girls and two boys 7; one girl 8; four girls and three boys 9; eight boys and eight girls 10; two girls and eight boys 11; one girl and twelve boys 12; eleven girls and four boys 13; four girls and four boys 14; three girls and six boys 15; five girls and one boy 16; four girls and one boy 17; three boys and three girls 18.

A Practical Christmas

We are pleading for a practical Christmas, especially in these times. Finances have run the lowest during 1933 of any year in many for this Home. For that reason we are badly behind for actual necessities in running expenses. So money is our greatest need, because creditors are pressing. They need their money and have a right to call for their money. Many have remembered us at Thanksgiving and many more will include this Home in their Humanitarian Gifts at Christmas, such as the White Gifts. We thank you for this, and are asking that whatever money may be collected, send it along in cash.

If you buy any presents for the children, please let it be in tooth brushes, tooth paste, handkerchiefs, towels, soap, wash cloths and other toilet articles. They will have plenty of candy and sweet-meats and toys regardless of this plea.

We are wishing for every one of you a very happy Christmas and a glad and prosperous New Year. God bless and keep every one of you.

Yours in the Master's service,
Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

CONFERENCE COMMITTEE ON HERALD CAMPAIGN

Since I am to be here near the Herald office this year, I have been asked to direct the Herald campaign. Brother Bates is making out the quota for each charge and we hope to have that this week. Now it is for us to start up the machinery. It occurs to me that the first thing to do is for pastors and Herald agents to make up their minds that they are going to reach the goal. We do not always do as much as we think we will, but this is everlastingly true: we do not do much without making up our minds to do it. Most things come to us as a result of work. God knows that the most of us need the blessing that comes as a result of duty performed. So, brethren, make up your minds that you are going to press the campaign this year to the finish, and if you do press it vigorously a great many of you will reach the goal, and all the rest will do ten times better than they would have done if they had not resolved to do something about it. Remember it will not work itself. Somebody must press the campaign.

J. E. Pritchard, for the Committee

TO PLEASE HIM

It is a poor cold thing to say to an ardent healthy young Christian, "Don't do that, it is wrong." It is worse to say, "Don't do it, it is not expedient." It is altogether different to say, "Even Christ who gave Himself for you pleased not Himself. You may displease Him if you do that; you will certainly please Him if you seek to know and do His will." That is the love that melts the ore. That is the heat that makes flexible the hard, stiff material. That is the motive that gives a new zest to living, and puts delight into what otherwise might be called duty. It invests service with a halo, and is the one motive that can be trusted to secure in us all whatsoever things are noble.—Scripture Truth.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

See Last Week's Herald for Goals

I am encouraged with the manner most of the work has started off. The pastors are hopeful and many expressions come to me of the satisfaction of the official members over the new financial plan. We believe it will do something for us that has not been done in a long time—put over the top a large per cent of our charges on the claims. When our people know what is done with the money they pay to the Annual Conference claims, and are informed of the great need of funds by the interests headed up in them, we believe in them enough to expect hearty responses to these appeals. Do not disappoint us nor fail these interests.

Church Extension Appeal

At a regular meeting of the Board of Church Extension last week it was agreed to call upon our churches to pay their assessment for Church Extension during January, except those charges which are to raise their assessment for the A. C. expense; these can take February, if they like, for this cause. The need is so surgent that the Board felt that we must appeal to our people to satisfy this claim at the earliest possible date. I have mailed letters to every pastor giving the amount his charge is expected to raise with the request it be raised as stated, in January or as early as possible.

Failures Stalk Where Pessimists Reign

Nothing worth while is ever accomplished by pessimists. No new projects can run the gauntlet of these giants, and all old ones die in their hands. It is too bad that a leader should lose his faith and courage and not lose his position of leadership. Like the blind who lead the blind into the ditch, so the pessimistic leader is headed towards some dismal swamp of failure and defeat. Better by far that we lose our place in the ranks than to lose our courage and faith while we stay in ranks to hinder those who have plans and push that might succeed.

Poison Envy

One of the pitiable and contemptible spirits of man is envy. It too often appears in the ex-pastor and church official who is unwilling to co-operate with his successor in office and whose prayer for him, if he ever prays for him, is that he might fail of his objectives. Most of us who have had much experience in the work of the church had to face these little souls. We learned to interpret their silences as well as their scowls. We become conscious of the futility of expecting anything accomplished by their cordial support. It is discouraging to know that men and women who rank high in church circles allow this spirit to govern their conduct after they are old enough to matriculate in the holy order of Elijah—ready for translation. We pray to be delivered from the domination of such a spirit.

Appointments

December 16—District meeting at Littleton.

December 17—11 a.m. at Whitakers; 7:30 at Enfield.

December 18—First quarterly conference of these charges.

December 31—At District meeting of First District.

January 6—11 a.m., Moriah church; 7:30 p.m., Fountain Place.

January 13—Flat Rock charge.

January 20—11 a.m., Julian church; afternoon, Tabernacle church.

Bro. J. L. Love has been appointed pastor of Connelly Springs circuit.

Bro. J. R. Hutton has been appointed pastor of Midway-Shady Grove churches.

Districts Rearranged

I have taken the liberty to rearrange some of the districts. So many changes have been made that it might not hurt to make one other. So beginning with District No. 3 I am giving chairman and charges:

No. 3—B. M. Williams; Orange, Mebane, Saxapahaw, Mt. Hermon and Alamance.

No. 4—Paschall; Graham, Burlington, Fountain Place, Gibsonville, Glen Raven.

No. 5—Pritchard; Grace, St. Paul, West End, Calvary, Midway-Shady Grove, Tabernacle, and Moriah.

No. 6—Trollinger; Haw River, Reidsville, Flat Rock, Kernersville and Draper.

No. 7—Stubbins; Liberty, Mt. Pleasant, Randolph, Siler City, Randleman, Asheboro, Why Not and Richland.

No. 8—Surratt; Thomasville and High Point churches, Guilford circuit, North Davidson, Pleasant Grove.

No. 9—Johnson; State Street, First Lexington, Shiloh, Spencer, and Mocksville.

No. 10—Bates; Forsyth, West Forsyth, Winston, South Winston, Pinnacle circuit.

No. 11—Bingham; Denton, Davidson.

No. 12—Troxler; Cleveland, Fallston, Caroleen-Bess Chapel, Lincolnton, Connelly Springs.

No. 13—Morgan; Albemarle, Friendship, Concord, Kannapolis, Midland and Roberta.

No. 14—Hendry; Charlotte, Mecklenburg, Rockingham.

No. 15—Cowan; Asheville, Weaverville, Democrat.

Brother Short and representatives from Yarboro and Anderson can choose to attend whichever district meeting most convenient to them, etc. It is unfortunate for our people there who are so far separated from other workers; we hope that some of the officials and pastor can attend some of the district meetings and would suggest they join in with District No. 14, Chairman Hendry.

State Street, Lexington, Rev. T. M. Johnson, Pastor

I held the first quarterly conference of this charge last Thursday night. The charge is composed of State Street and Bethesda churches. There was a splendid attendance and the business of the church was attended to with careful attention. The spirit of harmony prevailed and the people are beginning the new year with hopefulness. Dr. Johnson was getting fixed up in the parsonage on State street where he receives his friends. A project or two relative to the church debt was mentioned which if carried out will add to the encouragement of the group; we presume that this matter may find its way to the paper later. We enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Walser for the night.

Reidsville Church, Rev. G. R. Brown, D.D., Pastor

We were there at the 11 o'clock hour. There was a good congregation, better than we expected, and we enjoyed the privilege of speaking to them. Reidsville is one of our smaller churches, the membership is just slightly over one hundred, but their loyalty is not expressed by their numbers, and it must be a pleasure to their pastor to serve them. This church has never had the growth in numbers that some of our other newer churches have enjoyed. The congregation was organized long after the town was established and the leading citizens had been churched, so when we came along we had only those of our own number who remanied faithful through all the years of waiting. Brother and Sister Kernodle were the nucleus around which the church was organized, and while he long since went to his final home, Sister Kernodle has been the stay of the members in many ways. Her loyalty is an inspiration to all who come into contact with her and her financial support has really kept the church going. Doctor Brown is quite popular with his people and the people of the town as well. This fact is attested by the length of his pastorate—seven years—and by the many ways in which he has been recognized by his fellow townsmen. It was a pleasure to make this official visit and we believe that in no distant day our church there shall have a better day—more grown, at least.

Midway - Shady Grove

I was at Midway church on No. 10 Highway at the evening hour. The service was preceded by a Christian Endeavor meeting, when twenty or more young people held an interesting meeting. The subject was Salvation. After speaking for a short time we held a meeting of the membership to select a pastor for the new year. The congregation decided upon Brother Hutton; he is asked to be pastor of both Midway and Shady Grove churches; the appointments at Midway the first and third Sundays at 11 o'clock, and the appointments for Shady Grove to be decided when he goes to this church.

We believe Midway has a good future, and if it can get the proper service will prove the wisdom of its location and the loyalty of the little group who compose its membership.

THE SHIELD OF FAITH

Paul exhorted the Ephesians to put on the whole armor of God. This armor consists of the girdle of truth, the breastplate of righteousness, the gospel of peace, the shield of faith, the helmet of salvation, the sword of the Spirit, and Isaiah adds the mantle of zeal. Warfare has largely changed since the far-off day of Homer, David, Isaiah, or the Apostle Paul; but the need for faith in the Christian warfare has not changed in the least. What these different weapons were to the soldiers in physical warfare, faith is to the Christian in his spiritual warfare. Well might the eleventh chapter of Hebrews be marked "continued" until all Christians have finished their warfare.

The Christian is not prepared without all these weapons. He might be as truthful as Washington; as righteous as St. Francis of Assisi; as peaceful as Ghandi, and be miserable without faith. He would be unable to rejoice at the birth of a child, or the beginning of any great enterprise; because, he would see the enterprise fail, and the child die in infancy. What courage i to the physical man, morale to an army, is faith to the Christian. By faith youth sees the man or woman he expects to be climbing either the slopes of time, or those of eternity. Faith sends a shining ray down the future's broadening way.

Such a faith is not the narrow, impoverished variety associated with our modern sects and isms; but the wider, deeper, fuller, richer faith of the Scriptures, once for all delivered unto the saints. It is greater than any of our creeds; yea, than all of them taken together. It gives reality to the things hoped for, and is the title deed to heavenly possessions. Faith is really omnipotent, according to Jesus' teachings. "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth." By faith mountains are removed and worlds overcome. The power of faith is unlimited in the spiritual realm.

There is a great struggle today to keep faith alive in our churches. We need to take up anew the shield of faith. Paul wrote, "With it ye shal be able to quench all the fiery darts of the evil one." We need to hold "shall be able" up against our temptations to despair. Richard Baxter said, "I would rather have the whosoevers in the Scriptures, than own the worlds." Personally, the "shalls" are a great consolation to me. Paul wrote "shall"—not may, or perchance, or a slight possibility.

The clumsy soldiersh carrying a shield four by two and a half feet, to ward off the fiery darts of an approaching foe, might be ancient history to the skeptic, but is modern life to the Christian. The fiery darts are the fierce temptations to despair, yield to lusts, to take vengeance out of God's hands, to give place to wrath, an dsuffer defeat through doubt. From the headlines in our papers today, and from the reports coming over our radios, America is being overcome with evil, rather than overcoming evil with good. Surely the way out is to take up the shield of faith and quench all these foes of righteousness. Let the world learn that "the Kingdom of God is not eating and drinking; but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit." "Our faith is the victory that has triumphed over the world."

OUR STORY PAGE

NEW SHOES

"I wonder if there can be a pair of shoes in it?" Little Tim sat on the ground close beside a very ugly, dark-colored stone jug. He eyed it sharply, but finding it quite impossible to see through its sides, pulled out the cork and peered anxiously in.

"Can't see nothin'; but it's dark in there. I couldn't see if there was anything. I've a good mind to break the hateful old thing."

He sat for a while thinking how badly he wanted a pair of shoes to wear to the Sunday school. His mother had promised to wash and mend his clothes, that he might go, looking very neat indeed; but the old shoes were far past all mending and how could he go barefooted!

Then he began counting the chances of his father being very angry when he should find that his jug was broken. He did not like the idea of getting a whipping for it as was very likely; but how could he resist the temptation of making sure about those shoes? The more he thought of them the more he couldn't. He sprang up and hunted around until he found a good-sized brick-bat, which he flung with such a vigorous hand and correct aim that the next moment the old jug lay in pieces before his eyes.

How eagerly he bent over these pieces in the hope of finding, not only what he was so longing for but also perhaps, other treasures! But his poor little heart sank as he turned over the fragments with trembling fingers. Nothing could be found among the broken bits, wet on the inside with a bad-smelling liquid.

Tim sat down and sobbed as he had never sobbed before—so hard that he did not hear a step beside him until a voice said: "Well! What's all this?"

He sprang up in great alarm. It was his father, who always slept late in the morning, and was very seldom awake so early as this.

"Who broke my jug?" he asked. "I did," said Tim, catching his breath half in terror and half between the sobs.

"Why did you do it?" Tim looked up. The voice did not sound quite as terrible as he had expected. The truth was, his father had been touched at the sight of the forlorn figure, so very small and so sorrowful, which had bent over the broken jug.

"Why," he said, "I was looking for a pair of new shoes. I want a pair of shoes awful bad to wear to Sunday school. All the other chaps wear shoes."

"How came you to think you'd find shoes in a jug?"

"Why, mamma said so. I asked her for some new shoes and she said they had gone into the black jug, and that lots of other things had gone into it, too—coats and hats, and bread, and meat, and things—and I thought if I broke it I'd find them all, and there ain't a thing in it; and mamma never said what wasn't so before—and I thought it would be so—sure."

And Tim, hardly able to sob out the words, feeling how keenly his trust in mother's words had added to this great disappointment, sat down and cried harder than ever.

His father seated himself on a box in the disorderly yard, and remained quiet for so long a time that Tim at last looked timidly up.

"I'm really sorry I broke your jug, Father. I'll never do it again."

"No, I guess you won't," he said, laying his hand on the rough little head as he went away, leaving Tim overcome with astonishment that his father had not been angry with him.

Two days after, on Saturday evening, Tim's father handed him a parcel, telling him to open it.

"New shoes! new shoes!" he shouted. "Oh, Father, did you get a new jug and were they in it?" "No, my boy, there isn't going to be any new jug. Your mother was right all the time—the things all went into the jug, but you see getting them out is no easy matter, so I am going to keep them out after this."—Publisher Unknown.

THE CHARRED TREASURY NOTE

"Please, ma'am, Miss Lewis has called to see you and she won't come in."

"All right, Mary, I will come. And while I am out, ask Olive to come and empty my wastepaper basket and make up the fire," and Mrs. Paxton signed her name to a letter with a rather important dash. She was a busy secretary to an orphanage, and her papers lay scattered everywhere.

Olive was an orphan, who had but recently left the Home. She wanted to please Mrs. Paxton in this, her first place, and also she tried to do everything for the Savior, whom she knew and loved as a real and ever-present Friend.

Olive was still busy in the room when Mrs. Paxton returned. Her mistress was soon busy with her letters again, and in a little while Olive slipped out. An hour later she was called.

"Olive, I have lost a pound note! I cannot find it anywhere. Have you seen it?" said Mrs. Paxton.

"No, ma'am," replied the girl, her face paling suddenly, as it always did when she was abruptly questioned.

"It was here on my table when I went to speak to Miss Lewis," said her mistress, looking at her fixedly, "and you were the only one in the room during the few minutes I was absent. It has to be found, Olive."

A search then began which resulted in no success. The treasury note was gone, and Olive was suspected of having taken it. It was a crushing blow, for the little maid knew well what it would mean to her to be sent back to the orphanage in disgrace.

She overheard the cook saying to Mrs. Paxton next day: "I have no use for any of these goody girls with their excellent characters, ma'am. Try one next time as is no Christian and I am sure she will be a lot better."

"Indeed, I believe you are right, cook. Well, I must say, both the matron and I have been thoroughly deceived in Olive. I do not envy her going back to the Home on Friday.

Mrs. Mason, though kind and just, can be very severe. The girl was so long in her charge, too, and came of nice, respectable people. It surely is a terrible disappointment.''

For some days the weather had been unusually mild, so that a fire in Mrs. Paxton's sunny breakfast room had not been needed. On the Friday morning on which Olive was to return to the orphanage, a cold spell set in and the girl was told to light the fire. She thought it had caught all right, but when Mrs. Paxton came down it was out.

''Really, Olive, can't you even set a fire yet?'' asked her mistress angrily. ''I cannot think how you ever managed to deceive Mrs. Mason all around. I suppose you do not care to do anything right now.''

With blinding tears the girl set about removing the half-charred sticks and burned paper. Suddenly, a cry broke from her lips. ''Oh, ma'am. See! See!'' she exclaimed. ''Praise God! He always keeps His Word and answers our prayers.''

In Olive's hand she held a much-crumpled and charred treasury note. It had barely escaped the flames, but was most remarkably uninjured except around the edges.

Explanation gradually dawned! In closing the door, a draught must have caught the note lying on the table and whirled it into the waste paper basket. Olive had emptied all the contents in the dark coal cellar and never noticed the note.

''What a mercy the fire refused to burn this morning,'' said Mrs. Paxton. ''I have never known that grate to go out before. How glad I am for all our sakes, Olive! Your character has been cleared by a miracle.''

''Oh, Ma'am, it isn't anything for God to answer prayer. I did not know how, but I was sure He would.''

''Really, Olive, how can you possibly think that the Almighty God, who controls and orders all things can concern Himself about anything so trifling in His sight as the loss of a pound note?''

Olive pulled out her well-worn pocket Testament and read softly, ''Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God?'' ''I am just like one of those tiny, little, common birds, Ma'am, and I am so glad, because I know He remembers me.''—Author Unknown.

THE FRIENDLY THIEF

Ralph and his sister Mary went to spend the summer with their grandma in the country. One day Ralph came running into the house, very much excited.

''Oh, Grandma, what do you think? A big black bird flew down and carried off one of my marbles. He was gone just a little while, then he flew back again and what do you think he put down? A ripe cherry. He kept saying something that sounded like, 'all, all,' and so I brought my marbles into the house.''

That afternoon Mary left her beads in her room and when she went to get them they were gone. The window was open. They did not see them again until one day they went to spend the day with some neighbor children, who lived over the hill. They were having a little tea party out under the trees and thought they would gather some flowers for the table. When they came back the table was bare, or nearly so; even the little spoons were gone.

''I know it was the children who have just moved into the next house,'' said Jessie, one of the friends.

''I don't think they would do that, really,'' said Ralph. 'Maybe a dog did it.'' But a dog would not take spoons, they all said.

Just then, far above, they heard a sound, and as it came nearer they heard it say, ''All, all,'' and a big black bird flew down on the table and, in a friendly way began to eat the sugar. It turned its head this way and that in such a funny manner they all laughed.

''Why, it's a pet crow,'' said Jessie, ''and it is saying, 'saw-caw.' I know now, it belongs to the new neighbors. Let us go and see,'' and off they went.

The little new neighbors came out to meet them and were so glad to get acquainted. It was their pet crow, Jim, and they all had such a joly time watching the crow to find his hiding place. At last they found it up in the barn. There, sure enough, were the spoons, Ralph's marble and Mary's beads, besides several bright pieces of glass.

Then Jessie remembered that she had thought it was these nice little children who had taken the spoons. Wouldn't they feel badly if they thought she would say that about them? Suppose they had said that about her?—The Olive Leaf.

BETSY JANE'S RICHES

Betsy Jane was a very poor little girl. She lived in a tiny house, and her clothing was thin and scant. Often Betsy Jane felt hungry, and sometimes her home was cheerless and cold, but Betsy had the sunniest of faces and the warmest of hearts.

''It won't always be so hard,'' she said. ''Father has been sick, you see; but he is growing stronger now. When mother and I see that, we feel like the richest folks in town. God is so good to us always. Baby keeps well. If he were not so little, mother could earn more money, but he will soon be older. So now we are rich, don't you think so?''

And Betsy Jane's teacher said, ''Betsy is one of the richest girls I know. She sings and smiles; and if her little heart grows sad, as I think it must sometimes, she runs off and tells Jesus. She shares her sunshine and her wealth of hope and contentment with others. I'm thinking that, one of these days, God will send the clouds away from her skies. Even now she is the richest girl that I know.''—Joy Bells.

GOD TAKES CARE

A little boy, six or eight years old, begged a lady to allow him to clean away the snow. He had no father or mother.

''Do you get much work, my little boy?'' said the lady.

''Sometimes I do,'' said the boy, ''but often I get very little.''

''Are you never afraid that you will not get enough to live on?''

''Why,'' said he, ''don't you think God will take care of a boy, if he puts his trust in Him, and does the best he can?''—The Picture World.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Note: The Harvest-Home offering from Tabernacle on Tabernacle Charge should have been credited to the Woman's Auxiliary of Tabernacle. We gladly make the correction.

Foss, Oklahoma, 1 bag of clothing containing shoes, overalls, coats, dresses, towels and pillow slips.

Cooper, Texas, 1 box of clothing containing 2 quilts, clothing, tooth brushes and toothpaste.

Comanche, Okla., 1 quilt.

Panola, Ala., 1 box clothing.

Welch Memorial, 5 cans fruit and vegetables.

Mrs. Lucy Baskett, Spring Valley, Vance, 3 pair pillow slips and 13 towels and coupons.

Mrs. Lloyd, Textile Exchange, Thomasville, 7 dozen pair hose for small children.

Grace Church Auxiliary, per Mrs. D. S. Coltrane, 10 large cakes, sufficient for cake in all our school children's lunches for two days. What a help!

Mrs. Starr and her daughter, Caroline, Grace Church, 2 sweaters and 5 dresses.

Miss M. S. Jarrell, Eaglesville, Tenn., a box of clothing and coupons.

English Street, High Point, 12 handkerchiefs, 6 packages elastic, 8 combs, 5 packages toothpaste, 5 bottles toilet lotion, 5 powder puffs, 5 papers bob pins.

Haw River Circuit, additional Harvest-Home offering, 5 pounds sugar, 3 bushels sweet potatoes, 2 bushels corn in the ear, and 13 quarts canned fruit and vegetables.

The L. Banks Holt Manufacturing Co., Graham, a large bundle of suitings and shirtings for boys.

We are profoundly grateful for so good a report. This is enabling us to pay up many bills, and to reduce others. We are hoping for many more good Thanksgiving and Christmas offerings during the next weeks. Many Thanksgiving offerings have not reached us yet.

Coupons

The coupons are coming in pretty well. Keep them coming. We are expecting a big shower of them right around the holidays. We must have them counted and packed ready to ship on December 30th, so hurry them along.

Magazines

Mrs. Mabel Williams Russell, 804 Lindsay Street, High Point, N. C., says she is getting inquiries about magazines and prices. That is encouraging. Order your Christmas and New Year subscriptions and renewals through her. Her commission will come to the Home.

Thank you for every help for the work here. God bless all His children.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

SPRING CHURCH CIRCUIT AUXILIARY

On December 6 the Spring Church Circuit Auxiliary met in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Burnette with the president, Mrs. C. E. Dimick, in charge. The meeting was opened by singing, after which the writer conducted the devotionals, using the program laid down in the yearbook for December. Sentence prayers were offered. The theme, "How to Find Reality in Your Daily Devotions." Sharing was discussed by the leader.

In response to roll call 17 active members and one honorary member responded. Five Precious Jewels were present, and the society gladly welcomed nine visitors, six of whom were ladies and three gentlemen. It is always a pleasure to have visitors in our meetings and it is an added pleasure when the men are interested enough to attend. Two new Precious Jewels were added to the list, making a total of seven. The two new Precious Jewel members are Trilby Alice Tucker and Barbara Barthynia Massey. A Precious Jewel certificate is being presented to each member as he joins. The amount of money turned in to the treasurer that day was $13.55.

Mrs. R. M. Robinson, who has charge of the Elizabeth Wade products in our Auxiliary, brought in a new supply of goods and this was given out to the different members to be sold.

The president asked the writer to present the Minnis Calendar Plan, which she did, and in a few minutes enough pledges were made to fill the second Auxiliary Calendar, and we are expecting all six to be completed and money sent to Mrs. S. W. Taylor by or before the new year.

In my last report I said, "We are proud of our women down here and of the good work they are doing." I want to add to that by saying we are also proud of our men down here, and of the good work they are doing by helping us out in our missionary projects. The fact that some of them are becoming more interested in the Missionary cause was proven when we put on the Calendar campaign at the different churches and also by a number of them attending our Auxiliary meeting. On our way home from Conference Mr. J. C. Cook, our delegate, asked me when we were going to begin raising our Calendar money. I said, "Right away," and he said, "I want to give $2 on it, one for my wife and one for myself." Wasn't that a good start? The pastor had already said he would give $1 and make the Calendar for us. Space forbids my giving all names of those who have given, but I want to mention a few men who have given as much as 50 cents each. They are: Messrs. R. M. Robinson, C. E. Dimick, M. L. Crew and John Hart.

At the close of the Auxiliary meeting Mrs. Burnette served delicious refreshments. The next meeting will be in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Camp.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Enfield.—Enfield charge feels very grateful that Annual Conference saw fit to return our pastor, Rev. E. O. Peeler, for another year. Rev. and Mrs. Peeler have done splendid work here and it is a pleasure to have them in our town and in our homes.

The Auxiliary held an enthusistic meeting November 27th in the home of Mrs. Lloyd Matthews, with Mrs. Z. A. Spivey and Mrs. Jim Lewis assisting hostesses with Mrs. Matthews. A very beautiful devotional service was conducted by Rev. E. O. Peeler. Mrs. S C. Whitaker as program leader put on a very inspiring and timely program on the Missionary Record and urged more members to subscribe to this church paper. Circle No. 1 reported they had collected and sold a bale of cotton. Circle No. 2 served dinner and supper in the hut election day. Both projects helped the Auxiliary treasury considerably. The entire Auxiliary is planning a turkey dinner and bazaar December 8th at the hut.

The annual union Thanksgiving service was held in the Methodist Protestant church on Thanksgiving morning at 6:43 o'clock. A large crowd was in attendance, filling the main church auditorium, also the gallery. Rev. Charles Howard of the Baptist church and Rev. E. O. Peeler conducted the service, which was very beautiful and inspiring.

Pine Hill, Davidson Charge.—The church work has been moving along right well, and the pastor filled his first appointment since.

Conference was held the past second Sunday. The attendance was good.

We are very glad to have Rev. E. A. Bingham back with us for a new year's work.

Our Sunday school is still running and with very good attendance. We are hoping to run the Sunday school during the winter months.

I close with best wishes to the church work and Herald.

ESSIE KEARNS, Reporter.

English Street.—On last Saturday evening, the Ladies' Class, along with several young people gave our pastor's wife, Mrs. C. H. Hill, a surprise birthday shower. She received mony attractive and useful gifts.

At the 11 clock service Sunday morning, a children's service was reserved for the children and approximately one hundred or more were present. The pastor spoke briefly to the children, after which the children, whose parents were not living were given special honor. As the children left the auditorium each one was presented with a gift from the pastor.

At the evening service a singing was held. The following quartets and singers were present: Robbins Hosiery Mill Quartet, Robbins Girls' Quartet from Asheboro; the Spiritual Quartet from Burlington; the Tabernacle and Hoover Quartets; Mr. Crouch and Miss Monroe, of High Point; little Nellie Jones, three years of age, sang two solos. The church was filled to overflowing and the songs were thoroughly enjoyed by everyone.

We have begun our Herald subscription campaign and have secured eight three-months subscriptions, three six-months subscriptions and three one-year subscriptions. We hope to have many more in the near future.

Work is progressing nicely on the Christmas program under the direction of several young ladies of the church.

The ladies of the church are planning to organize a new Ladies' Aid Society tomorrow evening. Other organizations of the church and the Sunday school are doing good work and are indeed encouraging

Pray for us that this may be the best year that our church has ever had.

REPORTER.

Moriah.—We are very glad to have Rev. M. P. Chambliss back with us for another year.

We are having good attendance at Sunday school and everyone is taking interest in the work. We have as our Sunday school superintendent Charles Sharpe, Jr.

Our pastor preached an interesting sermon last Sunday, the subject being "Praise God from Whom all blessings flow." The attendance was good, this being the first sermon this year.

We are very glad to have Mrs. Ethel Sharpe back again to worship with us.

The Ladies Auxiliary is meeting with Mrs. Chas. Scott Wednesday afternoon of this week.

The Young People's Bible Class will present a pageant, "The Star-Lighed Path," on Christmas eve at 7:30. The public is cordially invited.

May God bless the Herald and all its readers during the coming church year.

MRS. GEO. GLENN, Reporter.

Roberta.—We moved to our new field on Tuesday before Thanksgiving, reaching the parsonage at Roberta after dark. Several were waiting at the parsonage to help unload the furniture. After such a long drive from the mountains we were unusually tired. We immediately arranged a bed and retired.

We have been wonderfully received by this people. All that we have met have been so frindly and kind that they are strangers no longer. They hape played the part of good neighbors and paid us one visit after another. We have hardly had the time to do much visiting, but what is the use? They come to see the pastor, although my time comes next.

We filled the appointments on Sundays, December 3 and 10. We found a very large congregation at our first service. We had the pleasure to worship with them in the Sunday school, which was very active in every department. Roberta is well equipped for Sunday school work; Sunday school rooms for every department. We could not help but see the determination of the officials to promote the work this year. We are made to feel that this is going to be a great year in the history of this church.

In coming to this people we came without a car, the one we had being completely worn out. They immediately made arrangements and we now have a car of which we are very proud. We are greatly indebted to these good people not only for the car, but other needed things they have helped us to get. Brother Mike Cochran sent a radio up to the parsonage several days ago. We are greatly enjoying the radio. Thanks, Bro. Cochran. Mrs. Zeb Cochran, Mrs. Blackwelder and Mrs. Carter have been supplying us with fresh milk and butter.

Our Sunday school last Sunday decided to give the offering of each first Sunday to the Children's Home. We are sending the offering of the second Sunday this month in order not to miss December.

The time of our services will be: Sunday school at 9:45 a. m.; preaching services each Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m.; Christian Enedavor at 6 p. m.

The ladies are planning a Christmas program; a Christmas pageant will be the main feature of the program. A heavy-burdened Christmas tree will be unloaded after the program.

We were delighted to have Brother Lloyd Love, of Concord, call a few days ago. We are always delighted to have any of our preacher brothers visit us.

In all of our new duties here and the making of new friends, our minds run back to the great mountains and the two years' experience with His people there. We found some of God's great people there, and our heart is filled with love for these people whom we learned to love, and we now breathe a prayer to Him whom we strive to serve for a year of great success for them. I trust that Brother Huss will have the greatest success this year with this people that they have had in years. Democrat charge is growing and I long to see it measure up to the average charge.

Our first quarterly conference will be held on Friday evening, December 15th, at 6 o'clock. EARL A. COOK, Pastor.

* * *

Union Chapel, Granville Charge.—We are glad to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Spencer back with us again, and let us show them how pleased we are through our loyalty to church and church work. Mr. Spencer brought a most inspiring sermon Sunday, using as his Scripture the 12th chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Romans, first 15 verses, and using as a text Galations 2:20, "Christ liveth in me."

We are hoping to have special Christmas services on next fourth Sunday.

The quarterly conference will be held at Rehoboth next Saturday, December 16. Our members are urged to attend.

The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary will hold its regular monthly meeting with Mrs. John Floyd on Friday night.

Our church is putting forth much effort to improve in singing. Music adds so much to the life of the church services. We are hoping to improve in this and many other things for the coming year.

MRS. E. C. HUFF, Reporter.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.—Another conference year has come and gone. Many hearts have been made glad and many made sad, but the hearts of the people in Granville circuit were indeed made glad when they found that their beolved pastor, Bro. C. L. Spencer, had been returned to them for another year. We are all so glad to welcome him and his dear wife back again.

Death has again come into our midst and taken from us one of our faithful members, Mr. T. V. Bobbitt. We extend to the family our deepest sympathy in this sad hour. May God bless and comfort them and enable them to say, "Not my will but thine be done."

We are trying to build up our Sunday school attendance, which has fallen off since cold weather has started. Why is it that cold weather never keeps people from going to town on Saturday evening, but just let a little frost come and how they do hate to get out to church. But let us do as Paul did, "Put on the whole armor of God," and it will have to be something very serious to keep us away from God's house.

Christmas is almost here, and, dear friends, while you are planning and buying for your own loved ones let us not forget our little ones at High Point that has no mother or father to plan and buy for them.

Wishing everyone a Merry Christmas,
REPORTER.

Flat Rock.—It has been a long time since there has been any kind of a report from Flat Rock church. That does not mean that everyone has been asleep. Instead of sleeping some, I think, some have lost sleep, trying to plan how to meet the financial needs of the church for the past year.

There have not been many big things to report, and we often think the little happenings not worth reporting. Nothing is little, if it advances our Father's cause.

At the last appointment of last Conference year we elected the same staff of church officers with the exception of a new reporter.

We are glad to have our new pastor, Rev. C. B. Way, in the parsonage this year. He has filled two appointments at Flat Rock and preached two instructive sermon to two large congregations.

We are planning and hoping for a congenial year between pastor and people in good works for the Lord's cause.

The first quarterly meeting will be held at Bethel Saturday before the first Sunday in January, 1934.

Our Aid Society is progressing under the efficient officers, Miss Ella Fields, president, and Mrs. Willis Johnson, secretary-treasurer. Our society is offering for sale to anyone inteested a nice new quilt for five dollars.

The Christmas entertainment will be given December 23, at 7 p. m.

Richland Charge.—In leaving Greensville Charge, we left behind many good friends whom we were sorry to leave. But in coming to Richland Charge we are finding others that are proving to be good and true.

The work here seems to be starting off nicely, and we are enjoying the fellowship of our new-made friends, and our work with them. We are looking forward to a good year together in the advancing of our Master's kingdom.

The people here have been very kind and thoughtful of us. They began at once to supply our needs. The deluge came last week when members from all the churches came in and gave us such a pounding as I believe few have ever seen. I wish I might gave names and articles of all that we received, but this would be impossible. I would be glad to compare poundings with Dr. Taylor. How does this sound? 115 pounds sugar, 120 pounds flour, 45 pounds lard, 12 pounds coffee. Not only these things mentioned but almost everything else needed to supply our needs for some time.

Not only the members of Richland charge, but many of the members of our church in Asheboro have been very kind and thoughtful of us in supplying our needs, and making it as comfortable and pleasant for us as possible. We pray God's blessing on all these good people. These things inspire us to give our best with them in service for our Lord and Master.

With all good wishes to the Herald and its readers for a Happy Christmas and a fruitful New Year.
R. L. HETHCOX.

Lincolnton.—The work at Lincolnton is going forward nicely. The outlook for the future is indeed most encouraging. We believe we will have the best year in our history. Our good pastor is back on the job after attending Annual Conference and things are already going at top speed. We have a mighty good pastor and the church is no doubt in the best condition now that it has been in a good number of years.

Our Sunday school is making a splendid record under the most efficient leadership of our good superintendent, Bro. D. B. Johnson. We have an average attendance around 165; offering, $15.00 to $20.00. All the teachers are very earnest and efficient workers.

The C. E. Society is a most interesting group of young people. It is an inspiration to anyone to join with them in their meeting. They are a willing bunch of boys and girls, always ready to lend a helping hand when needed. Our church is proud of them, and justly so.

The board of stewards is working a new plan to finance the church this year, and if it proves successful you will hear more about it later. The church has made its goal for the new year to pay every claim. We are praying that God will bless us in our efforts and desire your prayers, too, asking the prayers of all who read this, and especially our old and new friends.
E. E. EUREY.

Henderson.—Sunday morning, December 3, Dr. L. W. Gerringer preached a wonderful sermon to us, his text being "How Much? As Much As In Me Is." How well his thoughts were all through the sermon, and at the conclusion how emphatically he brought out the part of co-operating with all the members in pledging to the church, not just our bit, but the best that's in us, in prayer, in song, in attendance and in financing.

Our first quarterly coference met December 6th. Dr. Gerringer led the devotionals and emphasized our duty to God in the church.

C. L. Finch was elected by the quarterly conference to succeed Brother T. J. Evans. Bro. Evans is to be congratulated on the splendid work he accomplished while in this office, and we all regret that his business makes it impossible for him to continue.

The quarterly conference voted to accept the budget for the year, and that an every-member canvass be made Sunday afternoon, December 10, by the board of stewards.

Thanksgiving services were observed at 10 o'clock in union service at the Presbyterian church. Our regular Thanksgiving offering was taken Sunday morning, December 3, for the Children's Home.

The Philathea class held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Annie Mae McIntosh Wednesday evening, December 6.

Mrs. C. F. Tankersley, Jr., presided in the absence of the president. The devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Clyde L. Finch. During the business period new officers for the year were elected as follows:

President, Mrs. Alvin Nuckles; vice-president, Mrs. E. O. Faulkner; secretary, Mrs. Annie Mae McIntosh; assistant secretary, Mrs. T. J. Evans; treasuer, Miss Lucy Taylor; teacher, Mrs. Clyde L. Finch; assistant teacher, Mrs. J. M. Baity; reporter, Miss Elsie Mustian.

Plans for the coming year were made and a good deal of interest shown.

At the conclusion of the meeting the hostess, assisted by Mrs. D. T. Beckham, served a delicious salad course.
C. L. FINCH, Reporter.

Bethany, Randolph.—Our pastor, Bro. Suits, filled his regular appointment Sunday afternoon. The attendance was not large. I think those present were inspired by his sermon, his subject being "Walking With God." We think this is a wonderful text to begin the year with. How different the life of the church would be if the members were walking close to God, and we believe there are some members at this place who are determined to walk close to God.

We are very glad to have Bro. Suits and family with us for another year. While the financial conditions are not so good, we really think this year will be much better, as the interest seems to be improving.

The Ladies Aid met Saturday afternoon with Mrs. Raymond Word and Mrs. Ira Word. A small number of ladies were present. The president, Mrs. A. T. Allred, presided. After the business a delightful social hour was enjoyed. Our next meeting will be at the church on January 6th.

The friends of Bro. Mike Word will be glad to know he is some better.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely under the management of Bro. Gaster.

Best wishts to the Herald and its readers.
MRS. C. T. REDDING, Reporter.

Flat Rock.—Our services at Gideon's Grove and Flat Rock churches last Sunday were well attended. It was the pleasure of the writer and family to attend the Sunday school session at Gideon's Grove. Rev. G. A. Middleton, the superintendent, was present and in his place. He performed double duty by teaching the adult class composed of men and women. The church service was largely attended and the people gave splendid attention to the message of the pastor. After the service the pastor and family went to the home of Bro. R. W. Pegram, having had a previous invitation to dine with him and his family. We enjoyed a good dinner in this splendid home. The occasion was sort of a family reunion, as all of the children and grand-children were at home for the day.

We did not arrive in time for the Sunday school at Flat Rock, which is held in the afternoon on the second Sunday. There was a large congregation present for the preaching service at 3 o'clock and the people gave excellent attention. Bro. M. W. Thomas, teacher of the adult class in the Sunday school, was absent because of sickness. We were glad to learn that he was not seriously ill.

Three of the churches on Flat Rock Charge are preparing Christmas programs, Bethel, Gideon's Grove and Flat Rock. Gideon's Grove will render their program on Friday night of next week. Bethel and Flat Rock will have their programs on Saturday night of next week.

Bro. R. W. Pegram, of Gideon's Grove church, has joined the family of Herald readers, having given his subscription last Sunday. We hope that many others who are not subscribers will do as Bro. Pegram has done, and help Flat Rock Charge reach its quota during 1934.

The people of Flat Rock Charge continue to remember their pastor and family with suitable gifts, for which we are thankful.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Bethel church Saturday afternoon of this week, beginning at 2 o'clock. We are expecting a good attendance of the officials and others from the different churches. Plans will be made for some major improvements at the parsonage and other important business transacted.

Our services for next Sunday will be at Palestine church at 11 a. m. and Bethel church at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The service at Palestine will be the first for the new Conference year.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Maple Spring Churih, Forsyth Charge.—We were very glad indeed to have the Annual Conferenie return to us our beloved pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter. Mr. Hunter brought to us his first message of the new Conference year on Sunday, December 3rd, at 11 o'clock, after which a brief installation of new churih officers was held.

We now have a Christian Endeavor Society which meets on Sunday afternoons at 6:30 o'clock. The young people are taking great interest in this new organization, and as a church we feel it will be a great success under the splendid leadership of Mrs. Ira W. Baity.

Mr. Speare gave an illustrated lecture on "The Life of Christ" at the church the fourth Sunday evening. A large crowd attended. A silver offering was taken under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary.

We are planning to have a Christmas entertainment. Mrs. R. A. Hunter will have charge.

The first quarterly conference will meet at this church Monday night, December 11, at 7:30 o'clock.

MRS. E. N. GRUBBS, Reporter.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—We are glad to have Rev. E. A. Bingham again. On Sunday he preached a good sermon from the text, "Why stand ye here all the day idle? The answer was because no man had hired them." We should ask ourselves the question, "Why are we so idle and careless when there is so much to do?"

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Bingham and children with us in our home for a short while Sunday and to take dinner with us. We are always glad to have them visit us.

We hope that all will start the new year right and not be idle.

Our sypmathy goes out to the sick and makes us think that we should work while we can and try to help anybody today. We should help our pastor by praying for him and trying to pay him a little all along, and try to encourage him.

Quarterly conference will be held on Saturday evening at 1:30 at Lineberry before the fifth Sunday in December.

I have a letter from Dr. and Mrs. Dixon asking me to help collect coupons or anything that will help the children. We would like to help them. If all help a little they will be helped a lit.

Wishing all a Merry Christmas and a happy New Year. ABIGAIL COGGIN.

◆

Concord, Saxapahaw Charge.—We were very glad indeed to have Brother Loy and family back with us for another year. We hope that we may be able to do a greater work for the Master this year than ever before. Mr. Loy gave us a fine message at his first appointment for the new Conference year. He pointed out to us some of the goals that we should set in order to have a successful year. Would that everybody would put for his or her goal in the beginning of the new year to do more work for the Lord.

Our hearts were made sad by the passing of one of our members, Mrs. Elwood Andrews. Mrs. Andrews had been in declining health for several years. The funeral was conducted Thanksgiving Day by her pastor, Rev. W. M. Loy.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Roberson was buried Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. T. H. More is seriously ill. We hope that she may be speedily restored to health, and be able to get back home. She is in Wesley Long Hospital. Brother Moore is able to work again after being sick for some time.

Mr. B. S. Curl and Mrs. Ozie Roberson were married at the parsonage last Monday evening.

Best wishes to the Herald.

BESSIE COBLE.

Fairview Church, Anderson Charge.—The beginning of the new Conference year finds us full of pep and eager to help our new pastor, Rev. Robert Short, who has been bringing us some splendid sermons for the past two Sundays. We are planning to show our appreciation by surprising him with a pounding Thursday night.

As the weather grows colder, we are looking forward to the Yuletide season, especially the program which is being planned by the Ladies' Aid Society. This program will be given Friday night, December 22, at the church. Everybody is invited and asked to bring a small gift to be sent to the Children's Home.

Our Sunday school is steadily growing in spite of the inclement weather. Mr. T. B. Nalley, our superintendent, entertained the Beginner, Primary, Junior and Intermediate classes at a turkey supper at his home on Thanksgiving evening. Before and after supper the children were led in games and contests by Mr. Nalley and Mrs. Henry Phillips. They all report a fine time. The Sunday school has decided to take an offering every second Sunday for the Children's Home.

Our Christian Endeavor Society is one of our liveliest organizations. Everybody seems to manifest much interest. During the business session last Sunday night wereleased our president, Miss Montez Henderson, at her own request, as she has served us well in this capacity, and elected Mrs. Woodrow Lolles to succeed her. Our other officers are: First vice-president, Lucille Freeman; second vice-president, Helen Connelly; secretary and treasurer, Montez Henderson. New committees were also appointed. We feel and pray that great work is going to be done by our Christian Endeavor Society this year with the hearty co-operation of officers and members.

The children and grandchildren of one of our oldest members, Mr. Robert l. Wyatt, gathered at the old homeplace in honor of his 76th birthday on Sunday, December 3rd. In spite of the rain they all had a good time together.

We are sorry to hear that Mrs. Grady Foster is ill.

We extend our sympathy to Misses Ethel and Mae Finley in the continued illness of their father who is at present a patient at the Greenville City Hospital. These young ladies are faithful members of our Christian Endeavor Society.

One of the twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Nalley was buried in the churchyard yesterday. The mother and other son are doing nicely.

With best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to the Herald and its readers. REPORTER.

Worthville.—Our Sunday school opened this morning with an attendance of 97. Our Sunday school is doing fine under the direction of C. F. Allred, superintendent. There are more who could attend more regularly and we want our attedance to grow larger. Mr. Trogdon suggested a contest between Randleman and Worthville.

Mr. Trogdon preached a very inspiring sermon this morning on "Conquering Faith." His text was taken from Luke 5:16-26. He stressed the importance of saving souls for Christ, and the need of the church as a whole getting to work.

Four classes in our Sunday school pledged to accept four months on the "Circuit Minnis Calendar" which Mrs. Trogdon is preparing. We hope to raise this money very soon.

Mid-week prayer meeting was conducted by Mr. Fred Allred. The young people are showing right much interest in these meetings, but we need more of the older people.

The Junior-Philatheas met with Mrs. Leonard Ward Friday night. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Vera Allred. We were than led in prayer by Mr. J. A. Ferree. There were nine membes of the class pesent. After the business hour refreshments were served. Th class will meet with Miss Jeannette Ward next month.

The first quarterly meeting of the Randleman charge will be held at Mt. Lebanon Saturday at 2 o'clock.

Harris Chapel, Vance Circuit.—We heard our new pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, the first time Sunday, December 10th, at 11 o'clock. He gave us a good sermon and we all enjoyed hearing him. I feel sure everyone is going to like him. We were all made to feel very sad at the loss of Rev. J. W. Braxton as our pastor, for he had been with us so long we felt like he belonged to us. We were greatly disappointed when we learned we couldn't have him preach for us another year. But the best of friends must part, and we wish him much success in his new work. We seem to have a fine man sent to us to work with and we extend to him a hearty welcome. I'm sure if we will all co-operate with him we can accomplish great things. Our crowd was small Sunday due to cold weather and much sickness in the community. We have missed having Sunday school for three Sundays on account of sickness in our superintendent's family. His wife has been very ill; also his small son had a very hard case of pneumonia. We are glad to report they are both better and we had Sunday school Sunday as usual.

Mr. C. S. Burroughs, one of our substantial members, has been sick; we are glad that he is also improved.

It was announced that the first quarterly conference would be held at Flat Rock church Saturday, December 16. Bro. Broome urged that every official member be present. I think it is the duty of all official members not only of Harris' Chapel, but of all the other churches to attend these quarterly meetings and stand behind Bro. Broome in all he undertakes to do.

Mr. Otha Robertson and Miss Irene Ellington were married on Saturday, December 9, 1933. Both these young people are members of our church and we extend to them our hearty congratulations and wish them much happiness and success through life.

MRS. J. B. GLOVER, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—Pounded again! Yesterday when Mrs. Williams and I went to the car, after the service at Chestnut Ridge, we found it impossible to get in the car until we rearranged the packages, etc., which had been placed there while we were detained in the church.

We will not attempt to give names of donors; God knows them all. May He bless each one. May we be of service to this people.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Mebane.—We are very much pleased to have Rev. E. Lester Ballard come to us for this Conference year. Although Bro. Ballard has not been able to get in the parsonage, he has already proved to us that he is a wide-awake pastor. He is intensely interested in the work and his sermons are uplifting. Mr. and Mrs. Ballard are being cordially received by the church, and we are anticipating a pleasant and profitable year's work.

The Ladies' Aid met Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. C. Nicholson. A large number of members and three visitors were present.

The first quarterly conference was held Wednesday night immediately after the prayer service. A goodly number present, and the business transacted, thus enabling us to begin the new year aright.

Choir practice was begun Friday night and we are hoping with the help of Bro. Ballard to again have a good choir.

The Circles of the Auxiliary met Monday night with good attendance.

Mr. J. H. Payne's class had charge of the opening of the Sunday school Sunday morning. These children are always interested and willing. At the opening on next Sunday Mrs. Ballard will give us a story. We are planning for our Christmas program. A committee from the Sunday school is working with the pastor. We are expecting a real interesting program in observance of the White Christmas.

Bro. Ballard's announcements for the midweek prayer service sound as though we will all be well gratified for attending, and we hope for a good attendance.

Mr. E. H. Robertson, a member of our church, lost his home by fire on Thanksgiving morning. Nothing much was saved. Our church people have donated things to make them comfortable in some rooms of a nearby neighbor.

We are hoping that our pastor will be able to move this week and then we expect the work to move along nicely.

MRS. H. C. N.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—We are indeed glad to have Rev. J. L. Trollinger and family with us for another year, and we are sure that if each church will co-operate with him we will have a successful year, for he seems more determined than ever to do his part. He has filled two appointments at this place since Conference, and we are looking forward to having him with us on Christmas Sunday. Plans are being made to have our Christmas tree and program on Thursday night before Christmas, December 21st.

Attendance at Sunday school and church service is good.

Christian Endeavor was conducted by Miss Margaret Bartee last Sunday night.

Mr. Henry Wilson and family, who have been living at Winston-Salem for several years, have moved back to their home place. We are glad to welcome them back into the community and to have their help in the church work.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

First Church, High Point.—The customary services were held Sunday, beginning with the Sabbath school under the leadership of Supt. J. H. Jennings at 9:45 o'clock. At the morning worship hour opening at 10:55 with prelude on the organ by Miss Beulah Moton and the offertory solo, "The Blind Ploughman," by Arthur Fidler, Universal Bible Sunday was observed. As the worshippers were escorted to their seats, the ushers gave each of them a small folder in the form of a Bible. This contained numerous quotations from the Scriptures on "The Light Shineth in Darkness," and was later used for a responsive reading by the minister and the congregation. Rev. Mr. Farmer delivered a thoughtful and earnest discourse on the theme, "The Word of God and the Believer" or "Is the Bible Infallible?" He said that in New York there is a bookshop, called the Bible House, which has existed 117 years. There are various ideas among men about the Bible, but it goes on through the years claiming the interest of millions of people. The word infallible means to be exempt from error, and when the Roman Catholics say that the Pope is infallible they mean that he is divinely guarded from error. The Word was given to us by God himself. Whoever held the pen that wrote this book, God himself was the author. It is the only book of all in the world that makes us wise unto salvation. We do not read and study it as regularly as we should; we do not practice its precepts so as to meet adversity calmly. It is a book of a changed life, and it makes no compromise with hypocrisy or sham. It is the only book that gives us a full guarantee of our inheritance of immortal life. Lastly, it is the only book that gives us the map and chart to lead our lives aright. Henry Drummond said that we could not stand what life deals out to us, if we did not have the Bible for comfort and assurance.

At the evening worship period, of which the minister was in charge, the subject was "The Problem of Pleasures." The general field of amusements was covered with special reference to the censorship of movies recently begun by the city council, when the picture, "Elysia" was closed by their order. At this service "Search Me, O God," was sung as a duet by Miss Helen Johnson and W. C. Ferree, Jr.

This week will be a full one for First church. Monday afternoon the Woman's Auxiliary held its monthly meeting with a splendid attendance. Mrs. J. C. Whitesell was in the chair. After the conclusion of business, a delightful program was presented. Little Miss Doris Koonce played an instrumental solo very sweetly. A living tableau, which represented Mary with the Holy Child and the Wise Men and the Shepherds coming from afar and kneeling in adoration at their feet. This scene was very impressive with the Star of Bethlehem shedding light over it, and the sweet voices in the rear that sang Christmas songs, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing," and others. Miss Mary Young, of the college, read the account of the birth of Jesus and adoration of the shepherds and three Wise Men from the East.

Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock the Senior C. E. Society held its weekly meeting, and a special program under the supervision of Miss Myrtle Davis, consisting of a girls' quartette, violin and flute solos, was rendered with pleasing effect. Mrs. C. E. Steidley, who is an interesting speaker, made an impressive talk to the young people.

On Tuesday evening the Board of Stewards, Arnold J. Koonce, chairman, has planned an old-fashioned Christmas party for the entire church. Every member, including the Sabbath school and C. E. Society and their friends, are invited to attend.

On Thursday evening a chicken-pie supper with accessories will be given under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary. Many plans are being made and each member is asked to take care of two tickets. A bountiful and appetizing meal will be served for 40 cents per plate.

A very splendid production of Millay's "Aria Da Capo" was presented by the Laboratory Theatre of High Point College on Thursday and Friday evenings of last week. Audiences that filled the auditorium to capacity witnessed this play, which many have declared the very best given in High Point for several years. These young people including Miss Ina McAdams, of First church, have made a decided contribution to the cultural life of this community. Under the training of Dr. Claiborne R. Hill, of the English department, they, who were inexperienced and crude, have become clever and artistic in the handling of properties, in gesticulation, in movements about the stage, and in enunciation. This production has placed the local college players second to none.

Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Pickens have moved into their attractive new residence on Florham Drice, Emerywood West.

Miss Dorothy Rankin has returned from a delightful visit to friends in Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md., and New York City.

An encouraging and hopeful sign of the next year's work is the fact that 283 members out of a possible 400 made pledges during the Every Member Canvass, and Treasurer Rankin reports that more money has been paid on the budget to date than up to January 15 last year.

C. L. Gray, Jr., who is a student in Duke University Medical School, Durham, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Gray, recently. He is much pleased with his work there.

We are pleased to announce that little Miss Hazel Zimmerman, who has been ill, is improving.

Mr. C. C. Robbins and sons, Chas., Jr., and Frank, have proven themselves to be mighty hunters. On a recent hunting expedition to Paradise Point they brought down two bears and two deer.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin R. Green spent last Sunday with friends in Charlotte.

Mt. Moriah, Cleveland Circuit.—We have completed another Conference year, which we believe has been the best in the history of Mount Moriah. We believe that everything that has been done was done for the upbuilding of our church.

The attendance at church services and Sunday school has averaged a good mark.

With the old year gone we are hoping to make tihs a better year than last. In this, the beginning of a new Conference year, we are experiencing something we haven't experienced in five years, that of giving up our beloved pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge. Mr. Ridge, we will miss you and your family, but we will not ever forget you. You have meant much to us; even though we regret to give up Mr. Ridge, we welcome Rev. Mr. Troxler in our church. Our prayer is that we will go forward co-operating with him and him with us, as we have formerly done.

Mr. Troxler preached Sunday morning at 11 o'clock to a fair attendance, using for his subject part of the 28th verse of the 17th chapter of the Acts: "For in him we live, and move, and have our being."

We were glad to have with us last Sunday some members that haven't been with us for some time.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Kistler's Church on Saturday before the first Sunday in January. Preaching at 11 o'clock, dinner, and the business session in the afternoon.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—When conference came to a close our pastor was sent to Creswell charge. We miss Bro. Bingham and wish him much success in the uplift of the kingdom. We gladly welcome Bro. R. L. Vickory as our pastor for the coming year. He was with us the first Sunday night, and second Sunday morning. Sunday morning he read from Hosea 14 and Luke 15. His subject was "Sin, Repentance, and Confession." This was a beautiful message of the prodigal son. He pictured out the father as our Heavenly Father, and the son a sinner. Everybody seems to love Pastor Vickory.

Our Sunday school is growing under our good superintendent, Mr. Edward Hawkins, we are proud to say.

There were seven entered in the essay contest, Misses Elizabeth, Clara and Mildred Hawkins, Miss Virginia Pittard, Willis and Russell Hawkins and the writer, which was given Thanksgiving night. The judges were Miss Virginia Cook, Mr. E. B. Pair, and Mr. Leo Pittard. First prize was awarded to Willis Hawkins; second to Miss Mildred Hawkins.

The writer held prayer service last first Sunday morning after Sunday school. I am glad to say one of my Sunday school pupils, Mr. Alvin Hawkins, prayed at this service. The class leader, Mr. C. F. Hawkins, called on Miss Erma Hawkins to lead the next meeting.

Next Saturday, December 16, 1933, an errand, meeting will be held at Littleton church at 10 o'clock; first quarterly conference will meet at 2 o'clock.

On next Sunday our Sunday school officers will be elected and the time set for our Christmas tree.

Mrs. A. D. Pittard was the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. W. Hale, last Tuesday.

Misses Fannie Mae Elizabeth Hale and Eunice Green were the guests of Misses Virginia and Hattie Pittard Sunday; also, Miss Helen Fowler was in the home of Miss Elizabeth Hawkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Carpenter were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Hawkins Sunday.

One of our members, Mr. Lorenzo Pittard, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Pittard, was married November 15, 1933, to Miss Loretta Lucille More, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Moore, of Roanoke Rapids. They were married in the M. E. church of Roanoke Rapids, of which she is a member.

Spring Church Charge.—Everything seems to be going in a normal way. The first quarterly conference was well attended, and forward steps were taken.

The people continue to be mindful of our needs and prove it by their gifts. In fact, the support from every angle is increasing.

A circuit installation service for all officials and Sunday school teachers will be held at Spring Church on the fifth Sunday in December at 11 a. m.

Since Conference the Herald has been placed in seven homes where it had not formerly gone.

Mount Pleasant, North Davidson.—We are beginning a new year with a new pastor. We were disappointed that Bro. Loy had to leave us, but it seemed that it was God's will that he should go and that Rev. C. L. Grant should take his place. We pray God's richest blessings upon Mr. Loy and family.

With the help of our new pastor we hope to do greater work this year than ever before.

On the fourth Sunday morning Bro. Grant brought to us his first inspiring sermon. The second Sunday night he brought us another of his wonderful sermons. Taking for his text Hebrews 2:3: "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" We should take more heed to the question Paul asked the Hebrews. Life must not be neglected. Neglect causes many lives to be wrecked. If we neglect the duties God has planned for us, how are we going to escape? Plan to escape before it is everlastingly too late. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

The Woman's Auxiliary met for its regular meeting Sunday night.

The C. E. Society has changed its time of meeting to the second Sunday night at six o'clock. Miss Helen Hilton had charge of the inspiring program. Bro. Grant met with us and we were very glad to have him, and his family, with us, and we hope they can meet with us often. We hope to do a great work this year.

Let me remind you, again, of the Christmas entertainment Saturday night, December 23.

The quarterly meeting will be held at this church Thursday, December 28.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—We were very sorry indeed to lose Rev. H. F. Fogleman as pastor, but we congratulate Fallston Charge on securing him as their pastor. Mr. and Mrs. Fogleman have many friends at Hollister that will never forget them, and we will continue to remember them in our prayers. We hope their efforts in trying to preach the Gospel of Christ will be even more successful there than here.

A very large congregation was present Sunday night to welcome our new pastor, Rev. O. C. Loy. The people enjoyed his sermon very much. We feel we are very fortunate in having Rev. and Mrs. O. C. Loy as our leaders. We were very glad to have Mrs. Loy and children worship with us in our service Sunday night. Let us assure our pastor of our prayers and co-operation, for the pastor alone cannot accomplish the things he would like to unless he has the prayers and co-operation of the people.

The Sunday school is getting along fine under the leadership of our new superintendent, Mr. L. W. Gupton.

Preparations are being made for a Christmas program and tree to be given on Tuesday night, December 26, at 7 o'clock.

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet Tuesday afternoon of this week with Mrs. W. H. Howerton. The writer will conduct the devotional service.

Miss Gladys Crawley has been elected reporter for this year. I am sure she will be a real good reporter and will keep the readers of the Herald informed of the work here.

West End, Greensboro.—The entire membership, as well as the friends of West End, were made happy when the Conference saw fit to send to us for his second year Rev. T. J. Whitehead. Mr. Whitehead has already proved himself a very efficient leader, and under his direction and supervision the various organizations of the church, we feel, are making fine progress.

The church officers and committees for the year 1933-34 have been elected and are planning and organizing the year's work in a very enthusiastic manner. Generally speaking, the prospects for 1934 at West End are promising.

The Sunday school, under the leadership of Mr. L. W. Routh, is showing marked improvement. The secretary, Mr. S. E. Ratledge, stated Sunday that for the past 10 Sundays we had had an average attendance of 220 as compared with 181 during the same period last year.

Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Auxiliary met Monday, December 4, at 7:30 with Mrs. A. E. Pleasants and Mrs. Duncan, on Silver Avenue, as Joint hostesses. The devotional period was in charge of Mrs. L. W. Routh. The business session was presided over by the chairman, Mrs. A. E. Pleasants. Reports showed: 68 visits and six vases of flowers to sick; clothing, eight meals and $6 in cash to needy; 16 phone calls and 10 days nursing. The dues and freewill offering amounted to $12. Following the business session a social hour, carrying out the Christmas idea, was enjoyed by the members of the Circle.

The hour of our evening worship has recently been changed from 7:30 p. m. to 5 p. m. These vesper services are proving very popular. The music for these programs is in charge of the newly organized young people's choir, which is directed by Mr. L. M. Foust. PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

Calvary, Greensboro.—A welcome was extended our new pastor, Dr. J. E. Pritchard, and Mrs. Pritchard, last Friday evening when our members and some friends entetained informally in the church hut in their honor.

Welcome was extended from the churches in Greensboro by Dr. C. E. Hodgin, pastor of Winstminster Presbyterian church; from all the Methodist Protestant churches of the city by Rev. T. J. Whitehead, pastor of West End M. P. church; from Calvary by Rev. T. F. McCulloch, a member of Calvary church. We were also delighted to have with us: Rev. Geo. L. Curry, pastor of Tabernacle Charge, and Mrs. Curry; Rev. J. Elwood Caroll, pastor of Grace M. P. church; Rev. J. W. Braxton, pastor of Mount Pleasant Charge, and Mr. J. Norman Wills, of the city. Each speaker spoke interestingly.

Dr. Pritchard made a gracious response, expressing his pleasure at having Calvary as his new charge and his appreciation for the courtesy shown him and Mrs. Pritchard.

Our program otherwise included music. A solo, a special arrangement of "All For You," was sung by Mrs. Robah H. Fields, with Miss Vivian Sullivan at the piano; a solo, "End of a Perfect Day," was sung by Mrs. Mary Bisset, with Mrs. Robah H. Fields at the piano.

Guests were received at 7:30 by Mrs. D. E. Curtis, president of the Woman's Auxiliary; Dr. and Mrs. Pritchard, Mrs. M. H. Greer and Mrs. Howard R. Neece.

Tea was poured by Mrs. J. F. Williams and Mrs. Roy Woodburn. Those assisting with serving were: Misses Elizabeth Williams, Ruth Laughlin, Ruby Blaylock, Mary Frances Blaylock and Rebecca Coble.

The tea table was centered by a red begonia which was banked with ivy and about which red candles in silver holders made a frame of light. The bright red of holly berries, wreaths and gaily decorated Christmas trees added greatly to the Christmas atmosphere.

Calvary members miss Dr. and Mrs. Bates, Misses Mary Margaret and Helen, but are glad they are happy in their new home.

We had quite a large attendance both at Sunday school and preaching last Sunday morning. Communion service was observed at the 11 o'clock hour. Dr. Pritchard preached in accordance with the service, using as his Scripture lesson a portion of the 19th chapter of the Gospel of St. John, his text being a part of the 30th verse, "It is finished," which were Christ's last words on the Cross. In place of the regular Sunday night service, a missionary play, "All in a Day's Work," was given by the young people of the church with Misses Edith Guthrie and Joe Coble, of High Point College, taking the leading parts. The Junior choir furnished the music for the evening.

The Christian Endeavor meeting was held at 6:45 o'clock with Miss Ruth Laughlin as leader.

The annual Christmas party and monthly meeting of the Friendly class was held at the home of Miss Pearl McCulloch, teacher of the class, Monday evening at 8 o'clock with 20 members and four visitors present. A regular business meeting preceded the program. A Christmas gift was presented Miss Pearl, who responded with words of appreciation.

A program consisting of Christmas music, both vocal and instrumental, was presented and a candle-lighting contest was enjoyed by everyone present.

While a march was played Christmas gifts were passed to each member.

The home was beautifully decorated with holly and ivy. Red candles burned throughout the rooms. An electrically lighted Christmas tree added very greatly to the appearance of the rooms.

Plans were made at the meeting to improve the appearance of our class room.

Circle No. 1, of which Mrs. C. M. Friddle is chairman, gave a chicken-pie supper, for the public, at the hut Tuesday evening.

The Myrtle Bates class held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. E. R. Ward Tuesday evening.

The Anna Starr class, of which Mrs. David Glass is teacher, gave Mrs. W. C. (Aunt Mary) Kennett, honorary member of the class, a surprise birthday party at her home on Martin street Thursday evening.

A meeting of the Boy Scouts will be held in the hut Fiday evening at 7:30.

The Woman's Auxiliary, of which Mrs. D. E. Curtis is president, will meet next Monday afternoon in the hut at 3 o'clock.

I am glad to report that Miss Velna McCulloch is steadily improving and expects to be back at church with us again soon.

Graham.—I am happy that the Conference saw fit to return me to Graham for the fourth year. I have been kindly received and there are many evidences that the people are determined to make this the best year yet.

Don S. Holt, our new Sunday school superintendent, with the hearty co-operation of his splendid wife, is starting the new Sunday school year with enthusiasm. And with the hearty co-operation of all the parents in getting their children to Sunday school on time his efforts will bear fruit. He is calling a meeting this week of his teachers to make definite plans for Christmas, which plans will be announced next Sunday.

James S. Cook, Jr., is the new president of the Christian Endeavor, and his earnestness and ability as a leader is already in evidence.

The Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. C. H. Love on Monday night of this week. While the attendance was not so large, due to unfavorable weather, yet the reports from the different circles were encouraging. More than $30 had been received during the past month. Mrs. C. C. Burke, their capable president, has proved herself a real leader.

There will be two Christmas services on Sunday. In the service Sunday evening special Christmas anthems will be presented by the members of the choir. The old Christmas carols will be sung in connection with the morning service.

We have been remembered with fresh meats and other useful things from Bros. John Amick's and Charlie Foushee's families.

Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Goley gave us our Thanksgiving cake.

The pastor and his family appreciate the spirit which prompted these gifts.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Rockingham.—We are glad to have Rev. C. W. Saunders and Mrs. Saunders with us for another conference year. Last year was Brother Saunders' first year on this charge. We feel that he has endeared himself to the people, and we trust that this will be a successful year. May God's richest blessings rest upon him and his work.

Brother Saunders filled his pulpit here Sunday morning and evening. He preached a very forceful sermon Sunday evening from the first Psalm. The theme in this fine sermon was that Christians should not stand in the way of sinners, but should do everything in their power to win them to the Christian way of living.

We have very good attendance at Sunday school, but owing to the night shift in the mills, the attendance at Wednesday evening prayer meeting is not so good. We ask that everyone that can will attend the prayer meetings because we feel that prayer meetings are uplifting to the church and community.

Best wishes to the Herald and the whole Conference work.

A merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all. MRS. E. H. PORTER, Reporter.

Albemarle.—We have a newly-elected reporter, and she has an assistant, but they have not begun to function yet, so I am dropping in a line.

We are starting in our seventh year at Albemarle with much to encourage us. On the first Sunday in this Conference year we had the pleasure of receiving into the church Mr. and Mrs. Paul Helms. Mr. Helms comes to us from the M. E. Church, South. Mrs. Helms, a daughter of Bro. Walter Sides, comes to us from the Friendship M. P. Church at Plyler. They are already taking an interest in the activities of the church.

Our church here is still laboring under a great financial burden. Several times it seemed to be more than we could carry, but we have a people here that have shown such a spirit of sacrifice and made much heroic efforts to carry on, that we feel that their efforts and faith will not be unrewarded. It's a great privilege to labor with such people. I have as much inspiration to preach in my seventh year as I did in my first.

Last week an attempt was made to pound the preacher, but a very rainy, bad night found only a few who had the courage to brave the bad weather and come. Others promised to slip in on us some other time. Those who came, however, brought enough to keep the wolf away from the parsonage door for a while longer. A very fine ham from Bro. C. L. Taylor will have to be taken in broken doses, as the preacher's family is not used to ham. Mrs. W. C. Russell, Mrs. C. S. Moton, Mr. Boyd Gantt, Mr. Hoyle Helms were among those who braved the weather on the night of the pounding.

Our faithful ladies put on a Thanksgiving dinner which netted them about $100.00.

We were very glad to see in our Sunday school and worship service Sunday Bros. C. J. Hatley, and D. F. Harkey. Bro. Hatley has been at Oteen Hospital for almost a year. Bro. Harkey has been confined to his room for several weeks with a complication of afflictions; both are much improved. Bro. Harkey is from the old schools of Methodists where they say Amen to the preacher. If you don't believe it helps, preacher, get someone to try it on you.

We are trusting for a good year despite the fact we are laboring under an almost impossible financial burden.

Pray for us that we may ahve the courage to fight on, and that the good Father in heaven will show us a way out of our financial difficulties. J. R. ANDERSON.

West End, Greensboro.—Our Annual Conference president, Dr. R. M. Andrews, was present and presided over the fourth quarterly conference of our church, which was held October 13, 1933, and among the reports received that evening was one, that of the class leaders, which, in Dr. Andrews' estimation, was outstanding, and he especially requested that this be sent to the Herald for publication. Dr. Andrews felt that this might be helpful to other class leaders.

Following is a summary of the report:

During the year 231 visits were made to the sick and in the interest of the church; 21 vases of flowers sent to sick; clothing, 55 meals, $6 given to needy; 13 prayer meetings conducted, and three prayers offered in bereaved homes; 62 phone calls in interest of sick; four cards to sick.

The 25th of January the pastor and people agreed to hold cottage prayer meetings in the homes each week rather than have the regular mid-week prayer service at the church. The membership was divided into four groups with a leader for each group. Attendance for these meetings from January 25 to March 11 (seven weeks) was 404, an average of 57.7 each week. These prayer meetings were supervised by the class leaders, as the pastor was out of town at this time.

Rehoboth, Creswell Circuit.—We are now entering a new Conference year. We are so thankful our new preacher got here last week and preached for us Sunday, for we would have hated so bad to be left without a preacher. How much we were grieved to give up Bro. Russell and his dear family; how we hated to give up Bro. Hethcox and his dear family, yet these changes must come. We pray for them all a prosperous year in the Master's service.

I saw in the Lexington report that Bro. Russell was elected assistant superintendent of the Sunday school. I'm so glad he is where he can do church work. Any Sunday school is fortunate to have a man with his knowledge of the Bible to work with them in any way in the church.

Our new pastor, Bro. Bingham, gave us a good sermon. We all like him and his wife and baby, and pray we may have a prosperous year. It's a great mistake to be so attached to a preacher you'll not welcome another and do the same for him. It's the Master's work, and if we have His Spirit we will stand by any minister Conference sends us, support him with our means and our presence.

I am trying hard to get our people at Rehoboth interested in our M. P. Herald. I hope I'll succeed, for you can not be an intelligent church member with reading the paper. How much I enjoy reading the paper; it seems like the reports from the various fields of work are more encouraging than ever. I read them all. I hope I'll be spared to attend Conference this coming year.

May God bless all of you.

SALLIE CHERRY DAVENPORT,
Reporter.

P. S.: I hope Creswell and the other churches will have a reporter so we can see how they are doing. S. C. D.

Friendship, Fallston Charge.—Our new pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, was with us the first Sunday night. The subject of his inspiring sermon was taken from the fourth verse of the first chapter of Ephesians.

On Tuesday evening members of all the churches on this charge met to welcome Rev. and Mrs. Fogleman with a pounding. Many things, from bags of flour to live chickens, were taken.

Our Christian Endeavor Society is having some interesting programs. We have 30 members. The majority of these are regular attendants. At the last meeting Cerelda Lackey was elected president, Vatha Wright, vice-president. We were glad to have Rev. and Mrs. Fogleman with us.

Mr. J. D. Shelton, son of our former pastor, Rev. A. D. Shelton, and Mrs. Shelton, has returned to complete his work in the Fallston High School.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Morgan, of Shelby, worshipped with us Sunday.

A BULLETIN IDEA FOR PASTORS

The Layman Company is now putting out its Tithing pamphlets in four-page Bulletin form, printed on two inside pages only, other two pages blank, for local material. The cost will give a saving of at least $5 per week to any pastor who uses four-page bulletins in his Sunday services. A good opportunity for five or ten weeks of tithe education without expense or special distribution. Thirty-two subjects to choose from. Sample set, 15 cents. Prices, 40 cents per 100; $3.00 per 1,000.

Please give your denomination, also please mention the Methodist Protestant Herald. The Layman Company, 730 Rush St., Chicago, Illinois.

SPECIAL LOOKING TO CHRISTMAS

Two men are working in the Children's Home this week, painting the chapel, the larger girls' social hall, and perhaps the dining room, by the kindness of Mr. C. F. Finch, of Thomasville. Then, too, we are already planning to order a car load of commercial lime for the farm, also the gift of Mr. Finch.

We greatly appreciate this timely help. May the Lord richly bless him.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

FIRST DISTRICT MEETING

A meeting in the First District for pastors, officials, and others, has been called for Saturday, December 16th. The place is Littleton M. P. church, at 10:30. This call has gone out to the charges on rather short notice. Dr. Andrews will be visiting a section of the district Sunday. He will be with us Saturday.

Christmas Day

A day of gifts, itself a gift,
It helps us all our burdens lift.
It cheers us up and makes us know
A greater love than man can show.

The day of all our days the best,
Reminder of eternal rest:
Most sacred day of all the year,
It makes us feel that God is near.

Most precious time, most holy day,
When God would show us His own way!
Thy holy day may we all keep,
And slumber not or fall asleep!

God a Safe Economist

What contentions there have been between nations and other groups of men over the possession of earthly territory! The Jews and Arabs are contending now over the possession of the land of Palestine. The contention for land has been almost worldwide. At the bottom of this contention is the fear that God has not made or will not make adequate provision for the support of all the sons of men.

Malthus taught that the population of the earth cannot exceed the means of supporting human life; self-evident; from this many have jumped to the conclusion that men must always live on the border land of want and misery. Jesus said, "The poor ye have with you always," but he also said that material blessing shall be added to those who first seek the blessings of the spirit. Men have seen that there is a connection between righteousness and material prosperity. The psalmist said, "I have been young and now am old; yet I have never seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread."

It is not reasonable that God would plant life on the earth and not make adequate provision for the preservation of life. God's provision for living creatures is amazing. Especially is this true of men. What a problem to care for the food supply of a great city like London or New York. But God never fails in its solution. Yet men are afraid to trust God and contend for more than their share of what God provides. In thus contending men dishonor God as well as themselves. One able to create a world can preserve it according to His purpose. If the time comes when the world of living beings shall perish, it will be when the world has completely served its purpose. When God says "Enough" the time of the fitting end will have come.

Atheistic unbelief is the ground for the unreasonable fears of men regarding earthly supplies. It is a disgrace for the children of men to contend about what their parents have provided for them. Much more is it a disgrace for the children of God to contend about what God has so wonderfully prepared for them. How absurd for the children of the Heavenly King to go whimpering through life in constant fear of want or poverty. God is a sure and adequate provider. He is not slack concerning His promises or His purposes. He knows how and has the will. Away from the earth with the fear that reflects on the character of God and fills men with evil foreboding!

The Buchmanites

Some people are wondering whether this eccentric body of religionists which is creating a sensation in London will turn out to be just a passing show or will it have serious results. It has not made a favorable impression on all Londoners. The archbishops, bishops and others in high authority are divided over it into contending factions. The archbishop of Canterbury denounces the movement as full of moral danger, leaving in its track intellectual and moral wrecks. Despite criticism and opposition, it has gathered to itself a great multitude, though it is not an organized body. It looks to us at this distance as though its promoters are just playing with religion. Their type of mankind lends itself to sensationalism rather than to rational living.

Their mode of receiving divine revelation is to sit down with pencil and paper and write the words that come to them in the quiet of their minds. One man thus "inspired" took his "divine message" to Mr. Buchman for his approval.

We may be under misconception, but we do not expect the movement to go deep or last very long in its present form.

—Talk about your poundings! The editor has just received a compounding! Dr. J. E. Pritchard came bringing it in his own hands, a fine variety of garden products of his own raising, assisted by Mrs. Pritchard. This was mixed (compounded) in artistic style with a view to improving taste and healthfulness. We thank the provident and generous givers and expect to enjoy this compounding for its sake and their sake.

—Next week is the HERALD's winter vacation week. We wish all our readers the best time there is to be had. It is pleasing to think that all may be happy or at least hopeful.

—We thank kind readers for the beautiful Christmas cards we are receiving through the mails. They help to bring us cheer.

HOW GOOD IS YOUR RELIGION?

By Luther K. Long

The search for a satisfying religion is a task with which many people are concerned. When once established in a certain faith, most persons are inclined to end the quest right there. Satisfied that what they have found is all they need, they do not trouble themselves to look further.

It is, however, a characteristic of some seekers to continue the study of religion without end. They study not only their own particular brand of religion, but all sorts of faiths—hoping to enrich their beliefs with the thinking of other seekers and to improve their lives by other methods. Professor T. N. Carver of Harvard is one such inquirer. He claims an interest in the search for the best religion.

Professor Carver asks the question: "What is the best religion?" His answer is: "That is the best religion which (1) acts most powerfully as a spur to energy, and (2) directs that energy most productively." I think there should be added a third element, namely, quiet. There is a place in the best religion for silence, for calm. As the scripture has it: "In quietness possess ye your souls." In other respects Professor Carver's definition seems adequate.

Let us notice some religions:

Mohammedanism is a decided spur to energy. The call to prayer is made in a loud voice from many minarets. The multitudes prostrate themselves, wherever they are, and call upon Allah. Pilgrimages are made by the faithful—often at great expense—and other activities are inspired by their religion.

Roman Catholicism spurs its devotees to energetic attendance at church services. The priests are constantly in motion bowing, making the sign of the cross, swinging the censor, sprinkling with holy water, and movements connected with the sacrifice of the mass. Something is doing all the while. Outside the house of worship are hospitals, schools, orphanages, and other institutions where priests and nuns are constantly busy.

In the case of Protestant Christians, religion is a tremendous spur to energy, but this is not all consumed in strictly religious activities. With us, religion is not meant to be the whole of life. But it is designed to permeate the whole of life and to direct all energies into good and legitimate activities. It is a penetrating spirit, a hallowing influence, an invigorating power that enriches and strengthens for good those who follow its teachings.

As to which religion directs the energies of its followers most productively, there would be differences of opinion. Mohammedanism, with all the mass control exercised by the leaders, does not seem to succeed in developing in its people the finest sorts of godly characters.

Romanism, with its large church attendance and the centralized authority of its hierarchical system, does not produce the best fruits in intelligence, freedom, and spiritual living. We gladly admit that there have been some outstanding scholars, and some exceptionally spiritually-minded men and women active in the work for the relief and comfort of the poor and suffering. But the impression prevails—rightly, I think—that much of the service in the churches is vain repetition, many of the ceremonials are alien to the spirit and teachings of Jesus, and much of the developed energy is consumed on keeping the machinery going, and holding the people in subjection to the constituted authorities.

It does not well become Protestant Christians at this time to be unduly boastful of their brand of religion. With many of our churches, it seems an entirely satisfactory state of affairs to have the wheels continue to go round, to be able to get by in the matter of expenses, and to avoid too great a drop in membership and giving. The overhead, in many instances, has become so great that the prospect of any decided advance in the real work of the church has become a forlorn hope. Men and women of intellectual ability and achievement are still produced. Fine Christian characters are blessing the homes, the churches, and the world. Many Protestant thinkers are conscientiousy struggling with the problems growing out of the failures of the past, and they are coming into new prominence with a determination that we must do something about the New Order of which we are becoming increasingly aware.

What the outcome is to be, no one can say. Fred Smith, who, for more than forty years, has been prominent in the Y. M. C. A., the church, and in efforts for world peace, declared in an address before the Federal Council of Churches in Washington, that he did not know what would be the outcome of the new ways into which we are moving—especially, he did not know what will result from the effort to unite the churches of Christ into one body. "I am no prophet," he said. "I can tell only what I see. I can see a million years ahead of me, but not further, and I don't see complete union within that time. What is beyond the million years, I must leave to those who have the gift of prophecy."

There are elements of peace and power in the faith and practice of the Quakers. The period of quiet at the beginning of the hour of worship is of great value. To be able to sit for a time in the house of God with the world shut out, with no spoken word, with no ceremony of any kind going on, and to realize the presence of God and have fellowship with Him—all this is a delightful achievement. Following the silence, the voices of those who speak usually sound interesting as they share their thoughts with their fellow-worshipers. These good people are noted, also, for their unobtrusive service to the poor and distressed, and for securing liberty for the oppressed. They promote peace in the world, good will among men, and freedom from the trammels of dogmatism.

The religion of most of us, fortunately, is to a considerable extent synthetic. There are not now many dyed-in-the-wool Methodists, comparatively few are true-blue Presbyterians, only an occasional one is a real hard-shell Baptist. We are free to borrow from others—and most of us use our freedom. Any large Christian willingly acknowledges his indebtedness to other denominations than his own. Some gladly speak of good ideas they hold in common with those who hold to non-Christian faiths. Much depends on each individual as to how good his religion becomes, and how well he lives it. We shall do well to examine our faith from time to time, and to be thoroughly well-persuaded in our own minds.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOLS

Our series of local Leadership Training Schools will begin Monday, January 15, and run through Friday, February 2. We had planned to put on several more schools than are listed below, but these schools have been postponed until some time later in the spring. At the present time we are holding sixteen schools.

The following requirements must be met in these schools:

1. The school must hold ten fifty-minute periods (two periods for each evening the school meets).

2. Each pupil must be present for nine of the ten periods to receive Standard Leadership Training credit.

3. Every student taking the course for credit must be seventeen years of age and above. (Those who are below seventeen but who have graduated from high school may take the course for credit.)

4. Every student taking work for credit will be expected to pay a registration fee of twenty-five cents.

5. Students may rent their text-books for twenty-five cents.

6. In courses where text-books are not used the students will be expected to pay a library fee of ten cents for the use of reference books.

7. Students who do not take a course for credit but attend all sessions of the school will be requested to pay half the registration fee and the full book rental or library fee if they use the books.

As we must meet the requirements of the Department of Religious Education and make these schools pay for themselves, please do not ask our Deans to give you any concessions. We hope our churches will help in this program by raising money to help pay the expenses of their leaders to these schools.

The following list gives the places, dates, and deans of the series of schools:

Whitakers, January 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, Rev. E. O. Peeler, Dean.

Henderson, January 15, 16, 17, 22, 23, Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Dean.

THE TEACHING OF WORSHIP IN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES

The Committee on Worship of the Federal Council of Churches has completed a survey of the teaching and practice of worship in nearly one hundred theological seminaries, a summary and analysis of which was given by Dean Weigle, of Yale Divinity School, at the fall meeting of the committee recently. The data is so valuable that he has been requested to present it at the annual conference of theological seminaries. One importat fact brought out in the survey is that, in a number of seminaries, the equipment of prospective ministers for the conduct of worship is elective, instead of being required of all candidates. Yet it is disclosed that the worship service and prayers in free churches are deplorably weak and unworthy.

As a possible method of awakening interest in and magnifying the great hymns of the church, occasional hymn festivals, led by the united choirs of towns or city districts, were recommended, following an address by Reginald L. McAll, organist of the Church of the Covenant, New York.

The Committee on the Literature of Worship presented an annotated list of one hundred of the best books on worship, with brief reviews, which will be published as soon as funds are available.

Bishop Wilbur P. Thirkield, chairman, presided.

CULTIVATE FINENESS OF CHARACTER

Seemingly small things often have large consequences. A foolish slip of speech, an empty laugh, an ungainly position, an unkind or irrelevant remark, an unpleasant mannerism, or an undignified habit, may unconsciously lower you in the estimation of others. Life is made up largely of trifles. To win and retain the esteem of your fellow men you must be discriminating in your thoughts and actions. Culture demands constant alertness. Be on strict guard against undesirable habits which would injure you in the eyes of other men. If you now have any such habits, take radical and prompt means to correct them. Begin by making a written list today of the things you wish to eradicate from your personal character.—Grenville Kleiser.

DEVOTIONS

The following Litany, Hymn, and Prayer constituted a small part of the devotional exercises at a notable mass-meeting in Constitution Hall, Washington, D. C., December 6, 1933. This great gathering was in celebration of the 25th anniversary of the organization of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The Westminster Choir of Princeton, New Jersey, rendered several selections, and President Roosevelt and others made addresses.

A Litany for the Coming of the Kingdom

We look for a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness.

Lord, help us to pray and work for the coming of thy kingdom.

Thy kingdom, O God, is an everlasting kingdom and thy righteousness endureth to all generations.

Lord, help us to pray and work for the coming of thy kingdom.

The earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.

Lord, help us to hasten the coming of thy kingdom.

And men shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks.

Lord, help us to prepare in peace for the coming of thy kingdom.

Nation shall not lift up sword against nation; neither shall they learn war any more.

Lord, help us to prepare in peace for the coming of thy kingdom.

The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ, and he shall reign.

Lord, help us to bring in thy kingdom.

The kingdom of God is righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit.

Lord, help us to bring in thy kingdom.

The kingdom of God cometh not with observation, for behold, the kingdom of God is within you.

Lord, help us to prepare within our hearts for thy kingdom.

The Lord sitteth as King forever. His throne is in the hearts of the people.

Lord, help us to enthrone thee as King in our lives forever.

Be still and know that I am God. I will be exalted among all nations. I will be exalted in the earth.

Lord, help us to pray and work for the coming of the kingdom of God on the earth, and let it now come into each of our hearts in the spirit of Jesus. Amen.

Hymn

(By Frank Mason North, President of the Council, 1916-1920)

Where cross the crowded ways of life,
Where sound the cries of race and clan,
Above the noise of selfish strife,
We hear Thy voice, O Son of Man!

In haunts of wretchedness and need,
On shadowed thresholds dark with fears,
From path where hide the lures of greed,
We catch the vision of Thy tears.

From tender childhood's helplessness,
From woman's grief, man's burdened toil,
From famished souls, from sorrow's stress,
Thy heart has never known recoil.

The cup of water given for Thee
Still holds the freshness of Thy grace;
Yet long these multitudes to see
The sweet compassion of Thy face.

O Master, from the mountain side,
Make haste to heal these hearts of pain;
Among these restless throngs abide,
O tread the city's streets again;

Till sons of men shall learn Thy love,
And follow where Thy feet have trod;
Till glorious from Thy heaven above
Shall come the city of our God.

A Prayer

For the President of the United States and All in Civil Authority:

Almighty God, whose kingdom is everlasting and power infinite, have mercy upon this whole land, and so rule the hearts of Thy servants, the President of the United States, and all others in authority, that they, knowing whose ministers they are, may above all things seek thy honor and glory; and that we and all the people, duly considering whose authority they bear, may faithfully and obediently honor them, according to Thy blessed word and ordinance; through Jesus Christ our Lord, who with Thee and the Holy Spirit liveth and reigneth ever, one God, world without end. Amen.

SOMEBODY FORGETS

A little fellow in the slum section of a large city was induced to attend a mission Sunday school, and by and by became a faithful little Christian. He seemed quite settled in his Christian faith, but some one, surely in a thoughtless mood, tried to test or shake his simple faith in God, asking him, "If God loves you, why does He not take better care of you? Why doesn't He tell some one to bring you shoes and a warm coat and better food." This little fellow thought a moment, then with tears starting in his eyes, said, "I guess He does tell somebody, but somebody forgets."

Without being conscious the boy touched a sore spot in the life of many who profess to be children of God. They want to do many things and their consciences urge them again and again. But they put it off from day to day and in the end "somebody forgets."—Unknown.

OUR STORY PAGE

WHEN ELLA SAID, “I WILL”

It was a very cold morning. With a scrap of paper in her hand Ella Wright settled herself in the old rocker beside the kitchen stove. The girl was an ardent lover of good poetry. Her choice collection of poems she had pasted in an old catalogue.

Now she leaned back in the easy chair and read and reread the poem which was printed on the scrap of paper she held in her hand. At last the paper dropped into her lap and there was a defiant expression on her face. “It was easy for the poet to write those lines,” she said to herself. “He probably wore good clothes and ate the food of the well-to-do. He had the magical gift of putting words together in an attractive form so that he could receive so many dollars a line. His needs were well supplied. What did he know about living in drafty houses where the chimney smoked?”

Ella’s glance discovered Miss Ruth Brown who was coming up the steps with a roll of papers in her hand. Her tap on the door brought the girl from her musings. In another moment Ruth was sitting opposite Ella who was again holding the scrap of paper in her hand.

“I see you’ve found another poem,” began Ruth, recalling the girl’s habit of saving them.

Ella nodded. “But I do not like this one. I’m not quite sure that I’ll keep it. You see, it is about a girl who lived in a cold house where the chimneys smoked. I know all about that,” said Ella, making a grimace.

“Yes?” said Ruth interrogatively.

“Though the others grumbled this girl who was homely, had a pug nose and no dimples, always smiled sweetly. She did not talk about the cold, drafty house. She only stirred the fire and lighted the lamp. She ran upstairs to change her damp dress. When she came down in a crimson gown her associates forgot that the house was a dull old place as they listened to her cheery laughter.

“Why do you not want to keep such a poem?” asked Ruth in surprise.

“The author of that poem did not know what it means to live in a cold drafty house,” was the answer given shortly, almost curtly. “As I sat here this morning and contrasted his prosperous condition with mine, I felt more rebellious than ever. As I look back over the past two years, it seems as if life has been very hard for me.”

Miss Brown realized that the girl’s words were, in a measure, true. Suddenly bereft of a mother she had tried to fill her place in the home. It was small wonder that at times Ella was discouraged. It would never do to leave the girl in this dismal mood. Ruth was rather proud of her ability to bring others to her way of thinking. Now in her own logical way she undertook to persuade Ella to see things differently.

“Oh, you must not feel that way about it,” she said cheerily. “Try to look on the bright side of things. Count your mercies instead of your troubles. You have much to be thankful for, I am sure.”

“I don’t know whether or not I have anything to be very grateful for,” objected Ella. “Perhaps that sounds wicked to you, Miss Ruth. But honestly sometimes I feel as though I had very little to be thankful for.”

“What has happened to make you so despondent?”

“It must have been this poem,” declared Ella. “The title is, ‘The Girl Who Smiles.’ It is easy for folk who have plenty to advise poor, discouraged people to take trouble philosophically.” The girl seemed to be reading the poem again. Then she looked up with a wistful expression of her face and said, “But I must admit, Miss Ruth, that I honestly wish I could be like this girl. Just listen:

“ ‘They forgot that the house was a dull, old place
And smoky from base to rafter;
And gloom departed from every face
As they felt the charm of her mirthful grace
And the cheer of her happy laughter.’ ”

“I quite agree with you, Ella, that it is not always easy ta take your troubles philoophically. But if you really wish to be like this girl in the poem you can if you try.”

Ella shook her head dolefully. “I do try to do the best I can. It seems sometimes as if everything is going wrong. I fear that I will influence the children to grow discontented, too. I remember what Mother said about the Lord helping me, but I can’t see that it does any good.”

Ruth was silent, but a prayer for guidance was ascending to the throne of grace.

“Have I shocked you?” Ella asked. “You are thinking that I am wicked to say such things.”

“No, I wssn’t thinking anything of the kind,” returned Ruth with a friendly little clasp of the hand. “I was just wondering how I could get you to believe that God cares for you.”

“Oh, I believe in the Bible,” was the quick reply.

“I know you do, dear, but let me explain. I often think of you here cooking the meals for Sarah and Edward and your Father. One day I came here when you were making your Mother’s cloak over for Sarah. You needed that yourself and yet you willingly gave it to your sister. I wondered how you could.”

“Why, what else could I do?” Ella asked quickly. “She’s my sister. Didn’t I promise Mother to do the very best I could for the children? My old coat wasn’t worth making over, you know.”

“But Sarah didn’t ask you to make this sacrifice. If she had been older she would have realized how much you yourself were in need of the coat.”

“Of course, Sarah didn’t ask me,” returned Ella quickly. “She expects me to get her clothes. When the mornings were growing frosty and she came in shivering with the cold, I couldn’t wait to be asked; I just made it.”

“That is just what your Mother would have done,” Ruth said comfortingly. ‘I am sure the children love and respect you for your kindness. I have often noticed that they are thoughtful and kind.”

Ella looked up quickly. “Of course they don’t always obey," she said slowly, "yet they are good children. I try to remember that they are quite young and that they have faults, as we all have. But I love them."

"Can't you see, Ella, it is because you love them that you care for their every need? It is not because they are always obedient, but because your heart is just filled with love for them. You are God's child and He loves you as you love them; not because you are always obedient," she finished slowly.

Ella sat very quiet. She was thinking deeply. Ruth, too, was still. She was praying. How would the girl take her words? Would she understand?

"And what must I do?" asked Ella presently in a tone in which there was no defiance.

"Do just what Sarah and Edward do for you. Accept His kindness and love Him in return."

"Is it so simple as that?"

'Yes, indeed," answered Ruth. "Will you do it?"

"I will—" and a light shone on the girl's face. "I believe that God does love me and is interested in me. Oh, Miss Ruth, I'm so glad you came in this morning. I will keep the poem and paste it in my book. Whenever I grow despondent I'll read it and think of your words. Perhaps some time I may be like 'The Girl Who Smiles.' "—Light and Life Evangel.

DIVINE MIND

By Grenville Kleiser

Divine mind is omnipresent. The Mind of God fills all space and is therefore always available. When you think a good thought, you reflect the Infinite Mind from which all good emanates. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. True wisdom comes from meditation upon spiritual ideas. Justice, truth, mercy, love, goodness, and purity, are fruits of the spirit. The solution of your personal problems is to seek first the Infinite Mind for ideas of truth and righteousness and to use them in your daily life. Divine Mind is always ready to co-operate with you, and to assist you in every right undertaking. Once assured of this direct alliance with God you will tend to do everything with relation to Him.

God is love and you are made in His image. The more love you express in your daily life, the more you reflect God. The better you conform your mind to truth and righteousness the nearer you live to God. The highest happiness will come to you when you realize the immanence of God and the all-inclusive nature of His goodness. Resolve today to keep your thoughts in harmony with divine love, truth, and goodness. Thus you will steadily progress toward the better, larger, fuller life which is your rightful heritage. God is good and God is everywhere, hence good is available to you always. There can be no better way than God's way since He is supreme. For your highest standard of character and conduct you must go to God.

Take no anxious thought for the morrow, since God supplies you now and always with everything essential to your welfare. He speaks to your consciousness, and through this direct channel supplies you with an inexhaustible store of spiritual thoughts. As you assimilate these ideas and apply them in your daily life, you will become more deeply concious of your alliance with the source of all that is good, true and eternal. When you delight to do only the will of God, and to keep His law uppermost in your heart, you will have a foretaste of heaven. Look to God for everything. Look upward with an earnest desire for guidance, and there will come to you a revelation and benediction from the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

WHOSOEVER

A physician in Portland says that one Sunday night he was leaning on his hand in his office, studying a very critical case; and that while he was in that attitude, just at the eventide, there was a knock at the door, and a fallen girl from a house of sin right under the shadow of a church nearby, said, "Doctor, come; Nellie is worse." I hastened over to the side of the poor, dying girl, dying from sin; and she looked up into my face, and said, "Doctor, is there no help for me?" "No, Nellie." "O doctor, do not leave me! I want you to stay with me!" Just then the organ broke out, and they sang a sweet, familiar hymn in the church near by, known to the girl in childhood. As the sound wafted through the open windows and to the dying girl's ear, she listened, the tears began to trickle down her cheeks, and she said: "Oh, would God that I was a little innocent girl again at my mother's knee! Doctor, pray for me." He said: "It seemed as if the weight of a thousand worlds came on me; and, though I was not a Christian, I got down and told Jesus all about it, and begged Him to see the tears of penitence and have mercy on the sinning girl. A light came into her face, and the peace of God settled upon her countenance, and she expressed her hope. But pretty soon she became delirious, and I knew the end was near. She thought, in her delirium, that she was back again at her mother's knee, saying her infant prayer, and she prayed:

'Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to take;
And this I ask for Jesus' sake.'

" 'O Lord, bless papa and mama and little Nellie. Amen.' I could almost hear the rustle of the angels' wings as they swept down into that room to carry the girl Home, and she passed away with a radiant look of a redeemed child upon her face.

"But, oh," said the doctor, "the prayer that brought peace to Nellie, brought an unutterable burden to my own soul; and I went to my office, in all my morality and good standing, and got down on my knees and prayed to Nellie's Savior, and asked Him to be my Savior, too." And he said, "There is a light coming into my heart in answer to that prayer, that is the beginning of the eternal day of Heaven."

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

THE OCTAGON COUPON CONTESTS

It might be interesting to know the results from the three contests that have been held.

In the first contest Rev. C. W. Bates offered $5 to the Auxiliary sending in the largest number of coupons for a period of three months. Twenty-one Auxiliaries and organizations took part in this contest, sending in 18,725 coupons, which netted the Home $93.63. Calvary Auxiliary won the prize.

In the second contest the prize was offered by Mrs. W. C. Hammer. Forty-nine Auxiliaries and organizations took part, sending in 22,211 coupons, bringing in to the Home $88.84. (The reason for the smaller amount of money is that the value of the coupons droppel from $5.00 to $4.00 per thousand). Winston-Salem won in this contest, Reidsville running a close second.

In the third contest Rev. C. L. Spencer offered the prize. Forty Auxiiaries and organizations competed for this prize, sending in 16,219 coupons. These have brought in to date $71.36, but there will be a little more since a bonus is offered for those sent in during December. Salem, Saxapahaw Circuit, was the winner. Reidsville again ran a close seconl, and so was awarded a second prize of $2.50.

At the close of the last contest I asked for the Auxiliaries making the best showing. The five highest are: 1. Salem, Saxapahaw; 2. Reidsville; 3. First Church, High Point; 4. Henderson; 5. Union Chapel, Granville.

You can see from this report what it means to the Home if we save and send in our coupons. Who will be next to offer a prize? Your five dollars may mean at least fifty dollars to the Children's Home. Your coupons are the equivalent of money sent in. Let's be just as saving with our money, so that we may turn them into cash for the Home.

MRS. C. W. BATES,
Children's Home Secretary.

P. S.—To bake a cake is a small matter for you. But if you will collect six and send to the Home, my, what a help it will be! They can enjoy them through the holidays; and then, when the children start to school, how much it will help in fixing their lunches.

MRS. C. W. B.

WE ARE DISAPPOINTED

We in North Carolina are disappointed that Mr. Minnis is coming home. After a long sleep we waked up—too ate. If we had decided a year ago that we would make it possible for him to stay in India, how much happiness we could have brought to him and to ourselves. Happiness to him because he could have felt OUR support back of him. Hapiness to ourselves because we were doing something worth while. What has been done cannot be undone. But we have not met our past responsibility. We have only about half raised his salary up to the present date—just about $550 has been turned in, and about that much remains to be turned in. Won't you work fast, and have it all in by the time he arrives in America? Several pledged themselves or their charges on the Calendar Plan; others agreed to raise it by a plan of their own. Whichever you do, do quickly. And remember, when you raise Minnis' salary, you are also raising your World Service budget. The need is desperate.

MRS. C. W. BATES,
Manager, Minnis Fund.

TO THE WOMEN OF FIRST DISTRICT

Dear Co-Workers:

We don't always reach our goals, but I realize if we are going to accomplish anything it is necessary for us to set our goal and work to that end. I am asking you to help me reach the following goals this Conference year:

First, An active Missionary Society in every church.

Second, the Methodist Protestant Herald and Missionary Record in every home. No church or missionary society can be a success unless the members of each read our church papers.

When we succeed in getting our people to read our church papers, we will have overcome our greatest problem.

I want to quote a part of Miss Bettie Brittingham's letter of November 28.

January and February will be known as Missionary Record months. During these months our slogan will be "One Thousand New Subscriptions to the Missionary Record." This increase in subscribers would not only make the Record self-supporting but would also be a medium of education for local subscribers. I want to urge all secretaries of literature to do all they can in helping Miss Brittingham reach her goal.

I want to suggest that we give subscriptions to either of our church papers, or both, as a Christmas gift to some friend or neighbor who isn't a subscriber.

After the Christmas holidays I will be glad to visit any church in this district that doesn't have a Missionary Society and try to organize one. If there are any that are interested, won't some one from that church let me know.

To the Auxiliaries that are active, I want to say I am always glad to see your reports in the Herald. If you have a plan that you have used since our district meeting that has been a success, either in raising money or conducting your meeting, won't you report it through the Herald so the other Auxiliaries can try them out?

Let us be thinking of our district meeting, which will be held some time in March or April. We are looking forward to having Miss Mary Williams, returned missionary from Japan, with us at that time.

Wishing for each of you a very Happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Yours in His service,
MRS. R. M. ROBINSON, Chairman.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

Moved by a growing appreciation of the men of good will with whom I labor, I am sending the wish that the joys of Christmastide made full and multiplied be yours.

Sincerely,
R. M. ANDREWS.

—We thank Bro Walter Causey and Mrs. Irene Coble for savory additions to our "compounding."

T. M. JOHNSON, Chairman,
C. E. RIDGE, Secretary.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

The workers and their large family of children in the Methodist Protestant Children's Home, High Point, N. C., all join in sending to their many friends throughout the church the joyful greetings of the Christmas season. We would be glad to send hundreds of personal messages, but our income for actual needs is such that we cheerfully give up that pleasure and send to you this open message of Christmas cheer. The children delight to send Christmas cards to their friends, as do other children, and will be permitted to send a few.

The Entire Family joins in wishing for all our friends everywhere a very Happy Christmas and a glad New Year filled with Joy in Service for Him and His. The Lord bless and prosper His people.

Signed for the Family,
DR. AND MRS. A. G. DIXON.

—The swastika used to be regarded as a charm or a sign of good luck, but since it has been adopted as a symbol of the Hitler policy in Germany most people of the world have come to regard it as a sign of ill luck or hatred.

—Some people cast their bread upon the waters and expect it to come back buttered.

—The pastor of Siler City Charge has received generous poundings from Siler City and Hope churches since Conference, consisting of almost everything needed for the pantry.

WHEN WILL THE JOURNAL BE OUT?

The folks are already asking that question. I don't know the answer. But fine progress is being made by the printers. I have already received more than half of the proof, and they promise the rest of it in a few days. So be patient. And while you wait, try to get in the money on the Journals, so I can send in a good amount when I get the bill. Let's play fair with the printers, and not make them wait for their money.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Littleton.—As this is our first report since we moved, I would like to say that we have been to all our churches for service except our Littleton church, and Sunday we will be there unless providentially hindered.

We have enjoyed each service and we are indeed happy to be here with these good people. We regretted very much to leave Draper and our friends there. They were so good to us we shall never forget them. May the dear Lord richly bless them all.

We have been busy since we came here. We have tried to see as many of our members as possible.

We will have an area meeting Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock, and our first quarterly conference at 2 o'clock at Littleton church.

We were at Hawkins Chapel last Sunday for Sunday school and the 11 o'clock service. We have a good Sunday school at Hawkins Chapel and we hope to get the others going soon. We had a good service at the 11 o'clock hour; fifty or more reconsecrated their lives to their Lord.

We are praying that we may have a good year here and believe we will.

R. L. VICKERY, Pastor.

Yadkin College.—Sunday, December 17th, in the afternoon, was the time for my appointment in this historic village. Approaching the settlement, I saw at the farther edge of the village a rather odd-looking structure which proved to be the tower, still standing, of the college building recently torn down.

This started thoughts (in the mind of one who had been a student there it would be memories) of what transpired there in other days—the days of Prof. Simpson, of Prof. Holmes, and of the Tottens. Yes, and Prof. Baker in the earlier days of the institution. And was there not a Prof. Hege? Why not someone prepare a complete list—George Curry, or some other record-minded person—who knows or can find out?

Then a list of our preachers who received at least a part of their training at Yadkin; or as it was later called, Yadkin College High School. Then add to the list names of others who have attained prominence, as A. A. Hicks, a former state legislator, and T. T. Hicks, who came to be a prominent lawyer in the state, etc.

"There is where Sam Taylor was raised," said someone as I neared the church. "There is where Preacher Wills lived," said another, pointing to a dwelling on a hill near the church—I think the village is on seven hills, more or less. This last remark referred to Rev. R. H. Wills, who moved there to educate his children.

Where is the dwelling Brother J. N. Garrett lived in? I asked. It had been burned.

Fortunately, the taking down of the school building and the burning of a dwelling and the dismantling of others does not in any degree pull down or destroy the character, the manhood, and womanhood built there in other days.

The names, Phillips, Greene, Dale, Taylor are still there, but not many people of each name. The Tottens are still there, reviving in the memory of my youth the deep piety and conscientious devotion of Rev. J. H. Totten, a pastor of my youthful days. People of names once familiar, as Owen, Hartly, Walser, and perhaps others, are gone.

Not only have the older people gone, but the young people also. They humorously say they educated them too much—they went away to seek larger fields.

After the service it was my happy privilege to visit the mother of Dr. S. W. Taylor, 90 since last October, bed-fast, blind. The dear old soul asked me if I knew a little preacher down in High Point named Taylor. I wondered if she still thinks of him as a boy, a little boy? She said he had been preaching ever since he was a boy. The saintly woman had sent her contribution to the church by her daughter. This contribution was of such size that if the membership generally were like-minded and made contribution of like proportion, all our financial problems would be solved.

The village, time-worn and weather beaten, bears the marks of age. But it has a name and a history that are honorable.

Draper Church.—The work here in Draper is starting off fine. We arrived here and began our work the second Sunday in December. We found a consecrated people here, a people that believe in doing things.

Our services are being well attended, and congregations are steadily growing. The Sunday school is doing a fine work. The thing that impresses us so much is the fine spirit of co-operation among the churches of the town. All of the churches join in the week-end prayer meetings and also the fifth Sunday services.

A pounding, yes, a pounding—one that makes a preacher's heart glad, not only because of the gifts brought, but for the fine Christian spirit that prompted the givers. We can only say thank you, and pray God's blessings upon you, and try by God's help to give you the very best service possible in return.

Our first quarterly conference will convene Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. All officials are requested to be preesnt.

L. S. HELMS, Pastor.

Calvary.—Recently I made the statement that if any pastor received a pounding any earlier in the conference year than I did his people were certainly on their marks. Now I want to say that if any pastor and family have received any more poundings than we have they surely have something to eat in their house. Last evening we went over to the Hut for the monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary. The unusual thing about the meeting was that there were some men present, and some of tose coming in seemed to be carrying something, but since refreshments had been served at every meeting we had attended so far, we thought they were going to serve again. At the conclusion of a fine program and after we had been served, president of the Auxiliary, Mrs. Curtis, announced that they were all going home with the pastor and his wife for a little visit. And so they came in battalions. The dining room table was loaded down with a fine variety of good things to eat. We did not have enough words to express the feeling that came to us for this fine expression of friendship. We thanked them the best we could and then prayed for them and so they went home. With a pounding at Winston-Salem before we left and a pounding here, we are not expecting a very large grocery bill for many weeks to come.

Two weeks ago the Workers' Council in the Sunday school adopted a slogan, "Two Hundred in Sunday School by January 1." Last Sunday we had 201. Church congregations were also good.

Next Sunday we are to have the Christmas sermon and Christmas music at the morning hour, and a good deal of singing Christmas songs at the evening hour. After the evening service, if the weather will permit, we hope to go around to the homes of shut-ins and sick folks and sing Christmas carols.

Draper.—I have been elected reporter and I will send in a report of our church as often as I can.

Rev. L. S. Helms, of the Draper church, has won a great influence over the people. The congregation has increased about 75 per cent, and it looks like he is going to win a lifetime job at Draper. The Sunday school has increased in a large number and we are planning on having a great Christmas program.

Pastor Helms seems to like his new home fine, and is taking a great interest in his work. We all hope and pray he makes a great success.

Mount Pleasant, Randolph Charge.—It has been quite a while since we have sent a report from our church, but we are still alive and our Sunday school is doing fine. We had a good attendance through the summer, but on account of cold weather we don't have as many now.

We are very glad indeed to have Rev. Edward Suits back with us again. I think he has been a great help to our church. He preached an interesting sermon last first Sunday, his text being taken from Genesis 5:24: "And Enoch walked with God and he was not, for God took him."

I close, wishing you all a Merry Christmas and a successful New Year.

Forsyth.—We are glad to be back on the Forsyth Charge for another year, and the people are making us feel that they are glad to have us back.

We held our first quarterly conference at Maple Springs church last Monday night, with 65 persons present, some of them visitors, but the majority of them official members. This was the largest attendance that we have ever seen at a quarterly conference. The business was transacted harmoniously and all seemed to be hopeful for a better year's work this year than last.

After conference adjourned the pastor and family were invited into the basement, where we were greeted by the largest pounding we have ever received. These good things came from all churches, and although we would not attempt to itemize the gifts or mention the names of the donors, we would like to express our sincere thanks to each and every one who had a part in this splendid expression of appreciation to the pastor and family.

Oak Grove church, which is the smallest church on the charge, and which as only one service per month, remembered us at the last appointment prior to Conference. After the service we found our car filled with groceries, meat, etc. We are well fixed, so far as eats are concerned, for many weeks to come.

Three of the church, Maple Springs, Mount Carmel and Union Ridge, are planning Christmas programs.

Thee work, generally, is starting off nicely. Since Conference we have organized a Christian Endeavor Society at Maple Spring church and received six new members into Union Ridge church. We received 31 members into this church last Conference year, and from the way we are starting off are expecting to exceed that number this year.

We wish for the Herald and all its readers a happy Christmas season.

R. A. HUNTER.

Friendship, Fallston Charge.—Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the leadership of Superintendent Gettys Bingham. The attendance for last Sunday was 165.

Bro. Fogleman filled his regular appointment at this church at 11 o'clock, using as his subject, "God's Faith in Man.' ' Faith is one of the outstanding words in the Bible, and men such as Abraham, Paul, and Luther, who have accomplished great things, were men of faith.

God proved his faith in man when He created man in His own image. He was willing to stand or fall with the human race. God proved that His faith continues when He sent His Son into the world to suffer for the sins of man. It is our part to match our lives with the life of Jesus; to let His love in our hearts; and to have faith in Christ.

Messrs. F. B. Toney, E. A. Hoyle, Clem Hoyle, and Mrs. Clem Hoyle sang beautifully "When the Sweet By and By Is Ended," and "Amazing Grace."

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet next Sunday, December 24, immediately after Sunday school.

The time for the meeting of the quarterly conference has been changed from Dec. 23, next Saturday, to the Saturday before the first Sunday, January 6, at Knob Creek church. The meeting begins at 11 o'clock for the morning worship, lunch on the grounds, and matters of business in the afternoon.

Next Sunday is our monthly Children's Home Day. Let's remember this and make our offering as much as possible, particularly at this season.

Mount Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—We are indeed glad to have our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, and wife return to this work for another year. We are very thankful for the work Bro. Hunter has done here, and pray that our church may have a most successful year.

At the 11 o'clock service our pastor gave us an inspiring message, using as his text Psalms 17:15: "And he gave them drink out of the great depths," referring to the depths spiritually. We were impressed with the fact that to have the mysteries of the great deep revealed to us, one must have the love of God in their heart, "for back of it all is God." To everyone and especially to the Christian, this is indeed a beautiful and encouraging thought for the soul to feast upon.

Our Sunday school will give a Christmas program Saturday night, December 23rd; also a Christmas tree.

We are sorry to report some sickness among our members. Mr. Herman Barber has recently undergone an appendicitis operation, and is improving. Mr. Paul Wall is sick with measles. Mr. D. W. Wall, who has been ill for some time, does not seem to improve any. We pray that they may all be restored to health soon.

First Church, Thomasville.—Rev. H. F. Surratt, of Community church, delivered a splendid address Sunday morning, presenting the World Service and its many ways of spreading the gospel of Christ. Rev. Mr. Madison likewise filled Rev. Surratt's pulpit at the 11 o'clock hour.

Rev. Mr. Madison chose for his subject Sunday night, "Christ in Our Every-Day Living." Christian living is not just a Sunday affair, but must be lived every day. People are tired of hearing people tell about being a Christian; they like to see them in action.

Attendance continues to grow for the evening services.

The Christian Endeavor held its business meeting and social last Tuesday night with Miss Pauline Bailey in charge of the social.

The Christmas spirit was predominating, as the center of attraction was the Christmas tree with gifts for all.

Next Sunday evening we are expecting our Children's Home family to be with us and give the Christmas program. There will be a place on the program for you, however.

There will be an offering march. Everyone who has a gift of any kind for the children will march to the front to deposit their gift.

First quarterly conference was held at the church on Wednesday evening, December 20.

We were glad to see Mrs. J. J. Watts back at church after being sick for a long time.

Halifax Charge.—On the second Sunday we filled our first appointments at Bethesda, Ringwood, and Hollister. We were at Bethesda for the morning service. Our attendance for this service was good and the pastor and family were received very cordially by an inspiring people. We have a splendid people at this church. From this church have come some very outstanding leaders for our Conference and denomination.

At 3:00 we made our first apointment at Ringwood. We found a splendid people here who welcomed us to their church. They were very attentive and manifested an interest in the great cause of the church. Then at 7:00 we were at Hollister church. We had our largest congregation here. The peopel here have a very nice church, which is an indication of their interest in the Kingdom service. We were received here with a hearty welcome, and enjoyed worshiping with them very much.

On the third Sunday we were at Harmony for the morning service. This completed our first round on the charge. The congregation here was very attentive and encouraging to the new pastor. We have here some very loyal Methodist Protestants. Our reception here was cordial. At the close of the service we were invited to go home and dine with Brother Frank Avent and family. They have a beautiful home and seemed to be a very happy family. We enjoyed being in their home very much. We went from Harmony to Eden for the afternoon service. This was our second appearance here. We had a splendid audience and were delighted to have with us here Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of our Conference, and Rev. E. O. Peeler and family to worship with us. Dr. Andrews brought to us a few words of greetings, but refused to preach.

Since we have been in the parsonage on this charge we have received two poundings, one each from Bethesda and Eden churches. Each of these was complete in that we received a complete line of groceries. We will not take space to name all the articles, but wish to say that each was plenty large. Eden even brought refreshments to serve after the excitement was over. We appreciate these poundings more than we are able to express. We needed the articles of food very much, but even more the love of the people which prompted the giving. May God help us to live in such a way before these good people that they may never regret these expressions of kindness toward us.

Vance Charge.—Since our last report we find ourselves in a different location. We moved to Henderson November 28. It was not our plan to move, but the stationing committee saw fit to make the change. The Guilford people so treated us that we almost felt it our duty to return to that field for another year. Learning that we were going to move, the people of Mitchell's Grove gave us a pounding, but of the pleasant kind. Besides, Vickery church didn't seem to care for us going away without having received our salary from that church, so they finished paying what was due on their part of the salary. Also, Mitchell's Grove decreased the amount that they owed. All of the churches paid the salaries in full except Mitcell's Grove. We learned to love those people and feel sure that Brother T. A. Williams will learn the same.

We reached Henderson about 5 p. m., finding our furniture had already arrived and was placed in a comfortable parsonage located at 727 Garnett street, Henderson, N. C. A well planned meal was awaiting our arrival at the home of Bro. C. B. Baskett.

The writer has held services at each church and has found the work well organized. The attendance at these services was only fair, due to the fact of misunderstanding about the appointment. We received a warm reception in spite of the fact that the people hoped for the return of Brother Braxton.

In less than a week after our arrival in Henderson, two of the churches, Spring Valley and Flat Rock, gave us the lagest shower we have ever received at one time. The pounding consisted of wearing apparel, cooking utensils, household linens, meats, and groceries. It would make the article too long to try to mention all the names of the givers. So we just say, "Thank you, thank you," one and all. May the Lord bless you.

We have had calls from some of our former schoolmates and co-workers, Miss Alice Faulkner, Mr. Henry White, an attorney of Henderson, who is a member of Flat Rock charge, Dr. L. W. Gerringer and family, and Rev. C. L. Spencer, of Granville charge.

Saturday, December 16, we held our first quarterly conference and set forth some plans for the year's work.

We extend our Christmas greetings and wishes for a Happy New Year to one and all.

D. D. BROOME, Pastor.

First Church, Charlotte.—On Sunday morning, December 10th, the New Day Program was presented by the pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, who spoke on the theme, "God Doeth a New Thing."

The complete program follows:

1. I will read by Bible and pray at least once each day.
2. I will endeavor to win at least one to Christ and the church.
3. I will attend at least one preaching service of my church each Lord's Day.
4. I will attend regularly the Sunday school.
5. I will attend the "Church-Night" program on Wednesday.
6. I will give some amount regularly to the support of the church.
7. I will strive constantly to bring others in touch with the church.

Service Projects

8. I will join the Penny-a-Meal Club, and will put that amount in the bank provided me for that purpose each day during January and will bring same to the church the first Sunday in February and place in Joash Chest.
9. The Self-Denial Dollar Plan appeals to me. I will sacrifice that much for my church during March. I will deposit the dollar in the Joash Chest on tht first Sunday in April with a little "memo" on what I denied myself for my church.
10. I think the Prosperity Investment idea a good one. I will take my share of the Talent Money and will invest and return it together with the earnings thereon by placing both in the Joash Chest the first Sunday in May.
11. I will co-operate in the Loyalty Stamp Sale next fall.
12. You can call at my home for the following articles for the White Elephant Sale to be held during December: ....

Special Service Projects

I will entertain at one of the Blue Bird Teas, to which I will invite at least four guests who will pay me 25 cents each for the tea. Holding it during February, I will bring the proceeds and place them in the Joash Chest the first Sunday in March. This service entitles me to attend as Courtesy Guest the Happiness Musicale.

I will attend the Happiness Musicale and will pay 25 cents to enjoy the Gospel Song artists appearing on the program.

Five new members have been added to the Cradle Roll Department recently. They are June Olive Faulk, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Fauk; James Garland Thomas, 10-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Thomas; James S. Steele, aged three years, and Robert Franklin Steele, aged 1 year, sons of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Steele; Bobby Joe Robinson, three-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Robinson; Peggy Louise Norman, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Norman.

Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Auxiliary met on last Tuesday afternoon at the parsonage, with Mrs. A. L. Haigler and Mrs. G. H. Hendry hostesses. Mrs. B. W. Little is chairman of this Circle. Mrs. G. W. Stegall led the devotional program. Mrs. A. A. Ledbetter conducted the question box.

Mrs. G. W. Stegall received the prize, an exquisite box of powder, for being the winner in a three months' contest requiring daily Bible readings, giving offerings, visiting and securing new members for the Circle. Mrs. Stegall, though small in stature, like the Apostle Paul, is a great worker.

Mrs. G. H. Hendry, chairman of Circle No. 2 entertained this Circle at the parsonage on Tuesday evening. Mrs. M. L. Tadlock was in charge of the devotional program. Rev. G. H. Hendry, accompanied by Mrs. Leon Blake at the piano, sang "An Evening Prayer." Two new members were received, Mrs. E. S. Craig and Mrs. J. L. McWhirter.

Mrs. G. H. Hendry, Mrs. R. N. West, Mrs. J. C. Penny and Mrs. E. S. Craig were appointed a visiting committee to visit and get as many women of the church as possible interested in missionary work. Mrs. Hendry, assisted by Mrs. Leon Blake, served delicious refreshments and a delightful social hour followed.

Mrs. J. C. Penny invited the Circle to meet with her in January.

The Auxiliary will meet on Tuesday evening, December 19, in the Baraca class room. Mrs. C. H. Daughtry, vice-president, will be program leader. A splendid program will be given and a large crowd is expected. Mrs. B. W. Little's Circle will be hostess to the Auxiliary at this meeting.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society, under the leadership of Mrs. Calvin Beatty, assisted by Miss Ruby Stegall, is doing splendid work. There are 36 on roll and an average attendance of 26 at the Sunday evening meetings.

Miss Maryon Muse led the Young People's Christian Endeavor meeting, using the topic, "Suppose the World Were Without Christ."

An Intermediate C. E. Society will be organized in the near future under the leadership of Mrs. G. H. Hendry and Mrs. A. L. Haigler.

The Wednesday evening service has been changed from the old type prayer meeting to a popular church night program, featuring an interesting series of services affording variety. A series of addresses on pertinent topics by prominent speakers, will be given from time to time. M. D. Barrick, associate secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and an outstanding leader in Christian Endeavor work, will be the speaker for Wednesday evening. This type of services is evidently in favor with our people as is noticed by the increase in attendance.

Choir rehearsal will follow this service. The choir, under the leadership of Mr. J. W. Thomas, is rendering a most efficient service.

The pastor delivered a very timely message on Sunday morning on God's call to Ezekiel. He said in part: God called Ezekiel to a people who needed a prophet. Ezekiel made the necessary preparation by exchanging places, thoughts and attitudes with them. "I sat where they sat," said Ezekiel, emphasizing the necessity of experience. Jesus gave us the most profound philosophy of service and the most effective method for reaching any people when He said "Rejoice with those who rejoice, and weep with those who weep." The minister emphasized the value of such preparation in the lives of God's people, insisting that it is needed in international relationship with one another, and he urged the aged to think in terms of youth and the youth to think in terms of the aged in dealing with each other. He urged soul-winners to view the world through the eyes of the unprivileged, through the eyes of the outcast. The value of putting ourselves in the place of others, declared the minister, is rewarded with a sympathy that leads to a larger knowledge. He raised the big question, How was Ezekiel able to sit in the place of others? The answer is in the record, "The hand of the Lord was upon me."

On Sunday evenings the pastor is delivering a series of sermons on "Ancient Types of Modern Men."

Miss Louise Hendry has been confined to her room with a severe cold, but is able to be out again, we are glad to note.

We are delighted to have Mrs. H. C. Rogers back with us. She and Mr. Rogers have been living in Forest City for the past year, but have returned to make their home in this city. Mrs. Rogers is a very faithful worker in the church.

There has been a very noticeable increase in attendance in the church school.

On Friday evening there will be a Christmas tree and program given by the Intermediate and Junior departments, under the direction of Miss Mary Shaw, followed by a visit from Santa Claus, who will give a treat to all children present.

Flat Rock.—We held our first quarterly conference at Bethel church last Saturday afternoon with a fairly good representation of official members. Every church on the charge was represented. The conference reelected Bro. Holly Johnson, secretary. The advisory committee and committee on examination were also elected. Encouraging reports were made by Sunday school superintendents. The pastor made a brief report of his work since the beginning of the new Conference year. This was for a period covering three Sundays.

During the consideration of business items, the conference heard a partial report of the chairman of the board of parsonage trustees which revealed that considerable improvements have been made at the parsonage since the arrival of the pastor and family. It was decided to re-cover the parsonage and the trustees were authorized to proceed with the work as soon as possible. Plans were made for raising the necessary funds among the churches. Among the improvements already made at the parsonage is the iddition of a cook-stove and digging the well deeper. A sufficient supply of water is now provided.

We hard a large congregation at Palestine church last Sunday morning for the first service of the new Conference year. The church was amost filled with the members and visitors from other churches in the community. The people gave splendid attention to the message of the pastor. We were already acquainted with a large number of the people at this church, having been with them in their revival meeting in July, 1931. After the service the pastor and family went to the home of Bro. D. A. Walker, where a good dinner and a brief visit were enjoyed.

We had a fairly good attendance at Bethel church for the service there at 3 o'clock. The people here were also very attentive to the sermon. This church will render their Christmas program Saturday night of this week. Flat Rock church will also render their program the same night. Gideon's Grove will present their Christmas program Friday night of this week.

The writer and family appreciate very much a gift of a truck load of stove wood which was brought to the parsonage last Saturday afternoon by Bro. Avery Jones, of Bethel church. It was the second gift of the kind since we came to this charge, Bro. N. W. Gordon, of Bethel church, having put in a good supply of stove wood at the time we moved into the parsonage. Another member has informed us he will bring us a supply of wood. The people are mindful of our needs and are providing for our comfort in a most splendid manner.

Another addition to the circle of subscribers to the Herald is Bro. D. A. Walker, of Palestine church, who gave the pastor his subscription last Sunday. We trust that others will do likewise.

Our services for next Sunday will be at Flat Rock church at 11 a. m. and Bethany church at 3 p. m. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Prayer meeting was held last Wednesday evening in the church with Dr. Pritchard leading. The Scripture reading was the first 11 verses of the 55th chapter of Isaiah. Special emphasis was placed on the first verse: "Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come, ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price." Dr. Pritchard said that unless we want God's grace, want to find the Lord—He cannot do much for us. The prayer meetings are very helpful, and we wish more of the members, as well as people of the community, would attend each Wednesday evening at 7:30.

The Baraca class met at the Hut Thursday evening for a combination business and social meeting. J. W. Tucker, vice-president of the class, acted as toastmaster. At the conclusion of an oyster supper Dr. Pritchard talked of the great value of Sunday school work. Opportunities for service on the part of members of the class and others identified with the Sunday school were mentioned by Mr. J. C. Coe, teacher of the class. The outlook for a successful new year was declared to be quite bright.

At the Christmas party and monthly meeting of the Myrtle Bates class, held at the home of Mrs. E. R. Ward last week, Mrs. J. E. Pritchard was elected teacher. Mrs. Pritchard succeeds Mrs. C. W. Bates as teacher of the class.

Dr. Pritchard preached to very interested congregations both Sunday morning and Sunday night. His subject Sunday morning was "How the Psalmist Regarded His Church." He urged that each one of us have a spiritual home. He said we should think of our church as our spiritual home. He also said that anyone who loves Jesus Christ will naturally love the church. The subject for Sunday night was "Dangerous Suppositions." He stated that because distress and hardship come to man we must not conclude that God's against us. He used as a basis for his serman the incident of the Philippian jailer who drew his sword and would have killed himself, supposing the prisoners had fled. Dr. Pritchard declared that too many people do the very thing that the jailer was about to do, thinking that all is lost, but if man would only wait and do the best he could he would see that things are not always as bad as they seem and that every cloud has a silver lining.

The Woman's Auxiliary met Monday evening in the hut. Mrs. J. F. Williams directed the devotional and Mrs. Howard R. Neece the program, which consisted of "The Christmas Story," Christmas poems and Christmas music, both vocal and instrumental. The officers of the Auxiliary acted as hostesses. Immediately after the Auxiliary meeting the members called at the parsonage, the purpose of their visit being to "pound" Dr. and Mrs. Pritchard.

We are very glad to report that Miss Velna McCulloch is able to be back at church again.

There will be a Christmas party for the Beginners and Primary Department children at the hut Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

We are planning to sing Christmas carols outside the homes of the shut-ins and aged people of the community Christmas eve.

Dr. Pritchard will deliver a Christmas sermon at the 11 o'clock hour next Sunday morning.

The Mission Club, of which Mrs. Frank Coble is chairman, will enjoy a Christmas party at the home of Mrs. Coble Thursday evening.

Miss Dorothy Hines, who is connected with Vick Chemical Company in New York, will spend the Christmas holidays here with her mother, Mrs. Lillian Hines.

Henderson.—Our new reporter for Henderson has kept the readers of the Herald so well informed that it has not seemed necessary for the pastor to write since Conference. However, I do want to express through the Herald my own appreciation and that of my family for the hearty and gracious reception accorded us as we have entered upon the work of the church for the third year. The interest and appreciation of the people have been shown in their attendance upon the services, by their words and by their gifts of material things.

On Thanksgiving day the preacher's family were the guests of Brother George B. Harris and his family. Of course we did "a plenty" for that turkey and enjoyed it. Not only did we enjoy the good eats, but the fellowship of Brother Harris and his son, Lueco, and his daughter, Mrs. Tompkins. It is always a pleasure to be in Brother Harris' home.

The annual fellowship supper was held in the basement of the church on Wednesday evening, December 13th. As this was the pastor's birthday the occasion was made a sort of combination of fellowship supper and birthday party. After the supper was eaten and the speeches all made, Mrs. L. R. Gooch, for the Woman's Auxiliary, presented the pastor with a large, beautiful (and good) birthday cake. Of course the pastor attempted to express his appreciation of the thoughtfulness of the good women.

Quite a number of good things to eat have been coming to the arsonage since Conference at frequent intervals, but Friday evening, December 15th, they came in larger number. I mean both people and donations. A large group of our members came bringing their own gifts and gifts of others who could not be present. To name all those who had part in the "pounding" and list their donations would not be of particular interest to the readers of the Herald; therefore, I refrain from that. One thing that marred the party was that the preacher was all alone, and with his "talking machine" away he had some difficulty in expressing his thanks. Suffice it to say that this was one of the nicest and most substantial "poundings" we have ever received. We are hoping to enjoy our Christmas turkey, keep sweet with the large supply of sugar, have plenty of good biscuits for a long time to come, and to enjoy the many other good things included in the donation. We thank all those who had part in this demonstration of interest and good will. And if there are those who had the will but not the means, we thank you just as heartily. We shall continue to try to do our best to lead our people here in the things of the Spirit.

On Wednesday evening, December 6th, the first quarterly conference was held. The disagreeable weather interfered with the attendance, but the business of the conference was transacted in a fine spirit. Budgets were agreed upon and plans made for conducting the every-member canvass and carrying on the work of the church in general. Brother Elvin O. Falkner and his board of stewards are putting real effort and enthusiasm into the financial work of the church, and we are confidently expecting good results. There is a great deal more money in circulation here this fall than last, and we believe the people are going to remember Him from whom all their blessings come, and make their contributions to His cause more liberal. Brother Henry T. Powell is taking hold of his new job as Sunday school superintendent with enthusiasm and the people are responding to his leadership. The women are carrying on as usual. We can always depend upon them. The young people's choir, as well as the senior choir, is giving good support to the services. The pastor greatly and sincerely apreciates the fine spirit of co-operation that is manifested in all these activities.

God bless all our people everywhere as we enter into the Christmas season. May the Spirit of Him who made Christmas, with all that is fine and good in it, possible be in our hearts and in all the festivities of the season.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Anderson Charge.—Away down here in South Carolina, I am getting very few words from my home section except what is reported in this paper. I wish you knew how we appreciate reading your reports. Just for our sake, please write up your work so I can hear from you.

On Thanksgiving morning we took our leave of Denton community and the good people there, and embarked on our journey to our new field on Anderson and Yarborough charges. Except for a slight breakdown and some four hours' delay, and being relieved of about all the money we had to pay bills, we arrived at our new home without further mishap.

We have indeed been very kindly received by the churches here. All that a pastor and his family could reasonably wish to make them feel appreciated has been and is being done by the good people here. We found coal, wood, water, lights, and the house swept and garnished, and men coming in to see if there were other things needed for our comforts. Then good things to eat began to come in. Brother Henderson brought us a whole quarter of veal. But to climax the matter, last Thursday night the parsonage was stormed with a pounding that made us think something was going to happen or had already happened. Space will not permit my listing the names of the contributors and the articles given, but our dear Lord knows them all by name and "will not forget to reward their gifts and labors of love" to their pastor and family. Liberty Hill church has supplied our table with good things, too. May God bless them all and help us to prove worthy of such splendid and thoughtful people. God helping us, we will endeavor to be worthy.

Our first quarterly conference will convene at Liberty Hill at 2 o'clock Saturday, December 30. ROBERT SHORT.

South Winston.—We are indeed glad to have with us again this year our beloved Bro. A. Ridge, as we learned to love him and his wife from his last year's work with us.

We are indeed very grateful to Bro. Andrews for the appointment as our pastor.

He brought us two very inspiring messages Sunday, December 17. His morning service was taken from the 119th Psalm, 105th to 112th verses. His text was in the 105th verse. Our attendance was not very large, but everybody present seemed to enjoy the service. Our friend and brother, P. W. Mock, of Union Ridge, was present and we enjoyed having him with us very much.

We also conducted our first quarterly conference at 3 o'clock the same afternoon with just a few members present.

Sunday night at 7 o'clock the attendance was not very large. Our pastor began the evening service by reading of 12 verses of St. John, beginning at the 37th verse. His text was the 39th verse: "Jesus said, Take ye away the stone," and he preached a very inspiring sermon.

For some reason our attendance has not been just what it ought to be. I wish we would all attend our churches more regularly and make our offerings more freely.

Merry Christmas to all.

Mt. Hermon Church, Mt. Hermon Charge.—As we start on our new Conference year, we are glad to welcome Rev. L. E. Mabry, back with us again. Sunday, December 17, at 11 o'clock, he brought to the people of Mount Hermon church his first sermon since Conference. He used as his message the Christmas lesson: Luke 2: "Let us go now to Bethlehem and see." The sermon was both interesting and instructive. He insisted that we think more about Christmas and let it be the means by which we are drawn closer to God. Communion service was observed with a large number witnessing for Jesus Christ.

Our Sunday school seems to be going very nicely. Mr. Frank Holt was re-elected as Sunday school superintendent. We are planning to have a Christmas program in the church Saturday, December 23, at 6 o'clock. All are invited to attend this service.

In the Ladies' Auxiliary we are trying to do our part in helping the church. We held our Thanksgiving offering service in November. The December meeting was held in the home of Mrs. W. M. Coble. Very good attendance and much interest was shown.

The Christian Endeavor Society is well attended by the majority of the young people in this community. Miss Nina Crabtree is the new president.

The first quarterly conference of Mount Hermon charge was held at Mount Hermon church Saturday, December 9, at 2 o'clock.

We are planning to carry a picnic dinner and go to the parsonage on Wednesday, following Christmas. The object of this gathering is to improve the grounds around the parsonage and do some indoor work on the building.

Wishing to all a Merry Christmas.

MRS. L. P. HOLT, Reporter.

Hope Church.—We feel very grateful that Annual Conference saw fit to return our pastor, Rev. H. L. Isley, for another year. Rev. and Mrs. Isley have done splendid work here, and it is a pleasure to have them back again. He has filled every appointment for the new year and has delivered inspiring sermons. Connected with the service Sunday evening directed by Mrs. F. C. McDowell, the choir and different Sunday school classes sang Christmas carols. Special collection was taken Sunday morning for the annual Christmas treat.

The first quarterly conference was well attended at Siler City December 13th; forward steps were taken.

Rev. C. G. Isley and mother, of Lexington, our former pastor, visited members in Bonlee on Thanksgiving day. We were very glad to see them and always give them a hearty welcome when they return to our town.

We are sorry to know Mr. J. L. and Charlie Fields are patients in the hospital at this time. We wish for them a speedy recovery.

Other members of our church who have been sick are improving.

Shiloh.—On Sunday, December 17, Rev. C. E. Ridge delivered his second message to a most attentive congregation at Shiloh church. Pastor Ridge chose as his text Matt. 2:2: "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? For we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship Him." The pastor brought to us the beautiful Christmas story, using as his subject "Where is the King of the Jews?" This message is applied to the world today. The world is crying out "Where is Jesus?" and it is only through His followers that the question can be answered because "In Him we live and move, and have our being;" then we should let the light of Jesus Christ shine so plainly in our lives that the world can see Jesus in us.

The birth of the child Jesus was prophesied by Isaiah 500 years before the birth in Bethlehem. When we think of the coming of Jesus we may ask the question, "What was the object of His advent into this world?" His earthly pilgrimage was not a pleasure trip, not for investigation, but He came to prove God's love to mankind and to give His life a ransom for the sins of the world.

Sunday evening, December 24, at 6:30 o'clock Shiloh C. E. Society will present their Christmas program, after which presents will be distributed.

The fifth Sunday in December has been set aside as District Rally Day for Shiloh and the charges in this district, which include Spencer, State Street, First, Lexington, and others. The Rally will be held at Shiloh, with preaching at the 11 o'cock hour by our Conference president, Dr. R. M. Andrews. We hope to have a good attendance from all churches in this district.

We are sorry to note the illness of one of our Sunday school members, Mr. P. C. Leonard. Mr. Leonard does not seem to improve very much.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lanning has been saddened by the passing of little five-year-old Nellie, the baby girl, and youngest of 12 living children. Nell had been sick with scarlet fever for nearly two weeks. In Matt. 18:10 we read "Despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in Heaven the angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in Heaven." Saturday morning Nell's angel called for her so softly that none but she could hear and at 12:15 she silently went away. Such a large place did this little girl have in the hearts of her parents and 11 brothers and sisters that her departure has left them well nigh heartbroken and has robbed the Christmas season of its radiant joy. One little stocking that would have been hung for Santa to fill will now be lovingly tucked away into the chest of cherished things, for this Christmas Nell will be in the very presence of the Babe of Bethlehem. But for all those who love her so devotedly she will always abide in the most sacred place in our hearts, in the room of precious memories. The funeral was held Sunday, December 17, at 2 p. m., and the little body was laid to rest beneath a mound of beautiful flowers. All that loving hands and medical skill could do was done, but every effort was in vain. May we not say with David "Can I bring her back again? I shall go to her, she shall not return to me."

MRS. W. L. SHOAF,
MRS. RAYMOND FRITTS,
MISS BLANCHE SINK.

Kannapolis.—Our attendance is increasing rapidly, I am glad to note, in Sunday school and church service, but there are still some vacant spaces that could easily be filled. Bro. Morris has been bringing us some very inspiring messages during his stay with us. We are sure by the Lord's help he can prove (and is proving) a blessing to many that come his way and to the community in which we live. We are truly thankful that he was sent our way and we trust that as this is his first work we may prove a blessing and be of some help in his faith of the future. A very beautiful service was enjoyed Sunday, December 17. After the sermon the quartet, Mr. Ed Tilley, Mr. M. E. Marlow, Mr. R. T. Sides, and Mr. G. F. Coble, rendered a selection. At the evening worship Mrs. W. T. Kiser and Mr. R. T. Sides sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" as the prayer after the sermon.

We are indeed thankful and feel ourselves indebted to Mrs. W. T. Kiser and Mrs. C. B. McCommons for their faithful service in preparing and training the children and adults for the Christmas exercises. Under their direction, assisted by the pastor, there will be a program rendered by the children; also a Christmas tree and gifts will be distributed with the Sunday school treat on Saturday, December 23, at 7 o'clock. The public is cordially invited. On Sunday evening at 7 o'clock there will be a pageant presented, namely, "The Message of the Manger."

It is with much regret that we note that Mr. M. W. Henderson is indisposed with an attack of rheumatism. Hope for his speedy recovery.

Mr. E. H. Steele was missed at church Sunday on account of illness. Hope he is on the road to recovery.

On Sunday, December 24, the 11 o'clock service will be composed largely of Christmas carols.

MRS. X. E. GRAYSON, Reporter.

Concord.—Services were held Sunday, as usual. Our Sunday school is still showing a slight gain each Sunday. We had three hundred and 60 present. Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could continue to gain throughout the entire new year!

Our preaching services were well attended, both morning and night.

The young people are now working on their Christmas play, which will be presented Sunday night. We would like for all that can to visit us and see just what our young folk can do. We're proud of them and feel that readers of the Herald should know what a wide awake bunch of young people we have.

The first quarterly conference of the year was held Monday night. The church is in the best condition financially that it has been in recently.

We are glad to report that Mrs. Fred Sides, a faithful worker in our church, has returned home from the hospital and is doing well.

I want to correct a mistake I made in the last edition of the Herald. Our Thanksgiving play was given by the Juniors instead of the Intermediates. It was a slight mistake, but I feel that credit should be given where credit is due.

Mizpah, Haw River Circuit.—Rev. J. L. Trollinger is right on his job since Conference. The first appointment after Conference was mostly an explanation on finances of the church and Conference and other important matters.

The third Sunday morning service was exceptionally fine. In a very pleasing manner the pastor explained the meaning of frankincense and myrrh in connection with the birth of Christ and our individual lives.

We are so glad to have our pastor with us another year. Just at the time a preacher begins to understand his folks and has his work organized to the best advantage, and then move on to a new field, quite often results are disastrous.

Our Sunday school is giving a treat, but no program. A Christmas offering will be taken.

Wishing every charge in our Conference and our editor a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. REPORTER.

Winston, First.—On Tuesday night an informal reception was given in honor of Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Bates and their family at the church. Rev. R. A. Hunter, pastor of Maple Springs church, made the address of welcome, to which Dr. Bates graciously responded. Mr. B. K. Millaway, Sunday school superintendent, presided over this happy occasion. Songs and readings were included in the program. Readings by Misses Lucile Remmer, Marjorie Peterson, Caroline Sams, and Mary Starr Martin; Miss Ruth Braswell sang beautifully, accompanied by Miss Helen Voss at the piano. A social hour was enjoyed, during which refreshments were served by the Woman's Auxiliary.

First Church, Winston, and Dr. and Mrs. Bates are getting better acquainted, day by day. Sunday morning Mrs. Bates made a very impressive and interesting talk on 'Sharing." May every member share with her, her husband her family all the joys and happiness that it is possible to share. Dr. Bates' sermon at the morning worship was taken from Matthew 2, "The First Christmas." Many helpful and inspiring thoughts were passed on by Dr. Bates.

Miss Pearl Sapp is still confined to her home. We surely hope she'll be out and happy again before no time. May God bless her and help her on her road to recovery.

The Business Woman's Circle held their December meeting last Monday night at the home of Miss Pearl Sapp. The Christmas party, which is an annual event of the Circle, followed the business of the hour. Gifts were exchanged, contests, a Christmas tree and delightful Christmas refreshments were enjoyed.

A Christmas party was enjoyed by the Philathea class on Monday night of this week. Gifts were exchanged and a "sunny" time existed.

PAULINE BRANSON, Reporter.

First Church, High Point.—An enjoyable Christmas party, sponsored by the Board of Stewards, of which Arnold J. Koonce is chairman this year, was held last Wednesday evening in the assembly room, and despite the inclement weather, was well attended. Many amusing stunts were performed and several old-time games such as Follow the Leader, Fruit Basket, and others were enjoyed for about two hours, after which refreshments were served. It was a delightful get-acquainted party, and all in attendance had a jolly evening.

On Thursday evening the Woman's Auxiliary served a chicken-pie supper, which was liberally patronized by about 150 members and their friends. It was a delightful social occasion, several family parties and groups of friends enjoying the meal together. The menu was unusually palatable, and to Mrs. W. C. Ferree and her efficient corps of helpers belongs much credit for the success of this effort. The treasury was enriched by $55.00, which is considered quite good in view of the fact that several other denominations have recently served meals.

Church attendants Sunday morning were much pleased to receive bulletins, which were contributed by an individual member, and which add so much to the worship hour. After a beautiful prelude on the organ by Miss Beulah Moton, choir director, and a lovely anthem, "Glory to God in the Highest," by the choir, the duet being sung by Mrs. J. C. Whitesell and Miss Anne Robbins, the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, chose as his subject, "Yes and No," from the text in Matt. 5:37: "Let your communication be Yea, yea; Nay, nay." He declared that the size of a man or woman is not determined by their wealth, but by their ability to say yes and no at tht proper time. If Napoleon Bonaparte could have seen the wild waves leaping against St. Helena in his lonely exile, he would have said no to the temptation of his ambition. If Benedict Arnold could have foreseen the ignominy of his base treason to his country, he would doubtless have learned to say nay in time to redeem himself. If Kaiser Wilhelm could have had the courage to withstand evil ambitions, he would perhaps not now endure banishment from his native land and the bitter remorse of causing the loss of a million lives. David was forced to repentance for sin against his neighbor because he could not say no to his base passions. I have been led to speak on this subject because new leisure, new freedom for womanhood, the youth movement opens up such vast opportunities in this new day. When we say yes to the wooings of the spirit of God, it makes for happiness. Men and women who do not have the courage to say yes and no change like chameleons. Mr. Facing-Both-Ways of Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" is in the world today. Jesus Christ confronts us today: He stands at the door and knocks. He wants our lives and service. Let us have the courage to take a stand for right and truth, and get on God's side instead of wavering on the fence.

At the evening service the lovely cantata, "Yuletide Memories," by Wilson, was presented by the choir, and it was well rendered.

The C. E. meeting Monday evening will be held at the home of Mrs. T. T. Ferree, 300 Steele stret. Miss Annabel Thompson will be the leader, and Rev. E. Lester Ballard, formerly our assistant pastor, now of Mebane, will sing. After this meeting a social will be enjoyed at the home of Miss Thompson.

The Annual Christmas service for the Sunday school will be held Thursday evening. The committee in charge of this entertainment is Miss Anne Robbins, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, Mrs. Theodore Ballard, Misses Lucille Pickens and Louise Jennings. The Manger Scene will be depicted. There will be a Christmas tree and treat for the children, and carols will be sung by the different departments. An offering of an average of one dollar per member is being asked for the building fund.

The quarterly conference ordered the creation of the office of church secretary, whose duties will be general office work, assistance to the board of stewards and some calling under direction of the pastor. This new office, as soon as filled, should mark a forward step in our work.

Much sympathy is extended to one of our highly esteemed members, Mrs. O. D. McPherson, Woodrow Avenue, in the loss by death of her brother, Mr. John D. Holt, of Lexington, which occurred at his home there on Sunday morning, December 10, following a long illness. He was a well-known citizen, 77 years of age, a native of Alamance County. He moved to Lexington when a young man, and for many years held a responsible position with the Wennonah Cotton Mills. He was married twice, and is survived by the widow and a son, J. D. Holt, Jr., of Lexington, and a daughter, Mrs. H. W. Brown, of Linwood. Funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home on West Eighth Ave., by Rev. Louis S. Gaines, pastor of the First Baptist church, assisted by Dr. T. M. Johnson. Burial was made in the cemetery at Jersey church. Mr. Holt belonged to the Junior Order and the Knights of Pythias.

On the honor roll of the local high school as released by Principal Henry Grady Owens appear the names of the following boys and girls of First Church: Seniors, Alson Gray,

Vera York; Juniors, Virginia Dixon, Ruth Lee, and Allen Thacker; Sophomores, Y. S. Cecil, Mary Elizabeth Farmer, Mildred Free, Joe Gray, Reginald Hinshaw, Raymond York; Freshmen, Pauline Kennett, Marie Koonce, Burke Koonce, Jack Lee.

High Point College will close for the Christmas holidays Tuesday at 1 p. m. and will reopen January 2. The city schools closed Friday, December 15, and will resume work on New Year's Day.

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker had the misfortune to sprain her ankle while walking in the dark Friday night, but her friends are pleased to learn that she was able to be out Monday. Her grand-daughter, Miss Margaret Louise White, will drive her to Greensboro Tuesday where she will spend the holidays with her daughter and family.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett left Monday morning for Tampa, Fla., whre she will spend several weeks with her daughter, Mrs. H. S. Meredith. She was accompanied by her grandson, Mangum Harrell. They are making the trip by automobile.

Many friends were pleased to see Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard, of Mebane, here Thursday evening.

Mrs. Wade Marlette is recovering nicely from an operation for removal of tonsils at Guilford General Hospital last Saturday.

Mrs. Ruth Maxfield, member of the faculty of Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md., and bright young son, Henry Southwick Maxfield, student at McDonough Military School, arrived last Saturday to be the guests of Miss Dorothy Rankin for a week, and will leave next Saturday for New York to spend Christmas.

Miss Naomi Dawson and brother, a student of High Point College, will go to Salisbury, Md., for the Christmas holidays.

Here's hoping that the Editor of the Herald and all his helpers may enjoy a happy Christmas, and may peace and good will rule throughout the nation.

Kernersville Charge.—From Friendship Station to Kernersville. After three years at Friendship, we now are on our new charge at Kernersville, and all the spare time we have we use thinking about the past experiences at Friendship, many of which were helpful to us, and we shall never forget the loyalty and fine friendship of many of the finest Methodist Protestants in North Carolina. I shall always remember our friends there. Now we are among a different congregation; however, we can already see the evidences of the same kind of friendship and loyalty that we have seen elsewhere. We Methodist Protestant preachers that have been in the pastorate for 20 or 30 years are soon able to see the good and the bad in any community we are assigned to serve in.

We have already preached at all the churches on this charge and have been well received. The congregations have been larger than usual, the people say. We see many things that cause us to think that this is a good charge; and we have many reasons for believing that we are going to have a successful pastorate here. We have one among the best parsonages in our entire Conference. We live in Kernersville, a fine little town, and have almost every convenience that any modern city can offer. The kindness of the folks began the first day we came. We arrived soon after 11 a. m., and at noon we had a good dinner on the table, which was prepared and presented to us by the Linvilles. We have not yet learned their different names, but we have learned of their kindness and loyalty to their church and pastor.

Kernersville church will be given special attention. A mid-week prayer meeting and a choir practice each week has been announced.

We have announced our first quarterly conference to be held at Kernersville church on Saturday, January 6th, at 2 p. m.

Wishing the Herald and all its readers a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

O. B. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

Kernersville, N. C., P. O. Box 104.

First Church, Lexington.—Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, filled his regular appointment Sunday morning, giving us another good sermon, entitled, "The Other Side of Life." The two sides of life, he said, are the selfish side and the godly side. A large and attentive congregation was present for this service.

On Sunday evening Mr. Isley chose as a subject, "Falling Away," and as a text I Cor. 10:13: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man."

We are delighted to welcome as members of our church Rev. J. C. Russell, Mrs. J. C. Russell, Mrs. O. K. Russell, and Mrs. L. B. Koontz.

The first quarterly conference for First church and Mt. Carmel was held December 18 at First Church. Dr. Andrews was present and conducted our conference. All reports were good. The pastor's salary and other expenses were reported paid to date. First Church has also paid some on the Conference claims. The conference voted to accept the budget as presented by Dr. Andrews. Rev. C. E. Ridge was a visitor at the conference.

On December 10 from 2 until 3 o'clock Prof. B. F. Sink presented an inspiring musical program to an audience that filled the church and Sunday school auditorium.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its December meeting in the home of our pastor on December 15. After the business hour gifts were taken from the Christmas tree and presented, after which the hostess served delicious refreshments to 14 members and several visitors.

The Christmas program at First Church will be presented December 23 at 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. Glenn Brown is very ill at his home on South Main street.

Wishing all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

MARGARET LEA SWINK, Reporter.

Asheboro.—The Herald has not had a report from us since Conference, although we have been very busy. A large number of our people attended one or more days of Conference. Our church was very proud of our delegate, Mr. W. F. Redding, Jr., having been elected and serving so faithfully on the stationing committee, and everyone is happy that Rev. and Mrs. Stubbins were returned to us for another year. We are hoping and expecting to do greater things this new year than in the past.

The new officers of the Sunday school and church were installed before Conference and have started their work with much zeal and enthusiasm. Mr. C. E. Bulla was elected general superintendent of the Sunday school and Miss Bertha Presnell, assistant, with superintendents of the various departments. Reporter to the Herald was re-elected and will endeavor to give reports of interest from time to time.

Due to illness of our pastor, Rev. N. M. Harrison filled the pulpit the first Sunday of the new year, preaching a very appropriate sermon.

The mother of Mr. Stubbins has been very ill in Hillsboro, but is somewhat improved at this time.

The Workers' Council recently had a very interesting meeting in the social room of the church. The Philathea class held the November meeting at the home of Mrs. N. M. Harrison, with a large attendance. After adjournment the members went to the new home of Mrs. Earl Henley (nee Miss Nan Lowdermilk) a recent bride, and surprised her with a "shower" of many useful and beautiful gifts. The December meeting of the class was held in the home of Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr. This was a very interesting meeting. Mrs. L. F. Ross, the retiring president, gave a splendid report of the year's activties, which revealed much had been accomplished under her leadership and the fine co-operation of the members. Mrs. Redding was elected president for the new year.

The class voted to send an appropriate gift to the inmates of Bethel Home at Christmas.

The Circle meetings were held in the various homes of the members with good attendance and interesting meetings this month. Circle No. 2, with Mrs. Clyde Hendrix, chairman, reported in their meeting the apportionment of the Circle met with some over, and still working. This Circle is the first to pay out this missionary year.

The Sunday school township institute was held in our church Sunday afternoon and evening of December 10th. The out-of-town speakers were Miss Daisy Magee, of Salisbury; Rev. Shuford Peeler, general secretary of the N. C. Sunday School Association, and Dr. P. E. Lindley, of High Point College.

Randolph County's Young People's Conference was in session in our church on Monday, December 4th, closing on Monday evening with a banquet session in the social room of the church served to 84 people by the Philathea class. Rev. N. M. Harrison was one of the speakers at this session.

On Tuesday evening the Woman's Auxiliary held the Christmas meeting in the social room. After an interesting program and business was disposed of for the quarter, delicious refreshments were served by Circle No. 2, who were hostesses at this time.

The choir has been very busy for the last weeks. On Sunday morning, December 10th, a beautiful Christmas anthem was given; also last Sunday morning. At the evening hour, "A Song in the Air," a Christmas story, was read by Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr., and interspersed with music by the choir. Christmas anthems will also be given next Sunday.

Last Sunday morning we were glad to receive into church membership Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Linthicum, coming from the Baptist and Presbyterian churches.

The church sympathizes with Mrs. John Swaim and family in the death of her brother, Wesley Curtis, of Greensboro, whose death was in Duke Hospital, Durham, after an operation. The funeral was held at Gray's Chapel

HERALD SUBSCRIPTION QUOTAS, 1933-34

Dear Friends of the Herald:

We are presenting this week the quotas as worked out by Bro. Bates. You will notice they are practically the same as last year. While presenting these quotas we want to remind you also that this is the Fortieth Year of the Herald and it makes Forty Years of hard work for Dr. McCulloch, its Editor. The Herald has wandered in the wilderness of INADEQUATE SUPPORT long enough. Let it now come up into the promised land of plenty. If every charge will raise its quota and subsidy fund, then the Herald will be on easy street.

Next time I want to say something about who should be Herald Agents.

J. E. PRITCHARD,
For the Committee.

(The following table shows only the quotas for the various churches and charges. A complete listing of all money received for subscriptions and subsidy since Annual Conference will appear in the next issue of the Herald.)

IN HONOR OF DR. C. E. FORLINES

The program is not definitely arranged as yet; however, we are giving this further information. We are planning a banquet for Saturday night, January 13th. The banquet will be in the hut of First Church, Burlington. The price per plate will be very reasonable. Tickets will be issued at a later date. On Sunday, January 14th, Rev. F. L. Gibbs will preach in First Church, Burlington, at the 11 o'clock hour. In the afternoon at 2:30 in the Methodist Protestant Church at Belmont (five miles south of Burlington) a special service will be held. A sketch of Dr. Forlines' life will be read; special music by singers from High Point College; talk by Rev. T. J. Whitehead; and an address by Dr. Forlines. Then at 7:30 in the evening another special service will be held in First Church, Burlington. We are planning to have an address by Dr. Forlines at this service also; music by the High Point College group; and perhaps a re-reading of the sketch of Dr. Forlines' life. This is the tentative program. We are asking the co-operation of all our people to the end that this occasion may be gloriously successful.

FRED W. PASCHALL.

church on Wednesday afternoon, December 13.

We were sorry to lose Rev. Q. L. Joyner and family from the Richland Charge, but welcome Rev. R. L. Hethcox and family in our midst. We were especially glad to have Mr. Walter Hethcox assist the choir in the Christmas music.

Best Christmas wishes to the Herald.

REPORTER.

Friendship, Haw River Charge.—We are very glad to have Rev. J. L. Trollinger and family back with us for another Conference year. Bro. Trollinger has already served the church and people very faithfully and successfully for the past five years, and we are looking forward to a better and more successful year this year. Let us assure Bro. Trollinger of our prayers and cooperation in the church work toward making this Conference year a better one.

On the last third Sunday morning our pastor brought to us the message, "The True Spirit of Christmas" and that it should give to everyone a loyal devotion and a new consecration to all things spiritual. The service was largely attended.

We are having a good attendance at Sunday school and everyone seems interested.

The Christian Endeavor gave a music program of Christmas carols at the regular six o'clock service at the church last Sunday night. The C. E. Society and Sunday school will give the regular Christmas tree and program at the church Sunday night, December 4, at 6 o'clock. The public is cordially invited.

With best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to the Herald and its readers.
